Building Industry Shut

VANCOUVER — An eleventh-hour attempt to settle a 10-minute lunch break issue failed Friday, and today 40,000 are out of work in the construction industry.

Construction Labor Relations Association took lockout action against 15 trade unions after a meeting between C L R A President Chuck McVeigh and Les Andrews of the plumbers union failed to settle the issues of extra time for hot lunches and on-site parking.

The lockout was instituted at 4 p.m. Friday in response to the strike by a plumbers union local against 15 Vancouver-area contractors.

The CLRA lockout is the second this year. The industry was idled for 37 days and the action ended Aug. 4 following a report by industrial inquiry commissioner Jim Kinnaird.

Earlier Friday in Victoria, a statement from the department of labor said that no long-term government action in the construction industry dispute was expected until Labor Minister Allan Williams returns from a four-week trip to England at the end of the month.

KISSINGER TALKS UPSTAGED

Black War Chiefs Gather at Summit

By MURREY MARDER
Washington Post

LONDON — Africa's black leaders and guerrilla warfare chiefs have decided unexpectedly to hold their own summit conference this weekend in Tanzania while U.S. Secretary of State Henry Kissinger is meeting in Switzerland with South African Prime Minister John Vorster.

This sudden move by African nationalists to consolidate their strategy may either mesh with or frustrate Kissinger's strategy, American sources said. Because of the uncertainty of what the outcome will be, Kissinger now may abort his tentative plan to go on to Africa after his talks with Vorster, and return to Washington on Tuesday to await the consequences of the African summit.

The black African action already has altered the extremely complex Kissinger strategy by injecting into it at a premature stage some of the most militant forces in black Africa which are supported by the Soviet Union and Cuba.

The African summit, which now tends to overshadow the Kissinger-Vorster talks in Zurich, was called by Tanzanian President Julius Nyerere to be held in Dar-es-Salaam on Sunday and Monday. Nyerere and Zambian President Kenneth Kaunda are the two key black moderate leaders on whom Kissinger is counting to support his own diplomatic efforts to head off major escalation of the guerrilla wars in Rhodesia and Namibia. But Nyerere and Kaunda also seek to avoid being outflanked in Africa by the militants.

Invited to the Dar-es-Salaam summit, as American diplomats understand it, in addition to Nyerere and Kaunda, are the presidents of Mozambique, Botswana and Angola, plus the leaders of all the major Rhodesian and Namibian liberation and guerrilla movements.

The expected presence of Angola in the meeting is the sharpest surprise for the United States. Angolan President Agustinho Neto is backed by the Soviet Union and Cuba; and Angola is now being char-

Milk Hike Tuesday

VANCOUVER (CP) — The price of milk in British Columbia will rise one cent a quart on Tuesday.

Elmer Daum, chairman of the British Columbia Milk Board, said Friday the price of hay has increased $12 a ton since May, mainly because of the wet summer, and the total milk formula price index, which determines what farmers are paid for Class 1 milk, has gone up $4 since May.

Tighter Laws On Loan Rates

OTTAWA (CP) — The federal government will introduce legislation soon to regulate and standardize the calculation, presentation and advertising of interest rates, Consumer Affairs Minister Bryce Mackasey announced Friday.

Departmental spokesmen said the legislation, expected for some time, will likely be outlined in the speech from the throne this fall after Parliament resumes.

Mackasey said in a statement the proposed legislation would also provide tough penalties for loansharking and "unscrupulous lending and debt collection practices."

Objective of the new legislation would be to force lending institutions to be more specific and accurate in their statements of interest on deposits and loans.

Through computers it is now possible to calculate interest on savings deposits on short periods of time, such as a few days or even a daily basis, rather than on the minimum monthly balance in accounts as at present.

Interest is now paid out on a monthly, quarterly and six-month basis.

Government officials have said in the past that the legislation would force banks and similar insitutions to work out interest on a daily basis.

"There is much confusion and unfairness in the present system which results in many Canadians paying unnecessary amounts in interest on their debts and receiving insufficient amounts on their savings," Mackasey said.

"The proposed legislation will enable consumers to shop wisely for credit bargains and for maximum returns on their deposits in banks and other institutions, because all will know precisely what the return on their deposits is and how it is calculated," he added.

Bank spokesmen have complained that a change in interest claculation methods would add to bank costs and might have to be countered by higher charges on loans.

Bennett To Air Finances

Premier Bill Bennett will give a state-of-the-province message next month covering the first half of the current fiscal year.

Bennett made a similar statement on province-wide television Feb. 20 after the national accounting firm of Clarkson Gordon had conducted a financial review of the province's finances.

Bennett said Friday next month's statement will probably be more understandable to the average British Columbian and will include this year's second quarterly financial report.

He also promised not to raise taxes in B.C. next year.

"Although other provinces are all talking about raising taxes, we won't be building large deficits. We won't be operating beyond our ability to pay," he said. The premier also said B.C.'s businesses and workers must be prepared to produce more if they want to solve the province's unemployment crisis.

Workers, organized and unorganized, must expect to earn their wages, while businesses must drop any hopes of making exorbitant profits.

Big Fish Kill In Esquimalt

Federal fisheries department officials are investigating a "massive" herring fish-kill which surfaced at the mouth of Esquimalt Harbor Friday afternoon.

Witnesses said thousands of bloated herring surfaced after an American nuclear sub, the USS Pintado, plied into the harbor.

PARIS — The financial director of the giant French aircraft firm Dassault has disappeared — along with nearly $1.8 million in company funds, according to a police file released Friday night.

Investigators think the disappearance of Dassault director Herve de Vathaire two months ago may be linked to that of a young French adventurer, Jean Kay, which could give the case political overtones. Kay was reported to have been active in a number of guerrilla causes.

On July 8 De Vathaire called at the group's Paris bank near the Arc de Triomphe asking to withdraw some $1.8 million in francs. The bank staff asked for an hour to prepare the cash. De Vathaire left, came back an hour later and took the cash.

LIFETIME FOR MONTY NETS MEASLY $180

BENTLEY, England (UPI) — Five months after his death, the memory of Field Marshal Bernard Montgomery, Viscount of Alamein, has soured in his home village.

According to details of his will disclosed Friday, the 88-year-old hero of the pivotal Second World War battle of El Alamein left $270,000, of which $180 went to each of the five members of the Cox family who have spent their entire working lives in his service. The rest went to his son David.

Michael Cox, 31, Monty's chauffeur, on hearing the family was sharing $900, said, "Monty never gave more than he had to. He was a mean man with his money.

"The 100 pounds ($180) is a paltry sum for almost a lifetime's work," he said. "It will pay for a few rounds of beer."

NEWS BRIEFS

CRASH KILLS 68

PONTA DELGADA, Azores (AP) — A Venezuelan air force transport plane carrying a Caracas University choir crashed in the hurricane-lashed Azores islands and all 68 persons aboard were killed, rescue officials said today.

Safeway Standstill

VANCOUVER (CP) — Canada Safeway Ltd. officials reported no progress Friday in talks aimed at ending a shutdown affecting about 5,300 employees at wholesale outlets and 93 stores in British Columbia. The company and representatives of the Retail, Wholesale and Department Store Union met with independent labour consultant Clive McKee. Talks were to continue Tuesday.

Rollback Accord

VANCOUVER (CP) — Two British Columbia Railway unions have agreed to accept a federal Anti-Inflation Board wage rollback and cash payback pending an appeal to the board, the company announced Friday.

Mill Burns Down

KAMLOOPS (CP) — A fire early Friday destroyed the Capistinsky mill operation at Blue River about 120 miles northeast of here. Damage was estmated at $1 million.

Blaze Averted

RICHMOND (CP) — Fire Chief B. M. Byrne said Friday that damage to a high school here was limited to about $500 because two girls on their way home from a community centre alerted his departmen after noticing flames outside a doorway.

WATERSKIERS HITCH MARGUERITE RIDE

Imagine yourself peering over the stern of the Princess Marguerite as it sails from Seattle to Victoria and seeing three waterskiers happily traversing the 369-foot ship's large wakes.

It happened late last month, according to the Seattle Times and probably to the chagrin of crew members aboard, who couldn't have done much about the skiers even if they had wanted to.

The adventure, which lasted only 15 minutes, took weeks of planning by 13 persons plus the three skiers. It occurred Aug. 21 after an attempt five weeks earlier had failed.

As the Princess left Seattle, three of the "co-conspirators" were aboard. Two jet boats idled among the small fishing boats near Port Townsend.

As the ship headed north at a 19-knot clip, a 700-foot line was tossed overboard. A plate was inserted into a porthole with the rope attached on the outside. A locking device on the plate was activated to prevent the line from being cut by crewmen, as it had on a prior attempt.

The jet boats sped from the fishing area and picked up the trailing line. While passengers on the ship cheered and waved, the three skiers skied.

Then an airplane flew to Victoria to pick up the three young men who threw the line off the ship.

Members of the "conspiracy" want to remain anonymous, they say, not because they think they broke any laws, but because they want to avoid any official harrassment.

Last summer, one of the young men water-skied for two miles behind the Hyak, one of Washington state's jumbo ferries. A state ferry official called it an "extremely dangerous stunt."

This year, the skiers, who say they "ski every day at Lake Sammamish" north of Seattle, decided to try the Marguerite. The first attempt failed when a tow rope tangled and a crew member on the ship cut the line.

Davis Mistaken—Dalfen

A second member of a three-man steering committee that Transport Minister Jack Davis has said told him to reject a lengthy study on British Columbia Ferries denied Friday he recommended rejection.

C. M. Dalfen, former deputy minister of transport and communications, said from Ottawa Friday he may have criticized certain areas of the study, but he did not recommend its rejection.

Dalfen, who now works for the Canadian Radio-television Commission, said he "might well have said something to Davis that he might have mistaken as a rejection, but I certainly didn't tell him to repudiate it."

Dalfen, along with A. D. Crerar, former director of the environment and land use committee and Charles Gallagher, general manager of B.C. Ferries, made up the steering committee to which research staff reported.

Davis, blasted by opposition leader Dave Barrett on Wednesday for ignoring the report, said he'd basically disregarded the study because the steering committee had told him it was superficial and had advised its rejection.

Crerar, now in Ottawa on a two-year loan to the federal government, Thursday denied rejecting the study that was commissioned last year by the New Democratic Party.

The report was completed in January and released by Barrett on Wednesday.

Dalfen said because the study was done by Crerar's

TORNADO FLIPS MOBILE HOMES

PRINCE GEORGE (CP) — Strong, tornado-like winds overturned two mobile homes and a car among other things as it struck an area about eight miles north of here Friday night.

The freak wind, which lasted about three minutes, also uprooted trees and overturned a boat.

Prince George airport said a pilot reported at the time of the freak wind that visibility was nil and he was experiencing strong turbulence.

The strong wind cut a swath about 400 feet. No one was hurt.

Viking Tilted

Times News Services

PASADENA, Calif. — The first pictures of the Martian Plains of Utopia were transmitted back to Earth early today from a tilted Viking 2 lander showing a very rocky surface stretching to the horizon. The photos were delayed for more than nine hours by communications problems.

They indicated the lander was sitting on a 10-degree slope or had put down with a footpad on a large rock, mission control said.

The black and white television images scanned across the dust in front of the lander to prove the Viking robot's cameras were in good working order. An hour earlier, the landen had started beaming back engineering data.

The craft had landed amid a partial radio blackout that delayed the sending of its initial photographs.

Catholic Wedding Denied Pair

MONTREAL (CP) — A 24-year-old Montreal hairdresser has been told by her parish priest she is "unfit" to be married in the Roman Catholic church because she has been living with her boyfriend.

Lise Dumaine, who has known her boyfriend for seven years and lived with him for two said recently that during an interview to finalize her wedding arrangements, Rev. Procul Leveille discovered that Miss Dumaine and her fiance, Jacques Boily, 28, had the same address.

Miss Dumaine said the priest was horrified.

"He told me I was impure and deflowered and announced he would not marry us unless I agreed to move out of the apartment and live alone and celibate for six months," she said.

"He said I was breaking church law and because of that I was no longer a Catholic. If I insisted on marrying before the six months of purification, I should go to the Palais de Justice for a civil ceremony."

Both Miss Dumaine and Boily consider themselves practising Catholics and refuse to accept that they are unfit for a Catholic marriage ceremony.

"I was brought up a Catholic," she said. "I believe in God and I go to church, though not every Sunday.

"I want to marry, have children, and bring them up as Catholics."

Miss Dumaine said the situation is ridiculous.

"This is 1976, not the Middle Ages. Where, tell me, can you find a girl who is not living with her boyfriend?"

Father Leveille, away at a Sulpician retreat, said in a telephone interview that living together outside of marriage is a practice that cannot be condoned.

"The Pope made that quite clear six months ago when he condemned homosexuality, masturbation and trial marriage," he said.

"Priests should not marry couples who cohabit."

UNEASY RIDERS

RENO (UPI) — Mrs. James Getty knew the man in the driver's seat of their camper wasn't her husband. He was sleeping beside her in the back of the van.

Mrs. Getty screamed.

The thief, who had apparently not checked the sleeping section, slammed on the brakes, jumped to the pavement and ran off.

Wagner Quits 'on Good Terms'

OTTAWA (CP) — Claude Wagner, Conservative MP for St. Hyacinthe and runner-up to Opposition Leader Joe Clark during the party's leadership race last February, has resigned his job as head of the party's powerful committee of chairmen.

Clark said in a statement that Wagner wants to spend more time concentrating on his duties as external affairs critic.

Aides said the two men are on good terms and that Wagner's decision reflected no major disagreements.

Wagner has felt restricted by his work as head of the committee which is made up of leading Conservative critics, an aide said.

As chairman, he had been able to express views that opposed those of other committee members. And the job had taken much of the time he would rather spend cultivating diplomatic ties, working for the party in Quebec and preparing for the day when he might be external affairs minister.

Clark will take over from Wagner and will act as chairman when the group meets Sept. 27-28 to prepare for the Oct. 12 opening of Parliament.

The group will report to a meeting of all Conservative MPs Oct. 3-4.

Wagner has played a leading role in the Conservative party since he narrowly lost to Clark last February.

Though relations between the two men were strained for a time after the contest, a spokesman for Wagner said they now have a steady working relationship.

Wagner has little taste for parliamentary strategy planning — a major aspect of the committee chairman's job — and has felt burdened by his responsibilities as the party's leading spokesman in Quebec.

The announcement of Wagner's resignation, and Clarks' assumption of the job of chairman of committee chairmen, was made on the eve of a European visit by a Conservative delegation including Clark, Wagner and their wives.

Black Summit In Tanzania

acterized on the U.S. side as "the wild card" in the black summit.

With major military assistance by the Soviet Union, and the support of an estimated 15,000 Cuban troops, most of which remain in Angola, Neto's Popular Movement for the Liberation of Angola last February defeated Angolan factions backed by the United States and South Africa. Kissinger plunged into African diplomacy to prevent further Soviet-Cuban style penetrations.

In the Kissinger-Vorster talks in Zurich, which will be held, as scheduled, from today to Monday, Kissinger hoped to reach agreement with Vorster on a bargain through which South Africa would help to put pressure on the white minority regime of Rhodesian Prime Minister Ian Smith to bow to majority rule for Rhodesia's blacks.

In return, an American-British plan would provide financial guarantees for up to $1.5 billion to $2 billion to Rhodesia's white settlers who would have to turn over property to the blacks, or who choose to leave Rhodesia. South Africa, among other things, would be buying time for its own survival against the rising storm of protest against its apartheid racial system.

American sources told newsmen aboard Kissinger's plane that they are hopeful, nevertheless, that the black leaders' awareness that collapse of diplomacy will certainly mean massive warfare throughout southern Africa, somehow will induce moderation.

Kissinger spent nearly two hours today in London discussing African affairs with British Foreign Secretary Anthony Crosland and Ted Rowlands, a British minister of state responsible for African affairs. Rowlands returned from an African tour.

"If there is no progress, violence will escalate throughout southern Africa," Kissinger told reporters here before he left for Zurich.

(In South Africa today riot police fired volleys of teargas to scatter mulatto demonstrators 420 miles east of Cape Town, but this city was generally calm after three consecutive days of rioting.

(Prime Minister Vorster's wife, Tini, was caught in a teargas-filled shopping centre Friday as police outside battled thousands of mulatto rioters in downtown Cape Town, police said. She was not hurt.

(Police flew reinforcements from Johannesburg to Cape Town to bolster local units trying to prevent a recurrence of the flareups this weekend.

(In the demonstration today in Uitenhage, witnesses said about 100 demonstrators gathered on a public square with placards demanding an end to apartheid and the release of an imprisoned mulatto political leader.

(Police with bullhorns told whites to get off the streets, sealed off traffic in the area and dispersed the demonstrators with teargas before a protest march could gain momentum.

Flowers Blow Up

LARGO, Fla. (AP) — A housewife was admitted to hospital Friday after a floral arrangment delivered to her door exploded, police said. Dorothy Wheeler, 32, lost the tip of a finger, suffered cuts on her face and legs and had fragments of glass and other debris in her eye, a hospital official said.

DAVIS WRONG -DALFEN

department, he could be expected to back it.

Dalfen said that although neither he nor Gallagher had rejected it, they asked that certain areas of the report be refined.

Dalfen said he felt Davis had ignored the study because it had been commissioned by the NDP.

"I think its wrong for Barrett to use it as an argument that fares shouldn't have gone up 100 per cent, but I disagree with Davis, too when he says he was told to reject it," Dalfen said.

He said the study was meant to give the transport department a clear indication of the impact of proposed new terminals at Iona and Gabriola islands but was not a basis for pricing.

Barrett said that the study recommended that fares not be raised more than 50 per cent but Dalfen said that wasn't accurate.

"Due to a lack of historic data, demand forecasts in the study could only be attempted for an increase in fares of 50 per cent," the study states. The Social Credit government increased ferry rates 100 per cent June 1.

Gallagher is on holidays and could not be reached for comment.

Firebomb Plot Foiled in Dublin

DUBLIN (Reuter) — Irish republic police say they may have foiled a guerrilla plot to devastate areas of central Dublin with fire-bombs.

Police found large quantities of fire-bombs in a house here in raids Friday. One report put the number of bombs at 200.

Five people were arrested during the raids but one was later released.

Three men and a woman were being held to appear before a special criminal court which sits without a jury and hears charges connected with activities of the outlawed Irish Republican Army (IRA).

Empty bars and movie theatres in Dublin suffered a fire-bomb blitz Monday. Damage was estimated $1.77 million. No one was injured.

Best Is Back With Fast Goal

LONDON (Reuter) — George Best dipped into his bag of tricks to score after 90 seconds in a magical return to soccer's English League today.

Best, 29, once one of the most spectacularly-gifted forwards in modern soccer, went to Los Angeles Aztecs in the United States after his indiscretions off the pitch blighted his career in England.

But his temperamental talent was on show again today with Second Division Fulham against Bristol Rovers when he played his first English League match in more than 2½ years, apart from three guest appearances in the Fourth Division last year.

His swerving shot from the edge of the penalty area gave Fulham a 1-0 win—its first of the season—in a match in which Best was backed up by two other stars just back from the U.S., former England pair Rodney Marsh and Bobby Moore.

the weather

A front extends in a southwest to northeast line over northern Vancouver Island and the central interior. Disturbances rippling along this front from the Pacific sent surges of rain into these regions from time to time overnight. This activity is expected to continue as the front moves slowly southward into southern B.C. today and tonight. Behind the system cool unsettled air will give rise to mainly cloudy skies and occasional showers on Sunday. Daytime temperatures will range from about 15 degrees in northern regions to low twenties in the southern interior.

Detective Tailed Sommers—WAC

VANCOUVER (CP) — Former premier W.A.C. Bennett supported one of his cabinet ministers accused of being a crook in 1955 because of a report of a private detective, the Sun says in a copyright story.

The evening newspaper says Bennett, premier of B.C. from 1952 to 1972, said in a recent interview at his Kelowna home that the provincial Social Credit League hired a private detective — "the best in Vancouver" — to check out former lands and forest minister Robert Sommers when the charges were raised by opposition parties in the legislature.

The Sun says Sommers was cleared by the detective and Bennett supported his minister until he was convicted in November, 1958, and sentenced to five years in prison for bribery, and conspiracy in the handling of forest management licences.

Sommers, described by Mr. Justice J. O. Wilson in B.C. Supreme Court as a "scoundrel who befouled the political and moral atmosphere for years," served two years and four months of his sentence before being paroled in July, 1961.

He attempted to win the Social Credit nomination in his old constituency of Trail in 1969, but was defeated by then Education minister Donald Brothers.

Bennett said that he believes Sommers was more stupid than dishonest and "he's an honorable man."

The former premier, who will be 76 Monday, said the lowest point of his career was when "our government got into difficulty on the lumber industry. And my minister, Sommers."

He said he wouldn't have handled the situation any differently despite strong criticism.

Bennett, whose son Bill, now is premier of B.C., said the detective who investigated Sommers reported "there was nothing to it."

"And that's the reason I didn't think there was anything to it," he said. "And I don't think there was much to it . . . I think he was stupid.

"His daughter was getting married and he needed some carpets or something. And some of his friends made some available to him.

"I think he intended to pay for them in the end and I'm sure he did. He was an honorable man. He was my best debater."

17 CHEQUES BOUNCE

In two days this week, Victoria provincial court learned Friday, a 19-year-old Port Angeles woman wrote 17 worthless cheques to defraud five Victoria businesses of a total of more than $1,000.

Dianna Frances Wolf gave an explanation to Judge Blake Allan for her conduct Tuesday and Wednesday but the judge didn't believe it, saying he felt "she really came up here to defraud gullible Canadian merchants."

He sentenced Wolf, who had pleaded guilty to a 17-count Victoria charge of false pretences, to a total of six months in jail.

Prosecutor Robert Mulligan said Wolf came from Port Angeles by ferry Tuesday, cashing three worthless cheques that day and 14 Wednesday. Of the 17 cheques, 13 were cashed at the T. Eaton Co. Sixteen were to obtain goods and cash while the 17th was written at a bank for cash.

All cheques were written on a closed account in a Port Angeles bank, said Mulligan. Total value of goods and cash obtained was $1,022.

The prosecutor said "police became aware" of Wolf's activities Wednesday and intercepted her before she could board the ferry back home. All of the goods were recovered from two of her friends who were already on the ship.

Legal Aid duty counsel Jane Morley said Wolf had told her that the cheques were written in the expectation it would take two weeks for them to get to Port Angeles. By then, Wolf hoped to cover them with $1,500 from a trust account of her husband, who is in jail.

But Allan said he did not believe that story.

Victoria Eyes Image As Year-Round Resort

By AL FORREST
Times Staff

Tourist industry officials are quietly working on a program to change the image of Victoria in line with the new realities.

These realities include the fact prices are pretty high here in the summer.

The problem is a short tourist season, compounded by the fact the season is even shorter if it rains.

The solution, devised by a new Victoria think tank on tourism; is to promote the city as a resort rather than simply as a vacation centre.

"Fishing is excellent here and we are fortunate because we can play golf 360 days a year. There are only about five days when it is uncomfortable on the golf course," said Al Frame, president of the Victoria Visitors Information Centre.

"Winter-time golfing, fishing and boating have a terrific allure for Canadians, especially those who live on the Prairies. This is what we have to offer and we should begin to promote it," he said.

"We can offer lower prices in the off-season and can put together a lot of interesting packages for a pleasant visit. The accommodation is here; all we need is a little promotion."

The idea for a new tourist image came from the monthly think tank conducted by Don Nixon, manager of the Visitors Information Centre. The session brings together all those interested in the tourist question and spawns new ideas for action.

Victoria merchants at this week's think tank noted that the nature of the tourist industry has changed radically in the past 20 years. The city used to be a fairly quiet centre for those interested in outdoor activities 10 months a year but tecently has become the haven of the summer daytripper.

This latter type of tourist is welcome but there are also problems. In addition to the street congestion and, sometimes, ferry line-ups, there is the problem of having to make almost all the year's income in the summer months.

Victoria should return to its former image as a resort centre and push hard for more "off-season" visitors.

Frame said he was confident a concerted promotion campaign would result in a large number of visitors here, especially in the spring and fall.

Nixon also expressed confidence this type of promotion could be very successful. He said the Visitors Information Centre has successfully completed phase one of its program, providing services to tourists once they arrive in the city, and now was ready for phase two, spending money to attract more visitors.

Nixon said this money would be spent most profitably in nearby centres such as the Interior of B.C and the Prairies, rather than trying to attract tourists from Arizona or California.

A few might come from the southern U.S. but these would be mainly those trying to escape the heat in July and August rather than the off-season tourists the city must concentrate on.

Visitors coming from the Prairies in the spring or fall would tend to stay about seven days at least rather than the seven-hour visitors the city gets in the summer.

"The summer visitor is always welcome but we must have much more than that if our tourist industry is going to grow," Nixon said.

A secondary promotion drive would be to encourage weekend visits throughout the year from those who live on the Lower Mainland. Again the resort city image would be stressed.

Next think tank session is set for Sept. 28 and Victoria MLA Sam Bawlf is expected to be among those attending. It is open to anyone who wants to talk about the tourist industry and offer ideas, Nixon said.

All Elderly Asked: Stay Clean, Quiet

HAMILTON (CP) — All that is expected of the elderly is that they keep clean, quiet, not be a public danger and not smell too badly, says a British psychiatrist.

Given this low expectation of them, it is not surprising that 90 per cent of their psychiatric problems are ignored or undiagnosed, Dr. Klaus Bergmann said in speech Friday at McMaster University Medical Centre.

Too often, illness in the elderly automatically is attributed to some aging process and, therefore, early intervention that might prevent a crisis and admission to an institution is ignored, said Dr. Bergmann, lecturer in psychogeriatric medicine at the University of Newcastle.

He said the elderly are more likely to be given sedatives and tranquilizers for their psychiatric illnesses, and less likely than younger patients to get advice, reassurance, referrals to psychiatrists or psychotherapy from their family doctors.

Lake Polluted

PRINCE GEORGE (CP) — A section of Stuart Lake at the Necosli Indian Reserve near Fort St. James is polluted and unsuitable for swimming, the federal health services department said Thursday. The department said tests show there is contamination of the water.

UNION MESSAGE MAY STOP MAIL

VANCOUVER (CP) — The post office is threatening to refuse to handle a union's mail because of the way the union advertises a boycott of a distillery company's products, says the Retail, Wholesale and Department Store Union.

The post office decision has blown into a union charge of corruption against postmaster-general Bryce Mackasey, whose Ottawa office has not replied because the minister is out of the country on vacation.

The accusation came in a written statement Thursday by the Retail, Wholesale and Department Store Union that has closed Seagram's distillery in nearby New Westminster for a year and a half.

The post office Wednesday advised the union that it "may not" deliver the union's mail because a "don't drink Seagram's" stamp is carried on the front of each union envelope.

City post office spokesman Betty Amos said department inspectors told the union that advertising messages should normally be carried on the back of the envelopes.

She said the automatic mail-handling scanner-machines cannot work properly if the advertisement is carried in the wrong position.

Union spokesman Keith Sheedy said in a written statement that the advertisement cannot be carried anywhere.

The statement said "a long and immoral relationship that has existed between some Liberal cabinet ministers and top Seagram company officers is again showing its influence."

Sheedy related the charge to a letter from Mackasey to an unidentified Seagram vice-president "stating that the post office may refuse to handle any mail that has on the envelope written material other than the forwarding and return addresses."

Murder Charged

CALGARY (CP) — Two Vancouver area residents charged in the death of a Calgary police detective last March were arraigned in Alberta supreme court Thursday on eight charges, including first-degree murder. William John Nichols, 27, of White Rock and Janice Marie Gamble, 21, of Vancouver, reserved pleas on all charges. They are scheduled to appear in court again Oct. 4.

Labor Day Warning

Labor Minister Allan Williams Friday issued a stern labor day message that the rights of individuals will be eroded if management and labor continue to rely on the government to solve industrial problems.

If both sides resist attainment of order and harmony by the established processes, demands for government intervention will increase and freedom may be lost to achieve short-term solutions.

The minister said he finds it surprising that in industrial relations, labor and management seem willing to let a desire "to win" take a front seat to the desire to make a responsible contribution.

Invading Official Privacy

Unlike American governments, their Canadian counterparts are secretive to a fault. For example Canadians cannot find out what top executives of public companies are paid. But the U.S. Securities and Exchange Commission feels that shareholders are entitled to know how much directors and company officers make in order to judge their corporate performance. Through this indirect route we find that Canadian companies such as Alcan, which sells shares in the U.S., pays its top executive $235,758 per year.

Under the U.S. Freedom of Information Act — Canada doesn't have one and the mandarins don't want one — consumer advocate Ralph Nader found out that Canadian mail was being opened by U.S. authorities at the request of the RCMP. Queries on the same subject to the RCMP in Canada and Solicitor-General Warren Allmand resulted in the standard "no comment." The examples are endless in this supposedly democratic society. We have yet to see the Farris inquiry into the Mary Steinhauser death at the B.C. penitentiary because the coroner didn't want it released. As you read this a number of studies, both municipal and provincial, moulder in this city because of government secrecy. Some of them involve very public issues such as the eventual fate of the Royal theatre and ferry rates. Fascinating stuff.

The crass reasoning behind this secrecy is simply that our elected officials want to protect their vulnerable behinds. Nothing is to be released until they have all their explanations ready, or their excuses, as the case may be. This mousy behavior is slowly subverting what little democracy really exists in this country.

A quiet little Canadian Press story tucked on the inside pages of Canada's dailies says RCMP security services became a division last week with its own budget and a plainsclothes force that reports directly to Ottawa. According to an RCMP spokesman new divisional status simply confirms an autonomy the security service already enjoyed. But then we come to the interesting part, tucked away in the fourth paragraph.

The Commons justice committee which scrutinizes RCMP spending has never been able to find out how much is directed to counter-espionage and counter-subversion. In fact, the budget and manpower of the division remains a secret. In other words, there is a secret police force operating in Canada, funded by Canadian taxpayers, and under absolutely no control of our parliament. Obviously, no one in Ottawa has ever read about Watergate, or how both the U.S. Central Intelligence Agency and the Federal Bureau of Investigation were subverted and used for political dirty tricks. If they did read about it, they don't care.

In a democracy people have a right to know what their policemen are doing, especially their political policemen. The fact that this group remains secret in every respect is an insult to Canadians. Since these spies report directly to cabinet, endless opportunities exist for political subversion of a force with a fine tradition. In recent years it has come to light how the RCMP have worked diligently to avoid being politically compromised. The fact that the force has even had to resist political overtures substantiates the danger.

Former Conservative House Leader Ged Baldwin's campaign for a Canadian freedom of information act is all the more poignant when we see these examples. Canada's endemic secrecy must change at every level of government. If we can't find out the salary of Canadian Pacific's chairman of the board — the company even has a special exemption in the U.S. too — then how much else is going on contrary to our interests?

Fifteen private members' bills on freedom of information acts have never got past first reading in the House of Commons. And there is good old Mitchell Sharp, the master of evasion telling the Canadian Bar Association that there is no need for such an act. Canadians are now wire-tapped almost at will, the police chiefs want to open our mail, and only the solicitor-general knows what the RCMP is doing. They are finding out everything about us; we know nothing of them. It's time to reverse this vicious process and invade the privacy of both government and the secret police.

836 and 840 Cormorant Street — by Nick Gidney

The LAB's Highhanded Ways

Victoria city council's current snit about parking problems at the Yates Street liquor store is justified and well-documented. When the liquor administration branch first proposed the outlet the city warned of traffic congestion but the branch claimed it would be an 85 per cent walk-in trade and the rest of their valued customers could park in the city-owned facility across the street. You see the branch, unlike a private entrepreneur, has no competition for its product. It doesn't give a damn about its customers, knowing they will come anyway. And it gives less of a damn about the city of Victoria's problems with traffic on Yates Street.

This insufferable attitude on the part of the branch extends into its stores where clerks know little of the products they sell. It is only in recent years the branch started laying down all its corked wines, finally realizing the corks dry out and wine goes sour. Even today at the Mackenzie Street store, dusty bottles of imported wines are upright in a position where the afternoon sun can focus on their contents.

With this kind of indifference to the products it sells, how can the city hope for any reason from these provincial czars.? When Attorney-General Garde Gardom goes to work on his new liquor regulations he should also examine the highhanded way the branch treats customers and municipal governments.

Meanwhile, considering the branch's $155 million net profit last year, is it not too much to ask that a commissionaire be provided at provincial expense to sort out Yates Street traffic problems? Since the branch ignored the city's well-meaning advice in the first place, it should pay for its mistakes.

EDITOR'S NOTEBOOK

'Investor Confidence' in The Petroleum Industry

I have been having a running genteel battle with the multinational oil companies for several yars now. They have even offered me a ride to Fort McMurray to see Syncrude. Whenever we write an editorial touching on the petroleum industry reaction is swift. On occasion two or three executives of certain companies will even drop in for a chat.

Words like "multinational," "gouging" or "profiteering" make these gentlemen very sad. They tell me 10 to 15 years hence Canada will be almost totally dependent an offshore oil, given our current supply. Canada will spend $50 billion for the development of hydrocarbons in the next 10 years, a figure beyond the resources of even the federal government, the oil men state.

This means the importation of capital, or put another way, a free hand for the American-owned oil companies. But the oil men would disagree, pointing out that government controls land, production and deposition. From an $8 barrel of oil in January, 1976 the industry paid 68 cents operating costs, $5.39 in taxes and received $1.93 return. For Imperial Oil this translated into a profit of six cents on each dollar of revenue, not much of a return on investment.

Industry return on capital investment in 1974 was 11.5 per cent, .4 per cent less than the average for all Canadian manufacturing industries. It should be noted, of course, that the wellhead price of oil per barrel in 1974 was $6.50. It is now $8 and will soon rise higher.

After this gush of statistical tears, executives subtly remind you of just how the business world works. Capital flows where it is needed and rewarded; it is the industry that gets oil out of the ground and to market. These lessons were driven home to the federal and Alberta governments when exploration suddenly dried up as the two jurisdictions fought over resource taxation shares.

Admittedly the costs of bringing frontier or Arctic oil south are high. One offshore drilling island in the Beaufort Sea costs $25 million. The $2 billion private-public Syncrude development would have been uneconomical had not the Arabs conveniently and artificially raised the price of oil.

Despite all these problems, the oil companies are doing very well now, governments are doing just fine too, and the consumer — the guy who needs a tank of gas once a week and heats his home on oil — is the victim.

That's not the way democracy is supposed to work.

The price per gallon of gasoline rose five to six cents a gallon this week because the federal government lifted a 60-day freeze imposed July 1 on increased wellhead prices. Every provincial government rubber stamped the federal initiative except Nova Scotia.

Even the Anti-Inflation Board approved of the oil companies raising their prices 4.3 cents per gallon plus another 1.8 cents to offset inflation.

At a time when Ottawa mandarins are writing confidential letters to each other about the need for projecting an image of cost consciousness in government, the same government raises oil prices. With the exception of increased food costs, nothing is so all-encompassing in an inflationary economy as raising oil prices.

Literally everybody and everything is affected. Naturally people on the lower end of the economic scale are the most severely hurt. Even the oil companies admit that.

In a question and answer press release, Imperial Oil notes the following: "Higher prices must in the short-run 'hurt' some people. The real issue is whether for reasons of preserving income equity, we want to compensate particular individuals in the society. There is some evidence that the first round effects of higher oil prices will be somewhat regressive, i.e., poor people will bear a proportionately larger portion of higher taxes . . ."

The answer concludes with this blithe statement: The general tax system is the most efficient way of compensating these low income individuals."

Tell that to the Carter tax commission or Walter Gordon.

As for the inflationary effect of increased oil prices, Imperial has this to say: "The conventional tools of stabilization policy are monetary and fiscal policy. Price controls on individual products such as crude oil are both inefficient and insufficient to stabilize the overall economy, particularly in view of crude oil's small contribution to total production costs relative to other categories such as labor."

Now everybody has a right to their own opinion on these matters, but what bothers me is how the industry statements sound eerily like pronouncements of government. Not only do the oil companies explain why higher oil prices are necessary, they propose economic solutions to the problem and even pose social questions.

It makes me wonder: who really governs this country? And for whom? Ten years ago we were rolling in petroleum reserves. Now they will dry up in 10 to 15 years. When the oil industry found itself squeezed between provincial and federal jurisdictions it reduced exploration. Government gave the oil companies more and they started looking again.

The relationship between the Trudeau administration and the foreign owned oil industry hearkens back to Sir John A. Macdonald's Conservatives and the CPR. Must our governments always be the factotums of industry? Where is the concern for 23 million Canadians who pay the bills?

Meanwhile, the price of petroleum continues to rise towards world market prices and the last budget provided oil companies with more tax benefits.

Since no frontier oil will be on stream in southern markets until 1978 consumers are forced to pay higher prices for oil that was developed relatively cheaply. The industry admits that pricing old oil at world levels is not primarily a means of financing new investment. No, its prime purpose is to achieve "allocative efficiency and maintain investor confidence."

At the expense of every Canadian who uses a drop of oil, it might be added. Think how proud you'll feel the next time you tank up or pay the oil bill — you are maintaining investor confidence in the great oil companies. — G.R.O.

RICHARD GWYN

Stark Implications of 29%

OTTAWA — Pierre Elliot Trudeau has become Canada's most unpopular prime minister since the Second World War. He may even be, although no polls exist to prove the case either way, our most unpopular national leader since Confederation.

A tidal wave of dislike, disapproval, distrust, and among some voters, revulsion and hatred, has engulfed Trudeau and his Liberal government. Outside of Quebec it has reduced the Liberals, a quasi-permanent majority party since the turn of the century, almost to the level of a minor party. It has stripped Trudeau, the victor of three successive elections, of his political authority and cut him down to virtually the status of a lame duck leader during the two years that remain until the next election.

These interpretations may be exaggerated. Certainly they are not infallible. The Gallup poll, upon which the entire analysis rests, measures the intent of the voters but not the intensity of their intent. Also, people are careless of their opinions when they know they don't really matter: to ask individuals how they would vote "if an election were held today" when in fact no election is about to be held is as chancy as asking people how, if they won it, they would spend a $1 million lottery windfall.

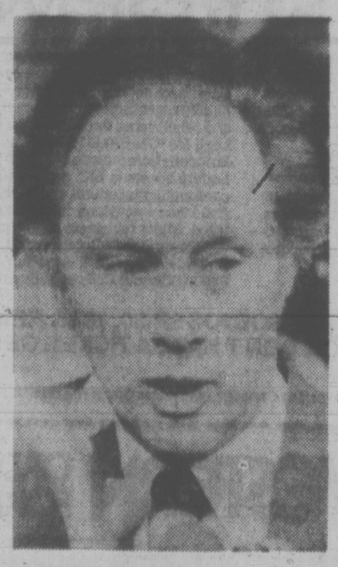
Few Gallup Goofs

With allowable margins of error, though, Gallup's goofs have been few. More to the point, its finding that in August only 29 per cent of Canadians still supported Trudeau, in fact minimizes the magnitude of his unpopularity.

Only once before have the Liberals sunk this low. Gallup in fact erred in describing the 29 per cent figure as the first time the party had dropped below the 30 per cent mark. Early in 1958, just after Prime Minister John Diefenbaker's epic majority victory, the Liberals under the late Lester Pearson dropped to the same 29 per cent level.

The comparison that counts is between Trudeau, buoyed up as are all prime ministers by the appeal of his office, and the performance of his predecessors. During the 35 years since November 1941 when Gallup first felt the political pulse of Canadians only one prime minister managed at any time to accumulate as many enemies and to preserve as few friends on anything the scale Trudeau has achieved.

The postwar record that Trudeau now has broken was set by Diefenbaker in March, 1963. Only 32 per cent of Canadians still wanted Dief to be the Chief. Diefenbaker then did better under worse circumstances than Trudeau faces today. The Conservative prime minister's cabinet was split, the economy seemed about to collapse, his opponent, Pearson, commanded the stature of a prime minister-in-waiting.



PIERRE TRUDEAU
. . . is he down for good?

By contrast, Trudeau has achieved his unparalleled unpopularity at a time when his cabinet still is clustered about him, the economy is on the mend, and his opponent, Joe Clark, though agreeable enough and competent enough, has failed to make any mark upon the consciousness of Canadians.

Clark is wise to stay in the weeds. The public consciousness that matters is of unrelenting antagonism towards Trudeau. Except in Quebec, the Liberals today command scarcely more support than the New Democrats.

Roughly, although the choice is quite arbitrary, popular support of about 25 per cent or more qualifies a political party to be labelled as a "major" one rather than a "minor" one. The New Democrats, for example, customarily poll just under 20 per cent and are regarded, by themselves as well as by outsiders, as a minor party.

Trudeau has brought the Liberals to the edge of that abyss. Gallup's sample of 1,064 people is too small for its regional breakdowns to be granted any statistical credibility. Nevertheless, confidential calculations put Liberal standing in the west at less than 20 per cent. In Ontario, the killing ground of the next election, Liberal strength is hovering just above the 25 per cent mark. The Liberals are today unmistakably a major party only in Quebec, and probably also in the Atlantic provinces where the sample is too small even for guesstimates to be made.

Wait Until '77

All this analysis is no better than the survey upon which it is based. A nuance here and a qualification there, though, won't change any of the essentials.

From now until the next election, two trends are possible. The first is that Trudeau, still by far the country's most potent politician, will somehow rekindle the love affair between himself and Canadians. It's hard to see how this can happen. Trudeau's problems stem less from substance (the economy is troubled, but then it always is) than from style (everything from too many shrugs to too much loose talk about a "new society"). Style, as Trudeau once liked to say, is the man himself. Canadians have decided they don't like the man, or his style. They aren't likely to change any more than he can change.

The second possibility is that except for a brief upturn this fall when the government announces its new policies, the polls will remain the same. If, in a year's time, Trudeau is still as unpopular as he now is, then an election debacle becomes a certainty.

Trudeau hates to lose. So do the Liberals. By mid-1977, party and prime minister will be thinking about a change.

Pandora's Going

Heritage legislation, if it can resist the onslaught of developers and their lawyers, is only the first step in a preservation scheme that could ameliorate some of Victoria's growing urban problems.

Pandora Avenue, for instance, was lined with large, comfortable homes, built originally for single families, but latterly serving as duplexes, apartments and rented rooms for lower income families and those who simply choose to live close to town in an unregimented setting. These houses were neither historical or of particular architectural interest but they did provide an alternative place to live other than the ubiquitous apartment block and they did preserve a sense of history and neighborhood.

Tomorrow Pandora Avenue will become as bland and monotonous as Cook Street as the all too familiar series of neat, unexceptional boxes with embarrassingly amateur ornamentation hung on them, with parking lot out back and the umteenth dreary landscaping job that manages to defeat even mother nature produces the urban blight that the city planners should be desperately trying to avoid.

And so it goes, with more people condensed into smaller spaces.

Fort Street has lost its keynote structure, the Campbell building and now is in danger of ceasing to exist as an unplanned conglomeration of small specialty stores that cater to the needs of downtown residents and visitors. A street that should be a low-profile pedestrian-oriented haven for small local enterprises may be swallowed up and transformed by order of some corporation head office in Vancouver or Toronto.

The germ of an idea exists within the heritage bylaw. City council acknowledges that legislation must be used to protect the historic and architectural past of the city from those whose interests are less than humanitarian.

To avoid this snag, protective legislation should be expanded to cover buildings and houses that are integral parts of neighborhoods and contribute to the social or even aesthetic well-being of a community.

The short-term profit to the developer, contrasted with the long-term benefit to the city and its inhabitants should tip the scales in favor of planned preservation.—T. Palfrey, 941 Meares Street.

Gentle Complaints

This is in response to Max Low's query in your Aug. 7 issue entitled: Just Where Have All the Tourists Gone?

Let me preface this—I am not a "B.C.-phobe". I can remember times when as a member of the Wenatchee, Wash. drum and bugle corps we journeyed to Penticton and Kelowna and (in those days) ferried across to Kelowna playing God Save the Queen to be answered by the Vernon pipe-band with the U.S. anthem, and tears of pride and brotherhood welled. I carry that memory, always.

But having spent a weekend deliberately shortened visiting Victoria I think I can partially answer Mr. Low's question. Americans are being royally ripped off in Victoria. My brother from California and his lady gladly paid the $55 nightly at the Empress, and God knows how much in purchases of sweaters and woollens, fine food and expensive liquors before I joined them off the Princess Marguerite on Saturday. By Sunday we were so disheartened by the indifference, short of downright rudeness, of the sales personnel that we felt we had committed a crime for somehow spending our time and money in your community.

For example: I went to the tobacconist to buy a nail clipper: normally 35 cents anywhere. The girl said it was 69 cents. then found it in conflict with a tag attached that said $1.25! I stated that I could have accepted the original price, but that I was tired of being "had" by this community! The tourists around me all but broke into applause.

Then, to have to buy a $2.50 hamburger in order to buy a $1.50 ounce of gin on Sunday! Well, as we say, south of the border: "That tore it!" And the sign on the wall plead: "Stay another day in Victoria!"

Since returning I have heard horror stories of waitresses so rude that a party of 10 got up and walked out, of two teenage girls who selected what they wanted from a Chinese menu and got a full serving of each dish to the tune of $35.

I'm trying hard to love my fellow Americans-to-the-north, but I'm not coming back, at least to Victoria, anymore, and I am astonished at how many of my fellow Washingtonians feel the same way. I felt like a crank, sailing south on the Marguerite, but now I realize I am not alone by a long shot.

I trust that this letter answers, in part, Mr. Low's query. — T. M. Schuster, Seattle.

Season of Guns and Harlot Dollies

By JUDITH MARTIN
Washington Post

Every year, we adults can hardly wait until Christmas to see what the new toys are going to be. What new harlot-dollies can we bring into our homes? Are there any good new weapons for pre-schoolers to use on one another? What perfectly natural human functions which the children have just been trained not to do in public, or have not yet learned to do, will now be performed by their "action figures" on our sofas, in front of our guests?

Not to keep us in suspense for another agonizing season, the toy companies are beginning their hard sell. With any luck, even if you give in to the new cries, you can still look forward to four months of high-pitched nagging.

Here are some of the highlights from just one toy company, which is in no way to be presumed to be all that Santa has in store for us:

A new enemy doll named Maskatron, part of the Six Million Dollar Man empire, the figure refering to a combination of the outlay and the damage debts you can reasonably expect. Maskatron is advertised as "not invincible; hit him in the right places and his arms, legs — even his head — pop off!!"

This is a toy breakthrough, a toy that falls apart. It is part of the consumer education system for toddlers, who will emerge the wiser after a good cry. No doubt, you can easily put it back together again, to re-teach the lesson, but with any skill at all on the part of the ages 5 and up for whom it is recommended, you can end up with an arm under the radiator, a leg in the child's milk glass and even a head in the plumbing.

But don't knock it. It also has "two snap-on weapons."

New Baby Alive is touted as an improvement on the old model, which was an improvement on baby dolls which did nothing but wet after being fed. The new one, the company promises, will have "a totally new, even more realistic look for 1976." Now, "realistic" has often been used as a code word in the toy business, and guess what. If New Baby Alive doesn't turn out to be as realistic as you or your child could hope, you might go for Nugget, a horse doll that is designed to go with two dolls who spend a lot of time in the bathroom. What they are doing there, according to the toy company's press release, is making "a big splash with a wonderful Bubblin' Bath 'n' Shower." That's what it says, anyhow. One can only hope that truth-in-advertising has not yet taken over the toy industry; otherwise what that life-like horse is doing in the shower with those two ladies might scare the other lifelike horses on the street.

Then there is the Bionic Woman, no doubt a response to feminist complaints that the boys have all the fun with the Bionic Man, the doll with all the medical transplants. Bionic Woman's equipment is "a fabulous Bionic Beauty Salon" and "Designer Collection Fashions."

But the best new doll of all, one which is heralded as being "for the whole family to enjoy" is Sleepwalker Sam. The game is to "crank him up for a wild walk over the framework of the four-storey building. See if you can get him down without falling!"

This opens up a whole new world of dolls with psychological ailments. But we may have to wait until Christmas of 1977 for the New Sam, who, no doubt, will stand crazily on the top of that building and threaten to commit suicide. "See if you can get him down!" Or if you want to.

The Good Life

THE SUN
An Editorial

"It wasn't just the 40-cent cup of coffee that made them mad, but when the Washington residents totalled up a walloping $250 for a two-day stay in British Columbia, they vowed, 'We won't go back.'"

Like a Mack truck. That is the way to describe how the opening paragraph of last Saturday's lead story in the Seattle Post-Intelligencer hits at the British Columbia tourist industry. Whomp! Under a six-column headline reading: "B.C. — the C is for Costly; U.S. Tourists Stay Away".

The newspaper goes on to lay before its readers a ghastly catalogue of facts destined to dissuade Americans from crossing the border to spend.

British Columbia ferry rates doubled just at the start of the summer for most passenger vehicles and a 400 per cent increase for camping vehicles; the reported experience of a Seattle-area tourist who paid $55 for one night's double occupancy stay in just a second-flight Vancouver hotel (and, in general, motel and hotel costs are 10 to 20 per cent higher than last year); gasoline anywhere from one cent to 15 cents a gallon higher than in Washington State; food costs 25 per cent higher than in 1975; sales tax up by 20 per cent since the spring; a Canadian dollar more expensive than the American dollar . . .

"American tourists," says the article, "have quite a case for staying home." Hell's-bells; British Columbia residents have quite a case for leaving.

The province continues to be the most expensive place in the country to live, the most expensive place to eat, find shelter, clothe oneself and, increasingly, to do business and deliver government. British Columbians need those American tourist dollars to help pay the bills and preserve their smugly vaunted Good Life.

But the evidence is, that while border crossings are the same as last year, the dollars being left behind when the Americans return are not. Tourists are staying less time, spending less, and, spending what they do spend on cheaper services — campgrounds, for example, rather than hotels. Vancouver hoteliers say they are having the worst summer in years and on Vanvouver Island the government — conservatively, probably — reports no growth in the tourist industry this summer and declines in hotel and motel occupancy of as much as 20 per cent.

What articles like the Post-Intelligencer's do is hurt the industry, British Columbia's third largest, not just for one or two weeks or a month at an already bad summer's end but for next year and perhaps years after that. We cannot, literally, afford to let that hurt happen.

With an economy in the province that is both high cost and too-narrowly based on natural resource exports, British Columbia's major industries are increasingly struggling to sell abroad. At the same time, imports flow in unabated and government and its agencies — like Hydro — continue to pop out of the country to borrow money for their pricey projects . . . worsening an already bad balance of payments deficit.

More dollars going out than coming in. One of the important offsets to our proflicacy is the tourist dollars coming in — what has been considered a billion-dollar industry in British Columbia. If the tap starts to turn off?

Edwin Norman, the provincial government's director of travel industry development, tells the Post-Intelligencer: "It just can't last. People will get used to costs or the costs will go down."

Why can it not just last? When labor and business in this country have a fine record of getting together to self-destruct!

The Trudeau Trip More Than Holiday

THE GLOBE AND MAIL
An Editorial

Prime Minister Pierre Trudeau is as much entitled as anyone in Canada to enjoy his vacation in privacy. When he goes skiing in the Rockies, or the Alps, or swimming in the Caribbean, he has a right to insist, as he does, on being left alone. And the right for the most part has been respected.

But "vacation", in Mr. Trudeau's vocabulary, has become a very elastic term. On his current expedition, for example, he has cruised the Adriatic on a yacht with the Aga Khan, who is the head of a Moslem religious order, he has had a chat in Dubrovnik with Premier Dzemal Bijedic of Yugoslavia, visited King Hussein of Jordan in Amman, and spent four days in Israel on a round of events and visits that included a meeting with Premier Yitzhak Rabin. The off to Rome for a call on Premier Guilio Andreotti. And all this is described as a vacation and therefore private. There is no entourage of Canadian reporters along and the press in the countries he has visited, especially in Israel, has been surprised to find itself frozen out of any contact with a Canadian head of government visiting Israel for talks with the Israeli head of government.

Undoubtedly these meetings are useful. Undoubtedly it is admirable on Mr. Trudeau's part to be ready to take on all this serious business on his holidays. But is he really entitled to insist that all this is just a holiday tour to be enjoyed in privacy? Mr. Trudeau may take the view that he is just travelling as a private citizen, but it is as a private citizen who just happens to be the head of the government of Canada and who would otherwise not have been received by the premier of Yugoslavia, the King of Jordan, the premier of Israel or the premier of Italy.

No doubt it is pleasant for a prime minister to get away with a private label on what is obviously an official tour. Having a herd of prying reporters on your heels, constantly demanding to know what you are saying, in the name of Canadians, to foreign leaders, is not the most enjoyable way to travel. So Mr. Trudeau's effort to disguise it as a vacation is understandable, and a nice try.

But he has no right to get away with it. He has been having serious meetings on serious subjects with the leaders of the governments of other countries and he has no right to pass that off as nobody's business but his own. It is the business of Canadians, and Canadians have a right to keep an eye on it.

Sweden's Green Fields Car Factory

By BERNARD NOSSITER
Washington Post

KALMAR, Sweden — Henry Ford and Frederick Taylor, the time and motion man, would throw a fit. Even Adam Smith might be surprised. The Volvo auto company here has abandoned specialization of labor, scrapped the conveyor belt and still seems to be assembling cars more cheaply than in conventional Detroit plants.

The pioneering factory in the green fields has introduced some new principles of work. A team turns out a completed package instead of separate individuals each performing the same simple motion in mind-numbing Chaplin style.

The plant has introduced some striking creature comforts. Each team of 15 or 20 takes coffee breaks in cheerful, sunlit lounges, furnished with brightly colored plastic chairs. They can freshen up at the end of the day in their own team sauna.

It appears — and nothing stronger than that cautious verb is justified — that Volvo's design of a pleasanter environment and more meaningful labor has achieved its major goals: cutting the absenteeism and turnover that have driven up costs elsewhere in the company. So far, however, the new way they do things here has not had any dramatic effect on output.

The Kalmar plant and its 630 workers have been putting together cars since February 1974. Today, the 530 blue collar workers — and the distinction between shop floor and office has not been wiped out — produce about 15.5 an hour, a pace agreed with the union.

The turnover rate for the work force is about 15 per cent. That means one in seven will quit this year and a new man must be found and to take his place. Dubious as this may sound, it is much better than the rate of over 20 per cent at Volvo's more conventional main plant in Gothenburg. There more than one in five quit each year.

Absenteeism, a headache for spirit-chilling auto plants all over the world, is strikingly better at Kalmar. The rate now is running at 11.8 per cent, meaning that one worker in nine will be off on any given day. At Gothenburg, it is 19.9 per cent or one in five. In other words, Kalmar must keep, car for car, only half the number of reserve workers to fill in for those out sick, out fishing or just out. Productivity — the amount of work one man can do in one hour — has not yet responded to the Kalmar treatment. It is running only 0.5 per cent better than Gothenburg. That means the new plant produces in 199 man-hours what the older plant does in 200. A businessman and a national incomes economist would ask about the bottom line, the rate of return at Kalmar compared with the Gothenburg plant. But Volvo is reluctant to give breakdowns, even in the percentage form offered for the other indicators. The company does acknowledge that the initial investment for a Kalmar is 10 per cent higher than the conventional factory. It is a plausible guess that this sum is made up in a few years by the savings on recruiting and training new workers and keeping a smaller reserve crew. Volvo has done away with the conveyor belt that fixed men to one position and one fractionated task by substituting computer-controlled moving platforms. Each carries a car body shell and is propelled to the waiting teams who install the parts.

Each team is responsible for a complete "package," the instrument panel or the safety belts and brakes. Within a team, a man can move from task to task, reducing the monotony that Chaplin parodied in "modern times."

Within limits, the team can speed up or slow down their pace, unlike the dictated flow of the conveyor belt. The other day, a longhaired young man was chatting up a head-scarved girl while their mates toiled on. The flirting couple had worked faster than the norm and earned themselves some time of their own.

No team, however, can pile up more jobs than the limited space in the "Buffer" or storage zones. And if a team falls behind the 15.5 cars an hour norm or makes other mistakes, an alarm signal flashes and a computer screen warns that Big Brother is watching.

The place is far quieter than a conventional factory, no noisier than an office. Best of all, each of the 20 teams works along an outside wall, a leg of four joined hexagons. The windows are flooded with sunlight and filled with views of trees and fields.

Despite all the improvements, Kalmar is still a factory. Its workers are attached, even if loosely, to an assembly line and the concrete floor is hard on their feet.

The workers themselves, talking through a company public relations man, cautiously applaud the plant.

Ulf Palmgren, a cheerful, 24-year-old blond and bearded Viking, said, "I like it better than Gothenburg. We had shorter balances (work cycles) there."

The longer cycle at Kalmar means he is repeating himself less. But then he complained, "you do have to run more here to catch up with the materials."

Palmgren particularly enjoys working with a team whose members decide whether or not a newcomer can join. "We've got a wonderful gang and have some stimulating arguments — mostly about girls," he said.

Johnny Ostsater is dark, serious and 26. He worked at Gothenburg, too, but prefers Kalmar "on the whole," largely because "the job here is more meaningful. You have more contact with others in the factory."

"I make the whole job here and see the result," he said. "There is much less noise here. It is definitely better, like going from a coal mine to a lit room."

Both, however, said that even a 30-minute task becomes monotonous, that there are limits to the creativity in putting together a unit for a car.

The two men make $5.40 an hour, a bit above the average rate of $5.30.

The seemingly better results at Kalmar must, however, be treated with caution because of what scientific managers call the "Hawthorne effect." This refers to a famous productivity study that tested workers under a variety of conditions and found that everything worked. The puzzled experimenters concluded that output kept rising because the workers were subjected to special attention, made to feel unique by their very participation in the project.

At Kalmar, an endless stream of visitors walk through the plant. Each team's coffee room lists the day's guests. In a typical week, the Kalmar workers are observed by French technicians, East German transport officials, Ford Foundation researchers and an American journalist. All this attention must have some effect on morale.

It also raises a disturbing question about the failure to show a greater gain in productivity. But that could be explained by Volvo's own goals. The company did not design Kalmar simply to make life pleasanter for workers but in order to cope with a costly turnover and absentee rate. Well-off, fully employed Swedes simply would not go into or stay in conventional plants.

In sum, the Hawthorne effect at Kalmar may be paying off by attracting and holding Swedes to jobs in an auto plant they would not go near under conventional production techniques.

Volvo officials themselves refuse to draw any conclusions or reveal figures from which generalizations can be made with confidence. The company is drawing up with its unions its own balance sheet for the experiment. For this story it would disclose only percentages and no absolute numbers.

If, however, the cut in turnover and absenteeism is not a temporary Hawthorne effect but a lasting phenomenon, Kalmar has at least solved the major problems for which it was built. Whether productivity could also be increased is something another generation of engineers and other specialists might tackle with workers and their representatives.

Even if Kalmar has not solved the turnover and absentee problems, it clearly provides a more satisfying existence for workers. They say as much. It is, however, still far short of an experience that enriches their lives.

But Kalmar is the first of its kind. It holds out a glimmer of hope for an end to Blake's "dark, satanic mills."

Kalmar has not yet reached the point where workers with hands have effectively enlarged their work and reduced its discontent, choosing and creating in any real sense. It has simply made manual labor less unpalatable.

But the dissolution of the mind-numbing assembly line is, nevertheless, an important step towards a much larger and still distant goal. It suggests that industrial workers may some day enjoy a life as gratifying as their bosses.

Easy to mistake The Wrong Tern

In recent years a late-August, early-September pastime of mine has been a local variation on the old needle-in-the-haystack game called Find the Arctic Tern.

The game involves the patient and careful examination, with binoculars, of some of the hundreds of Common Terns that pass our shores at this time of year, in the hope that among them I might find one that fits the description of an Arctic Tern.

I say "fits the description" advisedly because, as will be revealed to those who stay for the finale, separating Arctic Terms from Common Terns is, to say the least, a birdwatcher's nightmare.

The rules of the game? So far as I know, none have been recorded: you make them up as you go along. Mind you, it isn't much of a game if you haven't done your homework. And homework, in this case, means learning what it is that marks an Arctic Tern from a Common Tern in the field.

Unfortunately, learning these differences is one thing; applying what you've learned, quite another.

For example, one of the field-marks that can be used to help separate these two look-alikes is the color of their bills. According to the book, Arctic Terns usually have blood-red bills — right to the tip — while Common Terns have a dark tip to their red bills.

Note the word "usually," because sometimes Arctic Terns, especially immature birds in the fall, have dark tips to their bills, and occasionally Common Terns have all-red bills. So much for the color of their bills as a field mark.

The books also make the point that Arctic Terns have shorter legs than Common Terns, which is great when you get the two of them sitting together — which is almost never. So much for leg-length as a field mark.

Then there's that reputed darker grey of the body of an Arctic Tern that is supposed to result in a noticeable white line between its black cap and its grey face. Unfortunately, in autumn, most Arctic Terms have lost their prominent black caps and are instead sporting a bit of black on their foreheads, which fades into white on their crowns. A livery which, by the way, is identical with that worn by Common Terns. To make matters worse, in poor light — the kind of light we've had for most of this summer — the natural shading of a curved body, lighted from above, makes a Common Tern look darker than it really is. So much for grey body as a field mark.

About now, you couldn't be faulted for wondering if the terns know the difference. Well, the evidence suggests they do because, in North America at least, the two species have neatly divided the continent so that on their breeding grounds there is no fraternization — the Arctic, as their name implies, being the northern nesters, the Common, the more southerly nester. Except on the Atlantic coast, from New England north to Labrador — where the two species nest — there is no overlap.

So, the terns know the difference but that still leaves us with the problem.

Well, Brian Kautesk, writing in a recent issue of Discovery, the quarterly publication of the Vancouver Natural History Society, may have a solution for us. According to Brian, if you do tell a Common Tern from an Arctic Tern, you will do it by their wings.

Brian has spent enough time looking at the two species to feel certain that terns which show primaries — the outer flight feathers of the wing — that are blackish above and opaque below, and a paler translucent patch near the bend of the wing, are Common Terns.

Arctic Terns, on the other hand, show translucence throughout the wing from below, making the wing look like a pale triangle.

Brian contends, and the evidence in the field seems to support him, that Arctic Terns are very rare along the inside waters of southwestern British Columbia. Along the outside — the west coast of Vancouver Island — they may turn up more often but even there they are far from common.

After looking at enough terns this year to be firmly convinced that Brian is right about the rarity of Arctic Terns hereabouts. I'm prepared to admit that looking for Arctic Terns along the south coast of Vancouver Island is like looking for a needle in a haystack

Adolescents' Dilemma
A series of three presentations focussing on adolescence. Topics for discussion include: the growth and development of the adolescent; communication problems; the adolescent's interaction with his society and environment.
Thursdays, Oct. 7, 14, 21, 7:30-9:30 p.m., Clearihue 101 — $10.

Asian Religions — An Introduction
Lectures and class discussions will survey the religions of Asia — Hinduism, Taoism, Confucianism and Shinto — in their many aspects: as philosophical systems, as organized religious sects, as influential and integral elements in the histories of Asian countries. 12 sessions.
Tuesdays, Sept. 14, 7:30-9:30 p.m., Clearihue 124 — $35.

Conflict and Harmony in Traditional and Modern China
Through a series of 10 sessions, the class will examine the political economic and social issues of present-day China as a reflection of the ideological changes it has undergone since the early years of the 20th century.
Tuesdays, Sept. 14, 7:30-9:30 p.m., Cornett 107 — $35.

Encouragement of Children's Success in School
A six-session programme designed for parents, based on Dr. William Glasser's methods of encouraging success and responsibility. Particular consideration will be given to homework and studying, television, communicating with the school, and enhancing literary skills.
Wednesdays, Sept. 15, 7:30-9:30 p.m., MacLaurin 541 — $15.

The Mapping of British Columbia
In co-operation with the British Columbia Historical Cartography Group, this six-session lecture series will highlight the unfolding history of the Province, as illustrated by maps produced by early explorers, fur traders, the Admiralty and others. Lecture topics will include: Early Mapping to 1792; Coastal Mapping after 1792; The Fur Trade; The Colonial Period; Vancouver Island; and the Boundary Surveys.

BEFORE THE JUDGE

The Victoria Society for Autistic Children applied Friday in Victoria provincial court for a $26,110 compensation order against its former secretary-treasurer, who admitted Aug. 20 he stole that much from the society in a 13-month period ending Aug. 5.

The order was requested by lawyer Malcolm McMicken and will be dealt with by Judge William Ostler Oct. 8, when John Barthlouw Sullivan, 42, of 707 Esquimalt, is to be sentenced following completion of a psychiatric examination.

Sullivan was to have been sentenced Friday for theft of the children's society money and of about $8,500 from Old Country Produce of Victoria, in which he was a partner-bookkeeper.

But defence lawyer Peter Klassen asked for, and got, more time for a thorough examination of Sullivan by a psychiatrist as well as time for study of the case by Klassen himself.

Sentences of six months definite and six months indeterminate were ordered by Ostler for three persons in two separate cases, and the judge said he would recommend they spend the time in an outdoors centre.

Laszlo James Mag, 17, and Ross Albert McLeod, 17, visitors staying at 8 Alma Place, pleaded guilty Aug. 12 to a charge of stealing a $1,000 boat in the Inner Harbor and then going to the Oak Bay Kiwanis Pavilion for a break-in and theft of cigarettes. They were caught after being stuck for two hours while waiting for a couple on a beach to leave.

George Thomas Potter, 18, of 989 Wollaston, pleaded guilty on two earlier dates to two charges of break-ins with intent May 26 at a Saanich car firm and Aug. 20 at an Esquimalt garage.

Community work was ordered for three persons in two courts.

Lloyd Scott Ruttan, 18, of Otter Point Road, who pleaded guilty Aug. 12 to a Sooke charge of a January house break-in and he was put on probation for one year by Ostler and must do 150 hours of such work.

Miklos Gabor Simon, 17, of 136 Conrad, who pleaded guilty Aug. 17 to a Victoria charge of a car theft earlier that day, was placed on two years' probation by Ostler and ordered to do 50 hours of work.

Richard Wesley Smith, 21, of 2877 Trans-Canada Highway, who pleaded guilty July 20 to a Colwood charge of a July 10 service station break-in and theft, was fined $150 by Green, put on probation for 10 months and ordered to do 60 hours of work.

Victoria area resident Christy Joanne Kelly, 21, address not known, was sentenced by Ostler and Judge F. S. Green to a total of six months in jail followed by 18 months' probation.

She pleaded guilty in two August court appearances to eight charges containing a total of 14 counts of uttering and false pretences, all resulting from cheques she cashed to feed what defence lawyer Douglas Macfarlane called "a very bad addiction to heroin."

Both judges recommended she spend the jail time in a special Lower Mainland institution which provides a controlled environment for a dozen women at a time.

Two members of a Saanich family were cleared by Ostler, who discharged them at the end of a preliminary hearing of a charge of possession of marijuana March 8 in Saanich for the purpose of trafficking.

The two were John Christopher Howard, 26, and Elizabeth Anne Howard, 23, both of 2463 Seymour, while a higher-court trial on the charge was ordered by Ostler for a third family member, Michael James Howard, 21, of the same address.

Monique Nerdelli, 29, of 452 Craigflower, was cleared of a charge read Aug. 17 of encouraging two juvenile boys to enter a Victoria dwelling May 23. Prosecutor Robert Mulligan, who entered a stay of the charge on the court record, said only that the matter had been "satisfactorily resolved."

Bail was refused by Allan for Murray Frederick Hildebrandt, 22, of 319 St. Lawrence, who was remanded to next week on one Victoria charge of possession of a known stolen car Thursday and a second of impaired driving and refusing to take a breath-analysis test Thursday. Publication or broadcast of bail-hearing details was prohibited in an order issued by Allan at the request of Legal Aid duty counsel Jane Morley.

Green imposed a $500 fine and probationary term and driving ban of six months each against Roland Aldege Joseph Laberge, 26, of 1042 Inverness, who pleaded guilty July 21 to a Saanich charge laid after a car theft July 10. Laberge must also pay $274 to the car owner by Jan. 15 as compensation for damage to the car.

The trial of Daniel Diten DeMerchant, 21, HMCS Kootenay, previously set for Oct. 1, was moved by Allan to Dec. 7. DeMerchant was charged Wednesday with possession of marijuana Aug. 16 in the Colwood area in a case involving 62 plants found in a greenhouse built in a barn.

GOING HUNTING?
HUNTERS, be sure to take your camera along, so you can bring back the beautiful fall colors from your hunting expedition! A haze filter to cut down on the blue haze and enable you to see distant points:
A telephoto lens to shoot the game alive before you use your rifle. Bring your flash to capture the round-the-fire evening get together, and cooking the meals, etc.
Start your photo record as you load the car up, and take plenty of pictures every day. These you will keep and enjoy long after the game has been eaten.
We invite you to come in and see some of the pocket-size cameras that will produce beautiful prints and slides without bulk or weight. The low price will interest you as well.
The photographic counsellors at JUS-RITE PHOTOS will be pleased to help you plan the photo part of your hunting trip. Good hunting — be safe.

ROLLING STONE

Linda Ronstadt Doesn't Deliver

By DAVE MARSH

LINDA RONSTADT: "Hasten Down the Wind"

Ronstadt's admirers call her rock's premiere interpretive vocalist, which may be true, but only because of a lack of competition. Her masterpeice, Heart Like a Wheel, which is one of the decade's best song assemblages, seems more like a fluke with each mediocre follow-up. Unlike a truly masterful interpreter such as Rod Stewart, Ronstadt has neither the instinct for great material nor the intelligence to do much with it once it's found.

Here, for instance, she slogs through a mostly tepid batch of country, modified reggae and modern folk-styled songs, most of them about a minute too long. She turns in creditable performances on her own Try Me Again (written with Andrew Gold), Tracy Nelson's Down so Low and a very brief Rivers of Babylon, but wastes time and energy with such schlock as John and Johanna Hall's Give One Heart. Unfortunately, on material of a higher grade, Ronstadt flounders. Tackling obscure old songs like When Will I Be Loved is just what great interpreters do; trying to improve on a classic like Buddy Holly's That'll Be the Day is impossible — and Ronstadt's only solution to the dilemma is, to attempt to holler her way out of it.

The title song, Warren Zevon's enigmatic ballad, is another matter. On the original, Zevon sounds confused enough to make the lyric's convolutions impressive, even though it's not among his best songs. But Ronstadt reduces it to a simple country-style tragedy, which makes it seem a simple non sequitur. This ranks as a major disappointment.

RONSTADT

DELBERT McCLINTON: "Genuine Cowhide"

A nice group of hard rockabilly originals and standards, including impressive raveups on such unlikely fare as James Brown's Please, Please, Please, Johnny Ace's Pledging My Love and Blue Monday. If there's a problem here, it's that this music seems to have very little audience these days. But sales don't really measure what a record like Genuine Cowhide is worth.

DWIGHT TWILLEY BAND: "Sincerely":

A long-delayed debut album from the guys who hit with the classic I'm on Fire last summer. Twilley's approach is extremely derivative — echoes of the Beach Boys, Byrds, Beatles and Elvis Presley: era rock and roll are everywhere — but also extremely successful. 'TV' has the finest guitar intro since Born to Run, and, despite the immaturity of the lyrics, this is definitely a band to keep an eye on.

ENGLAND DAN AND JOHN FORD COLEY: "Nights Are Forever"

England Dan is the brother of Jim Seals of Seals and Crofts, and that's about what this record sounds like. If you like the smooth, pop-styled production of the hit single, I'd Really Love to See You Tonight, or any of Seals and Crofts hits, this is for you. Beware of the Baha'i religious message-mongering, though.

Swiss Army 'Invades' Liechtenstein

BERN (AP) — Came the startling noise in the night: Clip-clop, clip-clop, clip-clop.

Residents of the Leichtenstein hamlet of Iradug awakened to the sound of horses and discovered they had been invaded by steel-helmeted foreign troops.

The villagers suggested the 75 Swiss militiamen and their 50 horses were in the wrong country. They then offered the troops some refreshment.

But the embarrassed soldiers made a sharp U-turn behind their mounted lieutenant and marched back to Swiss territory.

"It's an area where such things can happen," said a Swiss spokesman. "Unlike certain other countries, we are not separated from our neighbors by barbed wire fences or border gates."

Arrests Attacked

GENEVA (Reuter) — Chile's military government has been criticized for infringing on human rights in a report issued by the International Commission of Jurists. The report said 23 persons have been arrested this year under irregular circumstances and that at least 52 persons have not been heard from since their arrest.

The Maverick Instinct

Theatre could be said to have happened to David Fox. The happening took place when he was an elementary school child as a result of his need to counter the super athletic prowess of a brother.

His indoctrination took place accidentally when his teacher in the small Western Ontario town where he grew up organized a drama class.

More than 20 years later, against all logic and common sense convention, he was to opt out of his profession of teaching for a life in the theatre.

Victorians will see the 35-year-old Toronto actor as the psychiatrist in Kaleidoscope Theatre's production of Equus, which opens next week. However, those among us who were privileged to see Theatre Passe Muraille's Farm Show which played at Habitat and The Belfry in May, are already aware of Fox as a strong and gifted actor.

He says it was a need for recognition that drew him into the theatre experience in the first place; as far as his family was concerned it was quite foreign territory.

But it was more than a simple sibling rivalry that bound him to theatre through high him to embrace it as a ca-Cabaret in Brantford, Ont. reer. There are maverick instincts in many more people than one would suspect, but in artists the maverick dominates. They simply cannot accept a life-long predictable routine.

"I was school-oriented for 24 years of my life, from the age of six until I left my high school teaching job five years ago," he tells you.

The trigger, he says, was his appearance as Cliff, the young American writer, in a Colin Gorrie production of Cabaret in Brantford, Ont. "But I was already more than half-way there."

That was when he left his $12,000-a-year job — he taught English and theatre arts at the high school level — and began acting professionally for Paul Thompson's Theatre Passe Muraille for $35 a week.

One gathers that his wife, a former teacher and non-theatre person, is an exceptional woman, for she has gone along with his change of life-style all the way and is in Victoria now with their young son, enjoying the change of scene from Toronto.

Like British actor Gordon Jackson (Hudson in television's Upstairs, Downstairs) Fox has never attended a dramatic school — "I might very well have done if the National Theatre School had been open at the right time for me." Jackson incidentally also had a professional university degree which he finally abandoned for theatre.

Passe Muraille, which gave David Fox his start, is not, as many Victorians thought, a French language group, nor is it a company, but more a theatre organization. The title means, roughly, beyond the walls or barricades, and it expresses its founder, Thompson's far-reaching and innovative concepts of theatre.

Originating from Passe Muraille last year, there were some 23 groups out all over the country taking hand-crafted shows to the people who themselves often had inspired and provided the material of the shows.

The way it works, says Fox, is that a person — himself for example — with an idea for a show, talks it over with Thompson and if he likes it the originator gets $1,500 to put the piece together and produce it for a trial week at Passe Muraille's converted factory theatre.

After the run of Equus here, Fox returns to Toronto where a production he has authored and directed, having passed its trials, will have a two-week run in Toronto before going to the National Arts Centre in Ottawa in November as part of a Passe Muraille package which will include their now famous piece, 1837: The Farmers' Revolt.

Passe Muraille is funded by Canada Council, the Ontario Arts Council, private donation and box office.

Fox is filled with admiration for what is being accomplished in Victoria, especially with the fact that a major production like Cabaret, and now Equus, should have been privately funded.

"The idea of private funding for theatrical production is just being tentatively tried in Toronto as an innovation," he says. Yet here in Victoria it has already been done and, I gather, successfully so far. It's a courageous step to have taken."

Fox is glad that he had not seen a previous production of Equus — he could only have seen it in the past 12 months in New York, Winnipeg or Vancouver — before tackling the role that has won eulogies for such actors as Anthony Hopkins and Richard Burton.

"It is a great challenge — a role that demands the actor's personal involvement even more than most," he says.

The opportunity to appear in a play which is so superbly constructed, is so powerful in spite of the simplicity of its story line and in which the reality of the characters is exceptional, is a rare piece of good fortune, in Fox's view.

We agreed (I having seen and reviewed the Vancouver Playhouse Theatre production last winter) that the play is a profoundly moving and thoughtful experience and that the nude scene — which appears to be causing anticipatory alarm in some quarters — is there because it is essential, not only to the resolution of character and motivation, but to the symbolism that is one of the play's many levels.

CREATIVE AND PERFORMING ARTS

Dinner/Theatre Evenings
A programme offered in co-operation with the Department of Theatre, intended primarily for those who have had little or no experience with this art form. A member of the Department will speak informally (as director, producer, designer, etc.) at a pre-theatre dinner in the University Faculty Centre. Following dinner, the group will attend a selected theatre performance where there will be an opportunity to meet with the cast and production staff.
Dec. 9, 1976; March 31, 1977; and an additional date to be announced. Fee per presentation, including dinner—$10.

Film Maker's Workshop
An opportunity for individuals with a basic working knowledge of film to develop individual skills and production styles.
12 sessions, Tuesdays, Sept. 14, 7:30-10:00 p.m., MacLaurin 281—$60.

Understanding Contemporary Music
This introduction to the music of our century will examine changing musical concepts, forms and performance practices, as well as the styles of the representative composers of our time.
10 sessions. Tuesdays, Sept. 14, 7:30-9:30 p.m., MacLaurin 169—$26.

University of Victoria Film Society
Films by Bunuel, Borowczyk, Bellocchio, Jansco, Oshima and Sembene are part of the programme of 11 exceptional films from Europe, Africa and America. Included in the series is a three-part retrospective of the films of Howard Hawks, an American film maker who exemplifies the best in his country's commercial cinema.
Sundays, Sept. 19, 8:00 p.m., MacLaurin 144. Subscription Fee: Adults $20, Students $10. Single Admission: $2/$1.

Bowie: Not Your Average Superstar

By CHARLES FOLEY

LOS ANGELES — Like many British superstars of rock before him, the elusive David Bowie seems to have become a fixture on the Los Angeles scene. A semi-fixture, anyway, rock stars being the peripatetic creatures they are. Why Los Angeles? It's where the loot is. It's where the big recording studios and companies are headquartered. It's in the sun. It's Ray Bradbury's favourite city. It's got Hollywood, and the people that go with it.

And besides, all one's fellow-superstars have a pad here, as well as in London. Elton John, Joe Cocker, John Lennon and Yoko ... They gather at Malibu beach parties, they meet at Peter Seller's home for jam sessions. Sellers is a rock-lover: at one of his recent evening musicales you could have found the British-born actor entertaining a multi-million dollar collection of mostly British talent — Cocker, rasping away with that odd instrument known as his voice, Keith Moon of The Who playing organ, Ron Wood on guitar, Bill Wyman on bass and Bowie himself on sax. Among the other guests: Roger Daltrey, star of Tommy, Cary Grant, star of almost everything.

There are some things that set Bowie apart from the average, run-of-the-mill superstar, however. For one, he defies easy categorization: for another, he works, like a man possessed. Having completed his first movie last month, he has spent the past few weeks in Los Angeles cutting a new album: he has a top-of-the-charts single which is being played into the ground on all North American rock stations and in the discos, plus another of the same rising rapidly. And soon he'll be off on a 35-city tour that begins in Vancouver, passes through Southern California in early February, ending up the following month in New York's Madison Square Garden. Which is a big place. Bowie is one of the very few who can fill it.

What's his secret? He says modestly that people look to him to see what the spirit of the Seventies is, "or maybe half of them do". Critics, such as the Los Angeles Times' Robert Hilburn, burble about "this performer of immense style and ability ... there is simply no one in rock today with as much range and dynamics." And then there's the millions RCA, his recording company, spends on promoting him around the world.

The coming tour is said, in the industry, to be "crucial" to the career of this almost painfully thin, 28-year-old songwriter-singer from Brixton, London. This means that he, and his managers, are changing his image: Bowie, the "glitter mainman", the "Apollo I of the space rock era" with the clownish white-face make-up and the electric carrot hair, clad in vinyl suits that looked as if they'd been designed by a gay lizard from Mars, is no more. In its place Bowie has adopted a smooth, glossy, Thirties look, square shouldered blue suits, a blonde Valentino hair-style: appearing recently on Cher's American television show, he seemed like something freshly hatched from a giant Art Deco egg.

DAVID BOWIE . . . a man possessed

With the new look comes a new sound. Bowie has injected soul into his rock, i.e., he has learned like many before him, that the vital beat, the unique vocal effects of today's black music, can be grafted on to his own style with great effect. He is now one of the few white musicians who get wide and consistent play on black radio stations in the U.S.

Another reason for Bowie's American success is that he is, unquestionably, a great showman, a vaudeville in the Ziegfeld tradition, who loves an all-out spectacular. At his last appearance here, a year ago, sell-out audiences were confronted with a high, futuristic set "Hunger City" — replete with glittering, movable space capsule, revolving platforms, mirrors, what appeared to be a giant neon phallus, and Bowie himself, flanked by dancers, deposited on-stage by a large crane, for his "Space Oddity" number. What he plans for the new tour remains a secret, but it seems certain to be one of rock's splashiest events. Bowie says he takes total control of all his designs himself, and one believes him. "I don't want other people playing with what they think I'm trying to do," he told Rolling Stone in a rare interview last year.

An audience with Bowie is considerably harder to get than one with the Pope. Joyce Haber, queen of U.S. gossip columnists, broke the Bowie barrier a few weeks ago while he was filming in New Mexico — but had to wait 11 hours, she grumbled, for 25 minutes of conversation. Bowie's explanation: "I hate interviews. By the time the thing comes out I've changed my mind. I usually don't agree with what I say very much. A searcher moves quickly."

Besides, he's always being asked about his past, which is faintly mysterious, or perhaps simply, unsuitably dull. Born David Jones in the London suburbs (Dad was an alcoholic who ran a wrestling club, Mum a cinema usherette), he learned to play the saxophone at 12, went to a technical college, worked for an ad agency, became involved with London's Tibetan Buddhist Institute, thought about becming a movice monk but "went out and got drunk instead", and broke into music via London's Marquee Club. He hung around and slept on the doorstop until they gave him a job. At 21, he married an American girl named Angela, who now models in London and elsewhere. They have a four-year-old son, Zowie.

As for his much-flaunted bisexuality, "I like blokes quite a bit, but chicks more." He loves Angela, but doesn't care for the word "love". It gets applied to too many relationships, he thinks, especially the one where you just don't want to be alone, not to mention the one where you burn out all your energy and all your time trying to relate to the other person. Angela responds, fondly enough, that the only thing Bowie really loves is his work.

No one makes it unaided in the $3 billion-a-year recording industry, of course, and once Bowie's talent and saleability were recognized, RCA pulled out all its promotional stops. A planeload of American rock writers were flown to London for interviews, concerts, etc., before the first American tour. His records were pushed through scores of local radio stations, a major ad campaign was mounted in the Press and on TV. If concerts failed to sell out, promoters were told to fill halls by giving away tickets. RCA purchased fat slices of radio advertising, even offered a slice of concert returns to ensure that Bowie got maximum airtime from DJs, without which a pop musician is dead in the U.S. RCA's efforts were rewarded by sales of more than five million records in four years.

The new album, Section to Section, coming out in January to coincide with the start of the tour, could add another million to that total. The movie, called The Man Who Fell to Earth, will do no harm, either.

SWISS LAKE MONSTER WAS A PLASTIC HOAX

LUCERNE (UPI) — Switzerland's claim to a Loch Ness-style monster was short-lived.

The monster raised its ugly, black head out of Lake Lucerne near the resort of Brunnen last weekend and rumors buzzed that the lake had a Loch Ness creature on its hands.

Pictures taken by amateur photographers were widely published.

But it was only a plastic hoax — the product of Swiss television.

The monster was operated by remote control from a camouflaged television truck.

When was the last time you dined at a restaurant where proprietors, Tom Lee or Jerry Russell, took the time to escort you to your table.... or remembered to inform the bar that you don't take an olive in your martini?
The last time you dined at TJ's?

Tom Lee, Restaurateur
Tom Lee, proprietor of TJ's Restaurant, is a charming host and intriguing personality.
A native of Vancouver, Tom earned his reputation as a restaurateur in fine dining houses on this continent.
He managed Trader Vic's Vancouver and Dallas restaurants. And in San Francisco, Tom was manager of another of North America's finest restaurants — the Tonga Room of the Fairmont Hotel.
Although you probably won't hear it from Tom, he's had the experience of managing parties and receptions for some well known public figures ... Edgar Kaiser, Neiman Marcus, Queen Juliane and Frank Sinatra, for instance.
Tom enjoys his profession and it is evident as he welcomes patrons at the entrance, chats with others at their table, or pauses for a quiet word with his partner, Jerry Russell, or with one of his staff.
The people who work to make TJ's such a fine dining establishment are important to Tom. That's because his idea of a good restaurant is more than consistently superb seafood, West Coast specialties, and delicious European cuisine ... more than comfortable furnishings with a warm Mediterranean touch.
It's TJ's people that make the special difference.
And people serving people is what TJ's is all about!

'Harry and Walter' Dumb but Funny

A Film Review
By Nora Hutchison

Harry and Walter Go To New York is more fun than it should be. There's nothing particularly innovative about this Mark Rydell film but there's nothing objectionable about it either. It is, in fact, a practically perfect rainy Saturday matinee movie.

The story's predictable, so you can go out for popcorn and not miss anything, and it's full of dopey characters and dumb-funny dialogue that kids, or the kid in you, will laugh out loud at. The set design (turn-of-the-century Americana) and the costumes are fun for detail-lovers; and although the screenplay work around still another "us guys are pals to the end" theme, Harry and Walter, thankfully, aren't too cute. The story even has a foil for the 'lovable' twosome — 'a spunky lady reporter with a certain muddled charm of her own — and that's more than we have the right to expect, I'd guess, from movies like this.

Harry (James Caan) and Walter (Elliot Gould) are a couple of vaudeville performers who combine second-rate hoofing with petty thievery. After a particularly sloppy act involving a wallet and several missing bills, they wind up in the same jail with America's most notorious bank robber, Adam Worth (Micahel Caine), a man whom ladies swoon for, and prison wardens rush about anxiously to please.

Harry and Walter are enthralled with his style. They're delighted to be detailed to "do" for him, to keep his antique-filled suite of cells dusted, to serve him his specially prepared gourmet meals, to perform impromptu song-and-dance routines for him. It's a lot more fun than the nitro-detail.

One day, they discover architect's drawings for America's most unbreakable bank. Some days later, when Miss Chestnut (Diane Keaton), a rather earnest and outspoken reporter, comes to call on Worth for an interview they borrow her camera to record the plans. In the process of making the picture, though, the flash-gun ingites the subject. Worth returns from his interview, and is rendered speechless by the blazing sight. The boys are re-assigned to the nitro-detail where they spend their time dodging flying boulders. Finally, they blow themselves out of prison, and take off, on a bicycle for New York, in search of that photographic plate.

From here on, the movie runs on comic bits that you're certain that you've seen before in pictures that were made 35 years ago. The comedy is Keystone Kops and robbers, false noses, and hiding behind funny costumes and greasepaint — it's the kind of safe, old-fashioned, polite comedy in which everyone is a sweetie, underneath, and for once, we don't mind being asked to believe it.

Harry and Walter find the plate, of course, and the plans are reproduced in perfect detail. And while they figure out what to do with this windfall, they hang around Miss Chestnut's office, and try to help out. A chance encounter with Worth, now freed from prison, proves quite unpleasant but it gives Harry and Walter some purpose in life. Miss Chestnut, whose office suffered at the hands of Worth's assistants, after he read her rather unflattering article, insists on taking the bank first, and dispensing the money to the poor. Miss Chestnut's paper has definite socialist leanings. Harry and Walter, who are feeling a little bemused by her redoubtable energies, agree to lend their talents to the cause.

ABSTRACT horse head worn here by actor Norman Browning in his role in Equus has been one of the striking features of every production of the Peter Shaffer play since it first opened in London. Browning plays the great horse, Nugget, which becomes an object of worship to 17-year-old Alan Strang. Steve Elliott, right, plays Strang in the Kaleidoscope presentation which opens at McPherson Playhouse, Thursday, running through Sept. 18.

Bastion Season Has Wide Sweep

Features of Bastion Theatre's new season announced this week show expansion in two directions over last season. There will be in February a production of a major Shakespearean historical play, and in November, a studio production of one of the most important Canadian plays of the decade, Creeps, by David Freeman.

Artistic director Edwin Stephenson obviously still feels that a production of Creeps as a mainstage event at the McPherson would be courting box office disaster, and he is probably right.

So the Canadian play will be mounted experimentally at The Belfry. It is, nevertheless, if not a highly courageous venture, a step to be welcomed when a structured Canadian theatre company is willing to step out and include a Canadian play in its season.

The panoramic Richard III is the Shakespeare offering. Bastion has done economically-packaged Shakespeare in the past but this is to be a full-scale presentation.

The season at the McPherson opens Oct. 8 with the offbeat, symbolically furbished musical by Leslie Bricusse and Anthony Newley, The Roar of the Greasepaint the Smell of the Crowd..

The decision to open with this musical "reflects the great popularity of last season's starter, Godspell," says Stephenson.

Three comedies and one wistful drama comprise the balance of the program. Tennessee Williams' Glass Menagerie comes up for the third or fourth time on this city's stages but hopefully will prove to be a perennial audience favorite. Menagerie is one of those delicate masterpieces that bear repetition so long as the repetitions are well handled.

A French farce by Georges Feydeau, A Stitch in Time, is the vehicle that will put Bastion Theatre on the stage of the National Art Centre in Ottawa for the first time, where it will open the season. In Victoria it will be the second production at the McPherson, opening Nov. 12.

Britain's Alan Auckbourn has written in Absurb Person Singular, a comedy with a Christmas setting, and it will be Bastion's Christmas holiday treat for its audiences.

A Broadway hit comedy, My Fat Friend by Charles Laurence to be presented in April, will conclude the season which Stephenson says he is confident will entertain the broad spectrum of our audience which last season alone totalled over 40,000."

AT THE GALLERIES

A one-woman show comprising the paintings of Victoria artist Ardath Davis will be on exhibition and sale at the Leafhill Gallery, 47 Bastion Square, for 10 days, starting Thursday. The paintings are in watercolor, mixed media and acrylics.

Ms. Davis has studied extensively in Eastern Canada, has had work included in Canada-wide touring exhibitions, and in various shows and private collections.

Last winter she was the first Canadian woman artist elected to the exclusive Northwest Watercolor Society of approximately 100 members and one of her works was included in its annual jury show in Seattle.

Leafhill Gallery hours are 10 a.m to 5 p.m.

Paintings and drawings by Josephine Parrott will be on display at the Emily Carr Arts Centre, 207 Government, from Labour Day through Sept. 10.

Wildlife paintings are Ms. Parrott's specialty but this year she has also included studies of people which add dimension to the show and indicate the direction in which her work is moving.

Her paintings are included in a number of Victoria homes and other private collections in Canada, the United States and Britain.

Viewing hours at the Carr Centre are 10 a.m. to 4 p.m., Fridays, 7 to 9 p.m.

Joan McIntyre At The Belfry

Popular Vancouver entertainer Joan McIntyre will be presented in concert at The Belfry, 1291 Gladstone, Sept. 11. A multi-talented performer with an out-going personality, she performs a mixture of blues, jazz and folk rock music as well as being a magical storyteller.

Her performance credits include successful runs at Oil Can Harry's, the Arts Club and Vancouver Art Gallery.

Youth Theatre To be Revived

The Victoria Youth Theatre is undergoing revival and reorganization and anyone interested may attend an initial meeting to discuss proposed activities. The meeting will be held Sept. 12 at 1 p.m. in The Belfry, 1291 Gladstone.

Jim Leard, recently co-ordinator of activities for UVic's Senior Secondary Summer Theatre Workshop and company manager for Bastion Theatre's youth tour, is the organizer. For further information he may be contacted at 385-1508.

Return Visit By Grapelli

Return of Stephane Grapelli after a sell-out success last season at the Royal Theatre, is being hailed joyfully by jazz buffs. He will be heard in a single performance next Friday, backed again by the brilliant Diz Dislay Trio.

The French violinist, now in his mid-sixties, became famous as a member of the quinetet of the Hot Club of France which was at the height of its fame in 1937. Today his improvisations, brillaint technique and sensitivity of performance delight concert audiences around the world.

WOMAN PUTS $130 BITE ON CONSTABLE

EDMONTON (CP) — Judge Lucien Maynard Thursday rejected a defence lawyer's contention that biting a policeman is a reasonable thing for a woman to do.

Const. Alan Towey testified in provincial court that the 20-year-old woman kicked and then bit him "violently" when he tried to arrest her for creating a disturbance in a downtown lounge.

Lawyer Rotyk Sadownik argued that the constable was detaining the woman without just cause.

A man might push or shove back when resisting a false arrest, Sadownik said, "but we are not dealing with a man but a woman here."

"I submit it (biting) was a very reasonable thing for a woman to do."

Judge Maynard thought otherwise. He found the woman guilty of creating a disturbance and assaulting a police officer and fined her $130.

Hong Kong Buys Canadian Phones

REGINA (CP) — Northern Telecom Ltd. announced Friday it has shipped the first of a consignment of 4,000 telephones to Hong Kong.

The telephones, manufactured in Northern Telecom's Regina plant, are blue, ivory and orange Contempras.

The company said that color scheme has great appeal in Hong Kong.

800-Mile Commuters

CALGARY (CP) — About 20 senior and support staff with Pacific Western Airlines are commuting from Vancouver to Calgary and back each weekend, company president Rhys Eyton said today.

Eyton said in a telephone interview that the employee commuting — to visit families in Calgary — is the result of a federal disruption of the airline's move of its headquarters to Calgary from Vancouver, which was to be completed Sept. 1.

The federal government in early August blocked the move until a Supreme Court of Canada ruling, expected later this fall, on the legality of the Alberta government's takeover of the airline two years ago.

Eyton said he has been commuting back and forth from Vancouver to Calgary on weekends to visit his family, which moved to Calgary before the federal blockage was announced. His children have started school in Calgary.

"If others feel like I do it (commuting) really starts to wear you down after a while.

"I've seen more PWA flights in the last month than I think I have in the last three or four years."

Eyton said the employees won't have to pay the commuting costs out of their own pockets.

"It's another cost burden the company doesn't need" in these financially-troubled times for airlines.

All told, 48 senior and support staff were to have moved to Calgary. Maintenance staff in Vancouver were not involved in the transfer.

NO ONE CARED WHEN SHE SAT BEFORE THE LOOM TO WEAVE

PERSIAN RUGS

Primitive people didn't care for the near descendant of our first mother, who was sitting in her rude cave, struggling to evolve the spindle upon which to spin the yarn, and the loom on which to stretch the threads for wrap and weft. Thus her name was lost in that dim and distant past before history began because they didn't know these carpets would become the masterpieces of the future.

Today, many persons have little information about the Persian Carpet and its traditional art. The reason is obvious: The world's precious masterpieces repose in museums throughout Europe and America and are unknown by all but a few who seek them out.

World famous H.A.M. of Iran have carefully selected some of the world's rare and precious Bankers Collection for this special sale at

ANNUAL STATEMENT OF THE VICTORIA FOUNDATION

DECEMBER 31, 1975

AUDITORS' REPORT

To the Members of the Advisory Board of The Victoria Foundation:

We have examined the balance sheet of The Victoria Foundation as at December 31, 1975, and the statements of contributed principal funds and receipts and disbursements for the year then ended. Our examination included a general review of the accounting procedures and such tests of accounting records and other supporting evidence as we considered necessary in the circumstances.

In our opinion, these financial statements present fairly the financial position of the Foundation at December 31, 1975, resulting from cash transactions and its receipts and disbursements for the year then ended, and are presented on a basis consistent with that of the preceding year.

SCHOOL DISTRICT NO. 63 (SAANICH)

SCHOOL BUS INFORMATION AND SCHEDULES for the School Year, 1976-77

SCHOOL BOARD POLICY — PUPIL TRANSPORTATION

School bus transportation, subject to available seating space, may be provided for:

KINDERGARTEN—Pupils living 2 miles or more from the nearest elementary school in which a Kindergarten class has been established.

A.M.—Such pupils enrolled in the morning sessions will be transported to school on the regular bus runs. However, as the numbers do not warrant a special run at noon, the parents of such pupils may apply for a transportation allowance in lieu.

P.M.—The parents of such pupils enrolled in the afternoon sessions may apply for a transportation allowance in lieu of transportation to the afternoon sessions.

—Pupils will be transported home on regular after school bus runs. The parents of a pupil living in an isolated area 2 miles or more from the elementary school and for whom bus transportation cannot be provided, may apply for a transportation allowance.

GRADE 1-3—Pupils who live 2 miles or more from the nearest elementary school.

GRADE 4-7—Pupils who live 2½ miles or more from the nearest elementary school.

GRADE 8-12—Students who live 3 or more miles from the nearest secondary school.

Mileage distances are calculated by the most direct route on established roads or walk areas. The distance is computed from the home property access at the road to the entry at the school site.

SPECIAL CLASSES have been established at Cordova Bay Elementary School and at McTavish Elementary School. The parents of all pupils who will attend these classes have been advised.

The schedules are subject to change if circumstances require. All times given are approximate and subject to adjustment as heeded.

BUS PASSES:

School bus service is provided at the discretion of the Board of School Trustees. Those students who are eligible for school bus transportation will be issued bus passes. The passes must be available for inspection by the School Bus Driver at any time. School bus passes may be withdrawn by the Principal of the School attended by the student for conduct or behavior which is considered by the School Bus Driver as unnecessary, distracting or intentionally annoying.

Request for any additional information about the bus schedules should be referred to the School Board Office, Sidney, B.C. 656-1111.

Every effort has been made to establish the bus routes to serve the greatest number of students who are entitled to school bus transportation in accordance with existing School Board Policy.

NOTE: The schedules for morning trips only are as indicated. The afternoon trips will be the reverse of the morning trips, except that afternoon elementary school trips occur before the start of afternoon secondary trips.

Carol remembers Grade 1: "It was fun"

Going Back To School

"There's no need to worry about the first day of school, it's really going to be fun," says Carol Ann Campbell, 7, who will be going into Grade 2 on Tuesday.

She was interviewed by the Times Friday to give her reminiscences of life in Grade 1 at Tolmie Elementary.

"It was fun," she said. "Much better than kindergarten.

"In kindergarten all you do is play. But in Grade 1 there are more things to do like arithmetic and gym. Gym is the most fun, especially if they let you on the trampoline.

"Arithmetic is fun, too. Unless it gets hard and then it's not so much fun. I like arithmetic.

"I like to dress up on the first day of school.

"They let you wear slacks but I like to wear a dress for the first day. After a few days I'll wear slacks. The boys should be neat on the first day, too. The teachers like that.

"You don't have to take an apple to the teacher, unless you want to. Most of the kids take flowers. You should take them from your own garden.

"It is nice to bring a flower especially if it is the teacher's birthday or something. Teachers like it when you remember their birthday.

"But they don't like it if you talk. You should never talk and bug people because then the teacher will shout and that's not very nice.

"It is okay to talk sometimes but not all the time. The teacher likes to do most of the talking.

"You should take all your supplies with you on the first day of school. Be sure to take your crayons because you might get to do some coloring.

"It is best to take all your books and pencils on the first day so you have it and you don't have to worry.

"I don't worry about school. I like it all, but gym is the most fun. What I liked about kindergarten was we could sing and play.

"But I don't like to play all the time. That's why I liked Grade 1 better. And I'm going to like Grade 2.

"At least I hope so. I hope everybody likes school."

27,136 Return

First thing Tuesday morning, 27,136 elementary and secondary students in Greater Victoria will be trundling back to the books after a summer's respite from school.

Tuesday will see the opening of three new schools in District 61: the $4 million Spectrum community school; Lambrick Park elementary and Torquay elementary. Lambrick and Torquay are not fully completed after construction work stoppages through the summer, but enough classrooms have been readied and reading, writing and 'rithmetic will be taught just the same.

OLD CON JOB SUCCESSFUL

He was in his seventies and so was she, two Americans who met by chance at a tourist attraction in downtown Victoria.

He suggested they meet for lunch Friday and they did. But before lunching he suggested she come with him while he picked up some engravings and she did.

The city police report says she waited in a coffee shop while he went to collect the engravings in a store next door. He came back in a moment to say the store couldn't change an American $100 bill. Did she have any Canadian money?

She gave him the $60 in Canadian bills she had. He disappeared and city police said today there is still no sign of him.

Students Urge Campus Purchase

Students at Camosun College have asked the provincial government to speed up negotiations so the college can purchase its own Landsdowne campus from University of Victoria.

Camosun leases the site from UVic for $250,000 a year and Jan Gottfried, student society president wants to know why the provincial government lets one educational institution profit from another.

College bursar, Dean Winram says the land was originally bought by UVic for $1.

Meanwhile, he says, the $250,000 rent could be used to promote student services. Financial difficulties prompted the college to reject at least 400 eligible applications this year, he added.

Negotiations for the land transfer have been in progress for more than a year.

Under the leasing arrangements, handled through the provincial public works department, Camosun is also responsible for insurance, repairs and maintenance. The lease expires in June 1977.

UVic president Dr. Howard Petch maintained Friday that under the arrangements: "It's a real bargain."

Lucky Tourist

Douglas Hooft thought he had been robbed. Instead he was lucky.

The young Dutch traveller told Victoria police he had just stepped outside a Victoria youth hostel for a minute to repair his bike. When he went back inside someone had stolen his travel pouch containing close to $1,000 in travellers cheques and cash.

Not so.

Kenneth Woo, owner of the Arcade Grocery at 1279 Pandora, told police later Friday he found the pouch with funds intact lying on a counter of his store.

Hooft, who had moved on to Vancouver, is returning to Victoria today to recover his misplaced funds.

CUFA ANNOYED

Council Hit Over Zoning

Communities United for Action, the body representing Victoria's neighborhood associations, has rejected Victoria city council's explanations as to why the city cannot undertake blanket down-zoning of their areas.

The city's views were passed on to CUFA last week in letters from Mayor Mike Young and Ald. Alf Hood, chairman of the land-use planning and zoning committee.

But replies from two CUFA representatives this week indicate that council's explanations and policies are unacceptable to community groups.

Says Helen Oldershaw in her letter to the mayor: "We are most pleased to learn that you share our concerns which have urged CUFA to take positive action.

"We regret, however, you do not see the urgency in this matter and are willing to permit further destruction of our neighborhoods."

Young had earlier contended that the down-zoning sought by CUFA would create "bureaucratic chaos," but Oldershaw dismisses this as "not our problem."

"Indeed, we are aware that other Canadian cities have successfully introduced down-zoning bylaws without bureaucratic chaos," she adds.

A companion letter from CUFA member Russell Shillington to Hood says the alderman claimed that council shares CUFA concerns about the destruction of neighborhoods, yet the down-zoning proposal was rejected.

"Not only that, you failed to offer any real alternatives in stopping what has become an emergency situation."

Shillington sees another discrepancy between the alderman's earlier assurances and council actions.

Hood's letter had said that a common priority of the city and the associations was the development of neighborhood plans and the city's Official Community Plan.

But Shillington says the statement is "totally incompatible" with council's decision this week to delete frm the community plan a supplement dealing specifically with neighborhoods.

State Ferries At Standstill

Washington State ferries were at a standstill today but special contract talks resumed in Seattle in an effort to get the service back in operation.

Only limited service to two isolated areas was restord Friday to Vashon Island and the San Juans, after union officials verbally agreed to provide emergency service.

The State Public Employees Relations Commission Friday assigned mediator Williard Olsen to the shutdown and he is presiding over talks today.

Meanwhile the traditional long-weekend traffic rush at B.C. Ferries — expected to be heavier because of the Sidney-Anacortes shutdown — failed to materialize.

A B.C. Ferries spokesman said today that traffic was light Friday in comparison to other years and although vessels were sailing with full loads in the afternoon, there was no traffic backup at the Swartz Bay terminal.

The Tsawwassen terminal reported the longest wait Friday was one hour. The lack of congestion at both terminals continued today.

At Swartz Bay, for example, vessels handled all but a few campers and trailers on the early morning runs.

In Washington State, officials had counted on record passenger and vehicle traffic for the Labor Day weekend.

They predicted losses of $300,000 in revenue if deck officers, represented by the Masters, Mates and Pilots Union, remained off the job throughout the four-day holiday.

Friday, King County superior court Judge James W. Mifflin granted a temporary restraining order sending union members back to their jobs Friday afternoon, but messengers had been unable to deliver the Mifflin order to union officials.

A company spokesman said wage issues have already been settled and the dispute relates to interpretation of the contract language.

Slam Jam George

He May Be Short . . . But He's Fast on His Feet

Met a little man with a big nerve this week.

He is George Michael May, who has just set himself up in Victoria as a one-man private security force, complete with uniform and handcuffs.

A former employee of three different Victoria security firms, George was laid off in January and hasn't worked since. And so he decided to go it alone — a little man trying to make it against the big companies in the wide world of business.

George is bonded and licensed and is all set to go. All he needs is something to guard.

Resplendent in his smart green uniform with yellow trim and the words Michael Security on each shoulder, George has high hopes for his one-man force. He has his eyes on a contract to guard an office building and would like to be signed on by a government department.

But George Michael May isn't your usual security guard.

For one thing, the 31-year-old May, who is single and lives with his parents, is only five feet three inches tall and weighs a mere 145 pounds. And he admits that most security firms won't look at a guy of only 5' 3".

Despite his size, though, George has done a total of two years as a security guard and has even worked as a bouncer in a nightclub.

"I'm not scared when it comes down to trouble," he says with a grin. "In the nightclub when they saw my size and my uniform, people would often call me 'Pig' or 'Shortie' but it didn't bother me. I've had no judo training or anything, but I can move pretty good on my feet."

George admits a little wryly, though, that it's sometimes pretty tricky "moving" when you're attached to someone a lot heftier than you are.

"Oh, I've had my problems, all right," he says. "Once I had to put the handcuffs on a big guy and get him out of the nightclub and he just stood there and wouldn't budge. But I finally got him out of there okay.

"Often, too, I've had a jug of beer thrown over me when I've tried to lift the glasses off the table at closing time. But I survived. I've never had a black eye, either . . . I guess I've been lucky.

Funny enough, George has never had too much trouble handling people but he got hammered by a window once.

George grins again as he tells of the time a couple of years ago when he was working as a janitor at the Mediaeval Inn and he stuck his head out of the window only to have it come thundering down on his neck. He was pinned there yelling his head off for two hours until someone in the street below spotted him at 6 a.m. and came to his rescue.

max low

That earned him a big splash in the local papers and the instant nickname of Slam Jam George. But still he wasn't too bothered about it.

Security guard work is the last of a long line of jobs for George. He started as a gardener and later worked as a gas station assistant, a parking lot attendant and as a janitor.

But, if his size obviously makes it an uphill struggle, why does he choose to try to make it as a security guard?

"Well, to be honest with you, I've run out of jobs and I've run out of managements, too!" he says. "I've had it hard over the years and I've had a hard time finding jobs. But I believe I can make a go of this. I can be a guard and work for myself. And I can do it well."

And he believes he can do it cheaply.

"I'm advertising myself at $4 an hour and the big security companies pay their men $4.75 and charge you around $8 an hour for the service. Usually you work five days on either a 4 p.m. till midnight or a midnight to 8 a.m. shift. But I'm prepared to work six or even seven days a week if necessary and will even hire a backup man if I have to."

Naturally, George is anxious to get to work to recoup some of the expenses he has incurred — he has spent over $200 recently on advertising and on his uniform, which cost him $75.

"I had to buy handcuffs, too, and I always carry two sets on me, one clipped to my belt in the front and one in my rear pocket.

"The only things I don't have are dogs. One company asked me if I had a dog and I said: 'No, I'm a one-man, one-uniform outift.' "

Then George adds with a parting grin:

". . . though I'll probably have to get another uniform some time."

National Trust

National Trust Co. Ltd. reports net operating income of $6.7 million or $1.76 a share for the first nine months of the 1976 fiscal year compared with $5 million, or $1.33 a share for the corresponding period a year ago. The company statement also said that value of estates, trusts and agencies at $3.6 billion are up more than $763 million over the 1975 period and total assets administered by the company are up more than $916 million to $4.9 billion.

Indal

Indal Ltd. of Toronto has completed the acquisition of a 70-per-cent interest in Sealrite Industries Inc. of Lincoln, Neb., a manufacturer of wooden window frames and insulating glass units. Indal paid $1.8 million for the interest.

Bovis

Bovis Ltd. of Toronto reports unaudited second quarter 1976 loss of $1,317,000 bringing the loss to the end of the first half of 1976 to $3,514,000. This compares with a loss of $322,000 for the same period last year, a deterioration of $3,192,000.

Zapex

Zapata Exploration Company (Zapex) reports a net loss of $3,003,000 for the nine months ended June 30, 1976, compared with net income of $2,427,000 for the year-earlier period. Zapex said that it lost 32 cents per common and common equivalent share for the nine months in fiscal 1976, compared to income of 26 cents in 1975. On a fully diluted basis, the loss was 32 cents per share compared to income of 21 cents last year. The Texico based Petroleum Exploration firm had revenues of $4,457,000 for the nine months compared to $10,629,000 for the year-earlier period.

Okanagan

Okanagan Helicopters Ltd. reports net earnings of $629,000 or 59 cents a share for the six-month period ended July 31, compared with $637,000 or 64 cents a share for the same period in 1975.

John W. Pitts, chairman and president, said in a news release Friday that gross revenue for the first half of 1976 was $15.5 million, compared with $16.3 for the same period last year.

He said helicopter activity in several Canadian markets was down compared to last year's while foreign contracts and Arctic-area work remained strong.

The company paid a dividend of 15 cents a share to shareholders of record on July 30.

Okanagan is Canada's largest helicopter-operating company and one of the largest in the world.

AMC

American Motors Corp. is tentatively raising base prices of its 1977 model cars by an average 5.4 per cent and the prices of options for its new models by an average six per cent. Officials of the Detroit-based firm and its subsidiary, American Motors Canada Ltd., said the increase in base prices will range from $150 to $922 a vehicle.

Island Trustees in Doubt

Appointments of the three general trustees to the 'Islands' Trust expire at midnight without their replacements being announced.

Municipal Affairs Minister Hugh Curtis said Friday new appointments to the trust are "under consideration."

The trust was created in June, 1974, by the former NDP government and Hornby Island resident Hilary Brown. Salt Spring Island resident Marc Holmes and Dave Brousson, former Liberal MLA, were appointed in September.

Holmes said Friday terms of office for the 26 locally elected trustees from 13 islands included in the trust expires Jan. 1 and Curtis has assured them the trust will continue.

Curtis has also gone on record that some restructuring of the trust is necessary, but under the legislation new appointments must be made until the act is amended, said Holmes.

"There's some question," Holmes said, "about what the government proposes to do."

When the trust was created Curtis, then in opposition, took issue with its makeup. He said the board's voting power was weighted in favor of the appointed three trustees, compared to the two local elected trustees.

"The two elected members on each of the larger islands amounts almost to tokenism," he said then, also criticizing one section of the enabling act which permits no appeal to the courts on any of the board's decisions. The section, however, was never proclaimed.

Holmes said by the time trustees set up the mechanics and got around to asking to have the section enacted, the election was called.

Holmes said the three general trustees have been clearing up work and community plans for two islands, Gambier and Bowen, were completed last week.

Undercover Detective Bares All

VANCOUVER (CP) — A city vice squad detective posed as a policeman on the take for months while seeking evidence of suspected prostitution at the Penthouse Cabaret, county court Judge William Trainor was told Friday.

Crown counsel Roy Jaques described the role played by detective Norman Elliott at the trial of the owner-operators of the nightclub on charges of conspiring to live off the avails of prostitution and corrupting public morals.

Jaques told the judge that Elliott "was regarded in the penthouse as an officer taking bribes and taking advantage of the club's hospitality by becoming a habituee there night after night."

Det. Elliott testified that on July 15, 1975, Juan Santana, a club barman he had known for some years, told him the girls were not making any money and pointed out several prostitutes who were in the club.

Russ Chamberlain, lawyer for Celebrity Enterprises Ltd., Joseph Philliponi, Ross Filippone, Domenick Filippone, Jan Stedlac, Minerva Kelly and Rose Filippone objected that the conversation did not further the alleged conspiracy for the crown.

Jaques argued that the barman was "pointing out the wares of the establishment."

Judge Trainor asked how this could be when the barman knew Det. Elliott was a police officer and ostensibly not interested in sampling the club's wares.

The prosecutor explained that the detective was accepted around the club as a policeman gone bad and on the make for payoffs.

Det. Elliott testified he was an almost nightly visitor to the Penthouse from mid-May to December when it closed, on instructions from his superior officer.

He said he was known to almost everyone in the Penthouse as a member of the vice squad — "and that included the principals."

Victoria Loses Out On Recreation Cash

Applications from the city of Victoria for a total of $59,250 in provincial recreation grants have been rejected by Recreation Minister Grace McCarthy.

The applications for financing under the Community Recreational Facilities Fund Act were for three tennis courts in Topaz Park ($12,000); the first stage of the Victoria section of the proposed regional bikeway ($10,000); and a new activity New Horizons Group centre for the James Bay ($37,250).

The minister said in a letter to city manager Jim Bramley that all available funds for the 1976-77 fiscal year have been allocated and the city's request cannot be met.

She said a new program will be introduced in 1977, following a year-long study of recreational needs in the province.

It will be "in line with government's desire to exercise financial restraint and fiscal control while responding to the recreational needs of the people of British Columbia."

After considering McCarthy's letter Thursday the city finance committee recommended that the Topaz tennis project be shelved; that the city absorb the bikeway costs (for which Victoria has already approved $14,000 in first-phase capital costs); and that the New Horizons building be financed entirely from the James Bay Neighborhood Improvement Program.

Volunteer Firemen Return

HUDSON HOPE (CP) — The 30-man volunteer fire department in this northeastern British Columbia village went back to work late Friday after refusing to answer emergency calls for two days.

The men resigned Thursday to protest the village's decision not to make up wages for firemen laid off from work for injuries suffered while fighting a fire.

The council had refused to pay the difference between a firemen's regular wages and amounts paid by the Workers' Compensation Board if the fireman was unable to work because of an injury received firefighting.

The firemen went back to work after a meeting Friday with Mayor John Crookewit, who promised to take the issue back to the municipal council on Tuesday.

YOUNG GIRL FOUND

KAMLOOPS (CP) — A seven-year-old Vancouver girl was found in good condition Friday morning after being lost overnight in the bush near here dressed only in a bathing suit.

Temperatures dipped to 13 degrees Celsius during the night as more than 100 civilians, 45 armed forces personnel and 10 RCMP members aided by tracking dogs and a helicopter searched for Veronica Woods.

She had been missing since Thursday afternoon when Norman Milne, a B.C. Tel maintenance man, spotted her from a microwave station at about 11 a.m. Friday and called police.

Police said the girl had wandered about five miles from home but was "in pretty good spirits" and did not appear to be frightened.

$50M Prison for Surrey

SURREY (CP) — Mayor Ed McKitka said Friday that an institution combining training colleges for RCMP and penitentiary guards with a 120-prisoner correctional facility is in the works for this Fraser Valley municipality.

McKitka said the institution would cost between $50 million and $75 million and its prisoners would be in pre-release programs.

McKitka said the project would pay full property taxes and could get the municipality more housing.

The federal government has promised to phase out the B.C. Penitentiary in New Westminster and relocate prisoners in smaller institutions around B.C.

Fire Risk Low

The forest fire situation in British Columbia remains abnormally low, the B.C. Forest Service said Friday. There have been 772 fires this year, compared with 2,400 for the same period in 1975. The service estimated fire-fighting costs at $2.3 million, compared with $7 million for the same period a year ago.

Hydro to Return

VANCOUVER (CP) — Striking and locked out British Columbia Hydro employees will return to work Tuesday following a final agreement to end the dispute worked out Friday by Ron Bone, B.C. Labor Relations Board vice-chairman.

The 3,500-member Office and Technical Employees Union had earlier voted to accept contract terms proposed by industrial inquiry commissioner Hugh Ladner, but union officers wanted an assurance that the union would be able to renegotiate terms of any rollback ordered by the federal Anti-Inflation Board. The settlement calls for an increase of 15.9 per cent over 22 months.

Beating Death

KELOWNA (CP) — Shirley Ann Baker, 29, died early Thursday from head injuries received from a severe beating, an autopsy report concluded Friday. The woman also had been sexually assaulted, the report said.

Mrs. Baker, formerly of Kitchener, Ont., was found dead Thursday by her 3½-year-old son, in her home in Winfield, near this Okanagan city.

PNE Tops Million

VANCOUVER (CP) — Attendance at the Pacific National Exhibition passed one million Friday, despite a decrease in the day's total from last year. Friday's attendance was 83,204, down more than 16,000 from the same day in 1975, but the 14-day total of more than 1,022,000 is an increase of almost 42,000 over last year.

Booming Increase

VANCOUVER (CP) — Pacific lumber inspection bureau figures showing total waterborne lumber shipment from British Columbia ports to all major lumber markets was 174.6 million board feet for July, 1976, compared with 121.8 million board feet the previous year. Shipments for the first seven months of the year were 1,145.7 million board feet, compared with 893.7 million a year ago.

Bennett Pushes Fitness

VANCOUVER (CP) — Premier Bill Bennett has called on British Columbians to become more physically fit for a happier and healthier life.

In an off-the-cuff speech at a dinner Thursday night honoring British Columbia's Olympic athletes, Bennett said the athletes represented the cream of the provincial crop in physical fitness.

However, he said physical fitness is important to all British Columbians and constitutes "the best means of preventive health care."

Bennett said the provincial department of recreation now is conducting a study on how to improve recreation and athletic programs in the province, with a report to be ready some time in the fall.

He said one of the things he hopes the report will recommend is that recreational programs should be more closely co-ordinated with school with the hope of turning British Columbians to "lifetime sport."

NOTICE TO BUILDING OWNERS and DEVELOPERS
CONSTRUCTION INSURANCE for the OWNER and CONTRACTOR
Sponsored by the Joint Technical Planning Committee (Government and the Construction Industry)
An all-day discourse on construction insurance by E. L. (GENE) WISEMAN, of Leslie Wright & Rolfe Ltd., and Western Member of the Insurance Sub-Committee of the Canadian Construction Document Committee, on TUESDAY, SEPTEMBER 28, 1976, AT 9 A.M.
at the Newcombe Theatre, B.C. Museum, Exhibit Building, south end.
The seminar is open to all interested Architects, Building Owners, Contractors, Engineers, Developers, Subtrade Contractors, Bankers, Quantity Surveyors, Insurance Agents and Brokers, Mortgage and Finance Companies.
Lunch will be provided at the Empress Hotel.
Tickets for lunch and working papers, etc., $20 per person in advance by contacting the Construction Association of Victoria offices at 388-6471 before September 17, 1976.
The seminar will deal with the current state and the problems of construction insurance, including Property Insurance (All Risk, Builders Risk, Course of Construction or Sub-contractor Installation Floater), Comprehensive General Liability (Third Party), and Liability for Automobile (owned and non-owned), Contractor's Equipment, Marine and Air Conveyance, Errors and Omissions, Boiler and Machinery.
(Bring your own insurance policy and (or) requirements and see the pitfalls and omissions. Working paper examples will be provided.)
The lectures, totalling some 240 minutes, will also discuss definitions, principles of contract, work in existing buildings, responsibilities of agents and owners representatives, and the recent trend of wrap-up coverage to include subcontractors, designers, and construction managers.
All will be similar to seminars given in VANCOUVER, KAMLOOPS, AND PRINCE GEORGE, but with special emphasis given to the subsequently unveiled proposed revisions by the Insurance Sub-committee of the Canadian Construction Document Committee for use in standard contract forms, but yet awaiting final printing and issue.
Ample time will be given for general discussion.
Further inquiries may be made to E. J. Phillips at 388-6471 or S. E. Edgcombe at 387-5790.

Argentine Priests in Fear

WASHINGTON (WP) — An American priest jailed incommunicado wihout charges for two weeks in Argentina said Thursday that clergymen and others who work with the poor in that country live in fear of kidnapping, torture and death at the hands of rightist groups allied to the police and military.

Rev. James M. Weeks of the Missionaries of Our Lady of La Sallette, said at a news conference here that such "atrocities" are "tolerated and in some cases even perpetrated" by the Argentine government.

Weeks was arrested Aug. 3 with five Latin American seminarians who lived with him in Cordoba, Argentina's second largest city.

The priest and an American woman who witnessed the arrest, said men armed with machine guns broke into the house, blindfolded and tied up the six men, stole many of their possessions, ransacked the house and took the prisoners to the central police station.

The woman asked not to be identified because she fears reprisals against her associates in Argentina.

The American embassy obtained Weeks' release two weeks after his detention, but the five seminarians, all in their early 20s, remain in custody.

Weeks said at least nine priests and seminarians have been killed in Argentina recently, and added that he strongly suspects foul play in the death of Bishop Enrique Angelelli of La Rioja who reportedly was killed in an automobile accident Aug. 4.

"In our own parish," Weeks said at the news conference, "our cook's son, the seminary cook's brother, the man who delivers the paper, a high school boy, several factory workers ... have all been snatched from their homes as we were and have been missing for months; nobody knows where they are or whether they are dead or alive."

He said priests in La Roja, near where Bishop Angelelli died, are afraid to live in the rectories, and now stay with sympathetic families.

HOWE TO RUN, REGARDLESS OF THE ODDS

SALT LAKE CITY (UPI) — Rep. Allan Howe (Dem-Utah), convicted on sex charges, intends to seek re-election despite repudiation by his own party and public opinion polls showing he has no chance of winning.

Howe, a freshman Democrat convicted of trying to buy sex from two police decoy prostitutes, announced Friday he will stay in the congressional race.

He said he had carefully considered statements by party leaders that he was unelectable and public opinion polls showing he would be overwhelmed.

Carter's Own Tax Break 'Shows Need for Reform'

PLAINS, Ga. — Jimmy Carter said Friday that the tax break he received last year for installation of a modern peanut-sheller "illustrates vividly the need for tax reform."

Carter paid only 12.8 per cent of his $136,138 income, or $17,484, in federal taxes in 1975 while President Ford paid more than 37 per cent of his income in federal taxes. While some of the Democratic presidential candidate's aides have acknowledged that this disclosure could cause him at least minor political harm, Carter said Friday he was "not embarrassed" by the low percentage of taxes he paid.

"Over the last 10 years I paid roughly 25 to 30 per cent of my annual income in taxes," Carter said. "Last year was a special case because he had a very large plant that cost almost a million dollars installed."

Carter could be eligible for a substantial tax credit this year as well, because he is adding a large warehouse to his peanut processing plant and making other improvements.

But the Democratic nominee, who in his campaigning has referred to the tax system as "a disgrace" which is badly in need of reform, said Friday he favored revision of the tax credit which had benefited him.

"I personally would like to see investment tax credits, for instance, which were the reason my taxes were not as high last year as they have been in the past ... predicated almost entirely on the number of people that are put back to work," Carter said. "Right now, a lot of investment tax credits given to businessmen, like myself don't relate at all to how many new jobs are provided."

U.S. Plans to Deport Sun Moon's Followers

WASHINGTON (WP) — Immigration authorities around the country have been ordered to take "immediate steps" to begin deportation proceedings against hundreds of foreign followers of the Rev. Sun Moon, the controversial anti-Communist Korean evangelist.

Whether because of the immigration order or their own plans, most or all are expected to leave the country voluntarily in the next several months, following Moon's "Bicentennial God Bless America Festival" Sept. 18 at the Washington Monument.

The roughly 700 foreign followers of Moon working for him here will return to their native countries of Korea and Japan, according to officials of Moon's Unification Church, while his American disciples are preparing to follow their leader to Europe next year.

The Washington Post has received reports from parents of American children who have left home to follow Moon that their children have written home for passports and documents, such as birth certificates, needed to obtain passports.

David Carliner, a lawyer representing the church in immigration litigation, said Friday that Moon is "planning to take most of his teams out of the United States around March 1. The plans are to go into a further phase of an international crusade in Europe on March 1."

Neil Salonen, president of the Unification Church of America, Inc., said in a separate interview, "There is no master plan for a mass exodus on March 1," but, "a number of foreign members will certainly go home by that time."

Salonen said that "most" of Moon's foreign followers here "will certainly go home" by March 1, he said.

"We are planning to shift our focus to an international level," Salonen said. "I imagine we'll have a conference with Rev. Moon after this festival and draw up plans ... There's an expectation by members in our group that there will be frequent and unexpected opportunities to travel."

Cancer Fear In 'Gas Tree' Proposal

SEATTLE (AP) — A California chemist's idea of cultivating trees that could be used to produce gasoline could pose a cancer problem, a Seattle scientist says.

Dr. Melvin Calvin had told the American Chemical Society it might be possible to grow a "gasoline tree," and named as possibilities trees called lathyrus and tirucalli, from the family euphorbia.

But Dr. John Scribner, an environmental cancer investigator at the Fred Hutchinson Cancer Research Center, said Thursday, "There could be plenty of problems for the people in the industry, particularly those working with the actual plants."

He cited studies done in London and reported in 1961 that showed tirucalli was the worst of 11 plant samples in terms of producing tumors in mice.

A German study last year showed toxic and skin irritation problems from gathering seeds of lathyris, which is used in Germany to produce seed oil. It also produced tumors in animals, he said.

LEGIONNAIRE DISEASE BLAMED FOR DEATH

HARRISBURG, Pa. (AP) — A Philadelphia hotel manager has been counted by state officials as the 29th person to die of the mysterious legionnaire's disease, but his doctor disputes the diagnosis.

Dr. David Flinker said Friday an autopsy showed J. Bruce Rogers, 60, of Moorestown, N.J., died from a blood clot caused by an aneurism on the left side of his brain.

But a spokesman for the Pennsylvania health department in Harrisburg said Rogers "fits the criteria" of victims of the pneumonia-like illness that struck persons associated with an American Legion convention in Philadelphia last month. Besides those who have died, 150 have become ill with similar symptoms.

Meanwhile, federal epidemiologists said in their most compreshensive report to date on the disease that a survey showed no evidence of a continuing epidemic.

A-G Gives Kelley Grade-A Report

WASHINGTON (WP) — Attorney-General Edward Levi has sent President Ford a report giving Clarence Kelley generally high marks for his performance as FBI director and making no recommendation that Kelley be fired, justice department sources said Friday.

Ford requested the report Wednesday after Kelley became embroiled in allegations that he had improperly accepted gifts and personal services from FBI subordinates.

According to the sources, Levi's report apparently makes no explicit recommendation about whether Kelley should be fired or reprimanded. The aim, the sources said, was to leave Ford a free hand in deciding Kelley's future.

But, the sources added, the report — described as a factual account of Kelley's three years in office and the circumstances of the current controversy — has a basically positive tone. One source characterized it as containing the "presumption" that Levi thinks Kelley should be retained.

The uncertainty of Kelley's future was triggered by his admission Tuesday that he had accepted gifts from the FBI's top executive echelon and his office staff.

He also said that a pair of valances — wooden frames covering the tops of windows — had been constructed by the FBI's special exhibits section and installed in his Bethesda, Md., apartment shortly after he took office in July 1973.

HIGH RATIO MORTGAGE LOAN
Since 1964, a number of new mortgage plans have been made available by the private lending institutions which enable you to borrow up to 95% of the value of the lot and house. Prior to that year, a Canadian buying a house under a conventional mortgage had to either come up with 25% of the house value, or obtain a second mortgage or assume the original mortgage.
Lending institutions operating under the legislation as well as chartered banks are now authorized to make mortgage loans over 75% of value provided the excess is insured.
As an example, loan amounts obtainable could be on the following formula: 95% of the first $35,000 to $40,000 value; 75% of the next $15,000 to $20,000 value; and 50% of value over this. These amounts are given in dollar ranges because they may vary with the lender and the current mortgage market.
A mortgage insurance premium is payable by the borrower and may be spread out by adding it to the mortgage. The mortgage insurance premium on single family and duplexes is 1%.

Fahrenheit Temps on Radio Seen as Backward Step

OTTAWA (CP) — The chairman of the federal metric commission said Friday he regards a B.C. cabinet minister's request to provincial radio stations to use fahrenheit and Celsius temperatures as a backward step in the march to metric measurements.

"I regard it as a rather retrograde step and believe it would slow down the learning process for Canadians," Clare Bolger said in an interview.

Grace McCarthy, B.C. recretion and travel industry minister, said she is asking radio stations in her province to translate Celsius into fahrenheit because metric weather reports are scaring off American tourists.

"There are other factors at work in the tourist trade and I would doubt that the use of Celsius is resulting in a drop-off of tourists from the United States," Bolger said.

It is the policy of the commission — which has no enforcement powers but co-ordinates the introduction of the metric system in the country — to have radio stations report weather in metric terms only.

"Our policy is to use Celsius alone because it is the simplest learning process and not to continuously translate fahrenheit into Celsius," he said.

The metric board of the United States government is scheduled to introduce metric weather reports in their own country this fall anyway.

Civil Service Careers Come First

OTTAWA (CP) — A study prepared for the federal government but not yet officially released indicates that civil servants are more interested in advancing their own careers than in almost any other aspect of their work.

The study, dealing with internal communications in the civil service, was prepared by a Toronto management consulting firm and was based on a survey of personnel in six government departments. It aimed to find out what civil servants wanted to hear, through what medium and from whom.

Not surprisingly, the survey found a greater interest in official language programs on the part of French-speaking respondents than from English-speaking respondents.

For example a treasury board announcement of plans to pay bilingualism bonuses was labelled a humiliation of the public service by Jean-Claude Parrot, national vice-president of the Canadian Union of Postal Workers Friday.

The annuncement contains no commitment on how much will be paid, when, or to whom, Parrot said.

Que. Political Merger Is Off

QUEBEC (CP) — The alliance between the Union Nationale and Popular National Party (PNP) broke down Friday as UN leader Rodrigue Biron announced the cancellation of the merger after a month of talks aimed at setting details of the plan.

Biron said Jerome Choquette, former Liberal cabinet minister who last fall decided to try his luck establishing the PNP as a third political force for Quebec, had lost all credibility because of his "turnabouts and untimely actions."

Biron, who succeeded Maurice Bellemare — sole sitting UN member in the national assembly — as leader of the party last spring, invited PNP supporters to join the older party.

He said the PNP had not respected terms of the agreemet by which the two provincial parties were to merge next month into a single federalist opposition force.

Under the agreement, Choquette was made responsible for drafting the proposed party platform, a task which he did little to fulfill, Biron said.

The UN leader revealed the text of a letter dated Tuesday in which he gave Choquette until noon Friday to promise to respect the terms of the merger agreement. No reply was received, Biron said.

Choquette, who had threatened Wednesday to dissolve the merger because of the refusal of UN officials to hold a leadership convention for the new party, was unavailable for comment.

Choquette was originally to have run against Biron for the leadership in a closed-ballot race, but UN officials said recently the party would go into the next election with its current leader.

NANAIMO ROAD OVER CEMETERY

NANAIMO — City council may be faced with a grave undertaking — ripping up a road through a cemetery.

Mrs. Joanne Maguire claims a search for the graves of her grandparents in the Nanaimo city cemetery indicate a road has been built over the dedicated land.

She said no headstones were erected when her grandparents were buried in the early 1950s.

Mrs. Maguire said she obtained a copy of the blueprints of the cemetery and her suspicions were confirmed.

GARDENING
jack beastall

August is vacation time, but September is the busiest gardening month of the year.

The experienced gardener spends the next week formulating some kind of a schedule for the September work.

As home gardeners our main problem is ourselves. We tend to relax and enjoy the last of summer instead of starting the work to be done.

Then we awaken one morning to find it is too late.

Relaxation, enjoyment, and gardening can be combined if we realize the work that has to be done, that we have 30 days in which to reach our goal, and that putting off until tomorrow is an excellent way of getting nothing done.

For some gardeners the major event in September will be the seeding of a new lawn. In this part of the country it is done over Labor Day weekend.

If you have followed the articles in this column since last spring, everything is now ready and the job will take less than two hours.

Old lawns are worked on the same weekend. Hollows are filled, perennial weeds dug out to remove the roots, and areas reseeded if necessary.

Established lawns now recieve thir last feeding for the season. Use a complete lawn fertilizer compounded for west coast lawns, such as 10-6-4 or 10-4-7 both having enough acid components to keep our soils in the right condition for growing grass.

Bramble fruits need attention as soon as the fruits have been picked. Raspberries, logans and blackberries have the canes which bore fruit this year cut out just below soil level. Everbearing raspberries are done as soon as the fall crop is picked.

New canes of raspberries now six feet tall are left until most of the leaves have fallen, then the tips are cut off to a convenient height.

Sufficient new canes on logans and other brambles are selected for next year's crop, bundled together loosely and tied to the lower wire of the trellis about 12 to 18 inches above soil level. There they remain for the winter.

Time now to check over the spring flowering bulbs if they were lifted this year. Clean the bulbs of dried soil but don't damage the skins (or jackets). Rub off the old dry roots with the thumb.

Narcissus should be replanted as soon as possible in September, tulips and hyacinths in early October, and the "Dutch" iris as late as the soil can be worked in your garden.

When planting spring flowering bulbs, put them in groups of 12 in places where they will not be in the way when you wish to set out annuals next year. They cannot be moved before late June, whereas annuals have to be planted out in May. Plan carefully and save yourself troubles in spring.

Bulbs for indoor flowering also need attention now. Wash and scrub the pots (shallow half-pots are best); prepare a mix of screened compost two parts, soil one part, and enough sand to make good drainage.

Only the early flowering varieties will flower by Christmas. Crocus will not do well at house temperatures.

The pots of bulbs are buried outdoors in cool soil for a period of eight weeks to make a good root system before being brought into house temperature. Eight weeks from mid-September brings up to mid-November, none too early to start the actual forcing in the temperature of the house.

Perennials which flower in spring and early summer can be lifted, divided and replanted now. They will make wonderful roots in the next six weeks and give a full display next year. Plant back the divisions in groups of five or seven to obtain a showing everyone will admire.

Later flowering perennials are worked on as they go out of flower, aiming at getting them all reset before mid-October. New perennials are added to the garden as fast as they can be obtained.

The holes for new shrubs, ornamental and fruiting trees, and small fruits, are prepared before the end of September while the soil can be easily worked without spoiling its texture, and the piles of soil covered with polythene after the first rains to keep them reasonably dry for working around the roots with the hands when the new plants arrive from the nursery in October.

One perennial plant that is not touched in fall is the Primula, either in the form of the Primrose or the polyanthus. These are divided and replanted as soon as flowering has finished in the spring.

Paeonies have a very short rest period lasting from September 15 to October 15. They can be moved or divided only between these dates if it is necessary, otherwise they are best left alone where they are. The paeony has been known to continue for 50 years in one place without lifting.

Tree paeonies differ from the ordinary herbaceous varieties. The divisions as purchased are grafted to a tuber of the common peony, and it is important that the point of grafting be three inches below soil level, which means that the tuber is often much deeper. The division makes its own roots from the buried portion of the stem. A well drained soil in winter is essential to success.

Small sowings of radish, lettuce, or any vegetable which matures within 45 days, are made as needed.

Flowers-of-spring cabbage plants are set out now. This variety makes a loose leaf cabbage for use in March, and tight heads during April, going to seed rapidly in the warmer weather of May. This is not a cabbage to plant out in spring although often seen offered for sale at that time.

If you have a late spring soil it is wise to make a raised bed now ready for early vegetable sowings in March and April. Choose a warm spot in the vegetable garden and dig a ditch down to hardpan around a small area, throwing the soil on top of the present level. Cover with polythene in February and the soil will be ready for sowing in March.

Storage space for fruits, vegetables, gladiolus bulbs, chrysanthemum roots, dahlia tubers and any other roots, bulbs or tubers needing protection from rain over winter, should be prepared as soon as possible.

This job is forgotten until needed and then it is usually in poorer weather and the job is not done properly. Scrub all containers that were used last year, either for fruits or roots, so that no disease spores are present to contaminate the new crops.

As mentioned at the outset, August is vacation time, but September is the busiest month of the year in the garden. We work with one eye on the plants the other on the weather, and hope we can get everything done in time.

One way or another Victoria McDonalds certainly make their toils interesting even if they are slowly driving their fans up the wall doing it.

They wait so long to win, maybe they enjoy overtime. Five of their playoff games now have gone into extra time.

Friday night they were up to their old tricks but with a different tack.

It took them overtime to defeat Burnaby Cablevision 18-16, in the fifth game of their best-of-seven Western Canada Major Junior "A" Lacrosse League final.

But this time they were never behind as they took a three to two lead in the series. Whereas, just last Sunday when they beat Burnaby for the first time, they also needed extra time, and in that game they never led until they won.

Still, they won, and that's all that counts.

Because now all they have to do is beat Burnaby at New Westminster Sunday in the sixth series game and they can open their Minto Cup final series against Bramalea Excelsiors at Esquimalt Sports Centre, Friday, Sept. 10. Bramalea eliminated defending champion Peterborough 22-15 Friday to win the Ontario Lacrosse Association series 4-2.

If they don't, they'll be back against the Cables at Esquimalt Tuesday.

And don't bet there won't be a decider. It took the Bakers seven games to get by New Westminster in the semi-finals and they had to go all out to win the last three games in that one after trailing 3-1 in that series. In this set they were down 2-0 after losing the first two games and Friday they were ahead 10-4 and coasting along when Burnaby pulled the plug and almost took them down the drain.

And forget the officials, too. They have a job to do even if they don't always do it well. Like Friday. It wasn't the calls they made that annoyed people, particularly the rival coaches, but the ones they didn't make that puzzled most.

Burnaby coach Dan Mattison is already on record as saying of the two previous McDonalds' wins that "penalties killed us." Well on Friday he got it all back-in spades and it was Bakers' coach Bill Munroe who had the right to holler. He did.

The key play, perhaps, if a non-penalty can become a key play, came halfway through the third period with the Macs on top 13-10 and still in control although a hollering Gerry Cadwallader became embroiled with Dan Perrault and commited the cardinal sin of grabbing Perrault's face mask. That cost Cadwallader five minutes plus the two he and Perrault got for the fight.

Moments later, Kevin Alexander got his helmet ripped off in front of the Burnaby goal. No penalty. Alexander then got called for a follow-through on a shot and the Bakers were two men shy and with Cables about to enjoy the odd man for the following five minutes as well, or until two goals were scored. whichever came first. And they took full advantage. They got three goals.

Derek Dickson scored a power-play goal with Alexander off and Perrault and Dan Wilson followed with Cadwallader in the penalty box to tie the score at 13-13.

Alexander, who finished with five goals, appeared to have given Macs the edge when he faked two Burnaby players and went in alone to beat Rod Banister at 19:01 and put the Bakers on top 14-13.

But no. Dickson picked up the ball from the faceoff and returned the favor to force overtime.

In the extra sessions, it was Kennie King who put McDonalds ahead only to have Randy Delmonico tie it again. Then came a break for McDonalds. Eric Cowieson of Burnaby dropped his stick while checking Steve Buckley. When Cowieson sinned by stooping down to pick it up, Buckley broke for the goal, took a perfect bounce pass from Bob Cool and beat Banister easily. Cool fired the winner less than a minute later and Ken Sim of Cables and rookie Jim Boyd of McDonalds finished off the scoring.

Czechs Down Soviet; Sweden Topples U.S.

By GLENN COLE
The Canadian Press

The Soviet Union national hockey team's coaches have stressed that the Soviet entry in this fall's Canada Cup tournament is an experimental squad.

Friday night, the Soviet coaches were ready to admit the inexperience of some of their players hurt them as the Soviets dropped a 5-3 decision to Czechoslovakia before 16,100 fans at the Forum. Earlier in Toronto, Sweden defeated the United States 5-2, scoring all five goals in a penalty-filled first period.

The Soviets were without Valeri Kharlamov, Aleksandr Yakushev, Boris Mikhailov, Vladimir Shadrin and Vladimir Petrov, opting to go instead with some younger players more suited to the North American style of play.

"Our team was made up just before the tournament," said Robert Cherenov, one of the Soviet coaches. "It affected the team play. The experience was the main difference between our two teams.

"The Czech team has made very few changes. They did replace some older players with a few younger ones and the combination of experience and youth worked well for them tonight."

Centre Milan Novy, who has been with the Czechs for three years, led the defending International Ice Hockey Federation champions with two goals.

Frantisek Pospisil, Bohuslav Stastny and Vladimir Martinec added single goals for the winners with Aleksandr Maltsev, Helmut Balderis and Vladimir Kovin replied for the Soviets.

Novy opened the scoring with 12:09 gone in the first period with the teams playing five aside. Pospisil added the Czechs second goal with 39 seconds remaining in the period.

Soviet goaltender Vladislav Tretiak complained to referee Bruce Hood that Josef Augusta had interfered with him on the play, but the National Hockey League official allowed the goal to stand.

Maltsev scored a shorthanded goal early in the middle session and the Soviets shot wide on a few good tries before Novy popped his second goal with 22 seconds remaining.

Both teams scored twice in the final 20 minutes.

Czech coach Karel Gut credited good team play for the winning effort. The Czechs outshot the Soviets 30-18 but Gut said his team was still having trouble adapting to the smaller Canadian ice surface.

"It is quite different. It is very hard to play on it and I think it affected the performance of both team."

In Toronto, veteran referee Bill Friday was criticized by U.S. coach Bob Pulford.

Four of the five Swedish goals were power-play efforts as Sweden took advantage of eight minors assessed the Americans.

Display by Nastase Rare, Outrageous

FOREST HILLS, N.Y. (AP) — Adriano Panatta was upset, Arthur Ashe was humiliated, Evonne Goolagong was brilliant and Ilie Nastase was outrageous.

Nastase, the volatile Romanian, took on Hans-Jurgen Pohmann of West Germany at the U.S. Open tennis championship Friday before a capacity crowd — 12,553 paid — and in a second-round match on centre court, Nastase put on a performance seldom seen at the staid West Side Tennis Club.

"He . . . spit at me," a bewildered Pohmann said. "It was unbelievable."

Nastase was in rare form, fighting with linesmen and arguing with fans. He menaced a photographer with his racket, slammed balls into the stands, flung obscene gestures in all directions, stalled and stomped around.

By the time the 2½-hour match wa sover, with the Romanian winning 7-6, 4-6, 7-6, the angry crowd was on its feet screaming insults and waving fists at Nastase in a manner more suited to roller derby than tennis.

Nastase had nothing to say to the media after the match, but he had plenty to say to 29-year-old Pohmann, who played the last several points with severe leg cramps.

"He came at me in the dressing room," Pohmann said. "His eyes were not normal, you know. He started screaming 'Where are your cramps? Where are your cramps?' He pushed me and called me Hitler. I said 'Get away from me. Go back to Romania.'

"Then his brother stepped between us. I think he should be fined and suspended for five years. I never saw anything like that before."

Nastase's antics overshadowed an upset turned in by 19-year-old Bill Scanlon, the U.S. college champion from Trinity University, Tex. Scanlon shocked the fourth-seeded Panatta 6-3, 7-6 in an early-morning match.

Ashe, enduring a prolonged slump and never very comfortable on clay, got a beating from Jan Kodes of Czechoslovakia, 6-1, 6-2.

Goolagong, seeded second, waltzed past Val Ziegenfuss 6-3, 6-1 with a dazzling display of graceful tennis.

The Everest Of Swims Has a Hall of Famer

They named Cliff Lumsden to the Canadian Sports Hall of Fame last week. They should have done it years ago. Like 20, for instance.

Yes, it was that long ago when Lumsden was drawing headlines right here in our town. Surely you remember the Juan de Fuca swim craze of 1955 and 1956. It was Stuart Keate, publisher of the Times, who started it, and it had the town in a tizzy especially during the summer of 1956.

That's when the Times teamed up with the Toronto Telegram to bring Marilyn Bell to Victoria. Marilyn had become "Canada's Sweetheart" (when it comes to a circulation build-up, newsmen can use any phrase they want) when in 1954 at the tender age of 16 she became the first person to swim across Lake Ontario. It had taken her something like 20 hours and 56 minutes in the numbing cold with loathsome lampreys clamped on her arms and legs at times.

Marilyn made $50,000 out of that swim, later pocketed another $15,000 for becoming the then-youngest person to swim the English Channel. And now she would tackle—what was it Times sportswriter Denny Boyd used to refer to it as? Oh, yes, "The Everest of Swims." That was the test across the Strait, to or from Port Angeles. Whichever.

Marilyn made her first bid on Aug. 10 and it was almost her last. She passed out in the water about 6½ miles from Port Angeles from sheer exhaustion, and her face had sunk below the surface before her coach Gus Ryder finally hauled her into the escort boat.

Thirteen days later, Marilyn tried it again, from Port Angeles, and made it. That didn't make her the first person to accomplish the feat but it did earn her $30,000, $20,000 for the first aborted try and $10,000 for the successful venture.

This is where Lumsden comes in. He had come to Victoria with Miss Bell and Ryder to act as a consultant, pacer, assistant coach, you name it. Lumsden had been a big name in marathon swimming in the east and if he had one failing or attribute, whichever, it was that he couldn't look at a piece of water without wanting to test it.

Besides, the city media had been harsh in its criticism of his friend Ryder for his handling of Marilyn's first swim.

Lumsden planned to vindicate Ryder and there was little fanfare when he left the Canadian side on his unscheduled attempt on Aug. 16. Matter of fact, he had only a tug and a rowboat with him when he left, and nobody on the American side knew he was coming so there was no one there to meet him when he arrived.

It was Boyd and an unidentified tug crew member who made up the greeting party. They jumped overboard in three feet of icy water, scrambled ashore and hoisted a lantern on a rock to steer Lumsden in.

Lumsden, whose legs had cramped up part way across, forcing him to use only his arms until he regained the use of his legs, uttered these historic words when all was done.

"Hi. Christ, I'm glad that's over."

So, now he's a Hall of Famer as is Miss Bell. But how about Bert Thomas? He was the first Strait conqueror, and character. A Tacoma logger and a former U.S. Marine frogman who once had completed a 30-mile swim under combat conditions, Thomas was a bear for punishment. He tried four times from this side, then slipped over to Port Angeles to come at it from the back door. That was in 1955. He slipped into the water near Ediz Hook in the sunset and arrived on this side in the dawn.

When Victorians heard he was on his way, they flocked to the shoreline and built bonfires to show him the way in.

Thomas was a bit of a bumpkin, too. He had a diet of powdered dexadrine pills, glucose and rum which he inhaled through a 12-foot length of garden hose; and, with about 200 yards to go, he flipped over on his back and smoked a cigar. That probably doesn't mean much except that normally he was a non-smoker.

He said he had lost the use of one leg four miles out, that he had been trailed by a five-foot shark, that he had kicked the intruder in the head to frighten him off and that he planned to break every marathon mark there was, which he didn't.

"But that's only a small bit of the stuff we lived with 20 years ago and which all came back because one of the principals, Cliff Lumsden is now a Hall of Famer.

And now you all know partly why.

Bates in Final Round

NIAGARA FALLS, Ont. — Defending champion Victoria Bates and Toronto Globals appeared headed on a collision course for the 1976 Canadian senior men's softball championship as play began in the final double-knockout playoff round today.

Bates finished on top of the Red Division with a 5-0 record and Globals had a similar record to lead the Blue Division.

Bates were scheduled to meet Saskatoon K and K in the opening game of the playoffs today while Globals were matched against the winner of a game between Niagara Falls and Nova Scotia.

The host Niagara Falls club and Nova Scotia each had 3-1 records entering final round-robin action this morning with the winner gaining second place in the Red division behind Bates. Three other games were also scheduled but none had a bearing on the final top placings.

Bates won their final game with ease as pitcher Dave Ruthowsky fired a three-hitter in fashioning an 8-0 shutout over Newfoundland. It was Ruthowksy's second win of the tournament.

He gave up all his hits in the first inning and then bore down to get out of that jam and was unhittable the rest of the route. He struck out 14, the tournament high.

Bob Burrows and Norm McLeod hit home runs for Bates while Reg Underwood had a pair of singles to lead the nine-hit attack.

In earlier games, Bates defeated Northwest Territories 5-2, Alberta 8-0, Niagara Falls 5-1, and Nova Scotia 12-1.

In other action Friday, Saskatchewan (Saskatoon) needed an extra inning to get by Charlottetown 4-1, while Nova Scotia had to go nine innings before eking out a 1-0 victory over Alberta. Dale Gunderson and Rob Guenter shared mound duties for Saskatchewan and allowed only one hit.

Toronto's Reg Martin and Pete Landers also combined for a one-hit shutout in Globals' 11-0 victory over New Brunswick as Wally Cooper, Bob Walton and Garry Raycraft hit home runs.

Niagara Falls' pitcher Dick Balint was also in fine form and had a no-hitter going until the seventh against N.W.T. when pinch hitter Ray Duret led off with a home run. Balint struck out nine in the 7-1 victory.

If Bates win their playoff game today, they won't play again until Sunday. However, if they lose, then they will meet the loser of the other playoff games tonight at 5:30.

Bates won the title last year by defeating Oshawa Tonys and Landers in the final. They then picked up Landers who helped them win a share of the world title in New Zealand and now it is likely they will meet their old foe (friend?) again.

"The difference this time around," said coach Joe Patterson before the tournament," is that we know we can beat him. Until last year we weren't sure."

Radio station CJVI is broadcasting all Bates games.

Island Juniors Collect Trophy

Michele Fulton of Vancouver fired an 80 at Glen Meadows Friday to win the Vancouver Island junior women's golf championship but Island golfers otherwise held their own.

A team composed of Jill Johnston, Salt Spring; Joan Robertson, Royal Colwood; Tracy Pierpoint, Uplands; and Megan Moore of Cedar Hill, defeated the mainland team to capture the Marilyn Palmer team championship trophy.

Lauda Wants Back

VIENNA (AP) — World champion driver Niki Lauda, seriously injured in a crash on a West German race course Aug. 1, hopes to start at next week's Grand Prix of Monza, Italy, an Austrian newspaper said today.

The newspaper, Kuirier, said Lauda told of his plans prior to his departure to Italy on Thursday.

The Austrian auto race driver said he was pushed into this decision because of the victory by Britain's James Hunt last Sunday, which left Hunt two points behind Lauda in the world championship standings. Lauda has 58 points.

When Lauda's Ferrari crashed, the Austrian received severe burns and a seared lung and needed skin grafts.

Kuirier reporter Helmut Zwickl said Lauda, undergoing a rigorous reconditioning program, was just returning from a run in a nearby forest. Spotting the reporter, he immediately went into hiding, saying: "One has to be careful. All over the place snipers are waiting."

Lauda was referring to photographers.

Lauda's head is clean shaven, still showing bloody crusts. He had no eyebrows and the grafted skin was visible under his eyes.

His left ear still was a problem. It was scorched away when his Ferrari burst into flames. Only a bit of cartilage remained.

"It's a hell of a pain," Lauda said.

Lauda said tests next Tuesday at Ferrari's Florano headquarters will show whether he will be able to start at Monza.

Hubie Finds a Way To Subdue Monster

AKRON, Ohio (AP) — Hubert Green is on the verge of avenging heartbreaks from an old nemesis, Firestone South's monster, and his reward could be his biggest payday—$100,000.

Firestone's 7,180 yards so shook Green in the first four tournaments he played that he vowed: "I'll never come back until I learn to play golf a little bit better. This course is too long for me."

After a two-year hiatus, the skinny Alabaman is tangling with the monster again. He's winning. He tamed it for a five-under 65 Friday and a one-shot lead mid-way through the revamped $300,000 World Series of Golf.

Green, aided by a new brand of ball that he said added 15 yards to his drives off the tee, had a one-stroke lead over veteran Dave Hill, who had to overcome a balky putter for a second-round 70 and a 137 total. The skinny, 38-year-old was so frustrated by his putting that he occasionally went at it cross-handed and, using that unorthodox grip, missed a 15-footer on the final hole that would have tied him for the lead.

Jack Nicklaus, who won four World Series titles under its old four-man, 36-hole format, scrambled out of almost constant trouble with a 70 and a 138 total, just two shots back.

Nicklaus, who had to fight his way back from a double-bogey five, was tied with Masters champ Ray Floyd, who had another 69.

Takashi Murakami, the Japanese star who shared the first-round lead with Hill, lost his delicate touch around the greens but benefitted from some lucky bounces and a phenomenal stroke of fortune when his approach on the par-five 16th hit the pond that guards the green and skipped across the water, ran up the bank and onto the green. He finished with a 72 and was the only other man under par in this elite event at 139.

Al Geiberger shot a 67 and was alone at 140.

It Was Seaver's Turn

By The Associated Press

Tom Seaver struck out eight batters—giving him 202 strikeouts for the season and his ninth consecutive year with more than 200 strikeouts—as New York Mets edged slumping Philadelphia Phillies 1-0 in a National League baseball game Friday night.

But Philadelphia's Mike Schmidt was not impressed.

"We are the best team in baseball," said Schmidt, the major league's co-leader in home runs with 32. "It was his (Seaver's) turn to win a close one."

Seaver struck out Schmidt three times and Greg Luzinski, the Phillies' other slugger, twice as he raised his record to 11-10, allowing just four hits.

Meanwhile, Pittsburgh Pirates swept a doubleheader from Montreal, tightening up the East Division race and knocking Expos manager Karl Kuehl out of a job.

The Pirates, making a frantic dash at the East Division-leading Phillies, won their eighth and ninth games in a row while the Phillies lost their seventh in a row. That slashed Philadelphia's lead over Pittsburgh to just 7½ games. The Pirates have shaved 7½ games of the Phillies' lead in the last nine days.

Pittsburgh edged Montreal 9-7 in the first game and crushed the Expos 7-2 in the nightcap. Kuehl was fired immediately after the second game, Montreal's 15th loss in their last 17 games.

Asked if his dismissal was unexpected, Kuehl said: "You can't be surprised with the record we have."

The Expos have won just 43 games while losing 85, the worst record in the majors.

The Dodgers posted their 15th victory in their last 17 games as Ron Cey drove in three runs with a single and a two-run homer to end Houston's seven game winning streak. Los Angeles starter Burt Hooton, 9-12, picked up the victory while Larry Dierker, 13-13, suffered the loss.

A three-run homer by pinch-hitter Dan Driessen in the eighth inning broke a 5-5 tie and powered Cincinnati to its victory over Atlanta. Driessen's sixth homer of the season scored Cesar Geronimo and Dave Concepcion and gave reliever Rawley Eastwick, 10-5, the victory.

Two home runs by Rick Monday and a tie-breaking pinch single by rookie Wayne Tyrone lifted the Cubs over St. Louis.

In the American League, Milwaukee outfielder-first baseman Mike Hegan belted a two-run double in the first inning, homered in the third, hit a bases loaded triple in the fourth and singled in the sixth to lead the Brewers past Detroit Tigers 11-2.

The chief victim of Hegan's outburst was Mark (The Bird) Fidrych, who failed to complete a game at Tiger Stadium for the first time in his rookie season.

Play started today in 36-hole event and concludes Sunday, when Hogarth (above) is scheduled in record field of 244 professionals and amateurs are pros Bill Wakeham and John Morgan, winners of tourney in 1973 and 1975, respectively.

Lions Bid for Lead Against Roughriders

Times News Services

Four games, two in the West and two in the East are on tap in the Canadian Football League this holiday weekend, and the big question is can B.C. Lions come out of the action with a share of first place in the west.

The Lions travel to Regina to meet Saskatchewan Roughriders while Edmonton Eskimos meet the Stampeders in Calgary in the Western Conference in games Monday.

In the east Montreal Alouettes are home to Toronto Argos Sunday with Hamilton hosting the Winnipeg Blue Bombers in an interlocking game Monday.

Saskatchewan and Edmonton are tied for first place with 10 points apiece while the Lions are just two points back of the co-leaders. If the Lions can get by the Roughies and the Stampeders surprise the Eskimos then there could be a three-way tie at the top.

General manager Ken Preston of Saskatchewan admits "the Lions have played exceptionally well" since the opening game of the season in Vancouver when they were manhandled 35-8 by the Roughies, have improved both their rushing and passing games, and the Roughies will be hard pressed to control the strong pass rush of Bill Baker and Wayne Smith.

The Argos-Alouettes games will be televised on the CBC network at 11 a.m. PDT Sunday, the Edmonton-Calgary game on the CBC network Monday at 1:30 PDT and the Winnipeg-Hamilton clash on CTV at 5 p.m. Monday.

MORGAN WINS PRO CROWN

HANEY (CP) — John Morgan of Victoria shot a five-under-par 67 to win the British Columbia Professional Golfers Association championship Friday.

Morgan came up with birdies on the last three holes on his way to win first prize of $1,200. He had a 136 total. Defending champion Dave Barr of Kelowna came in at 140 with a 71 on Friday. Tom Moryson of Vancouver finished third with 142, while Al Kennedy of Richmond and Mike Parker of Victoria shared fourth with 143 totals.

Last Chance Tennis Entries Close Monday

Entries close Monday for the Last Chance open tennis tournament, scheduled to run Sept. 10-12 at Island Indoor.

Various Mainland and most of the top Vancouver Island players will be competing in men's and women's singles and doubles events.

Among top contenders in the men's competition are Roger Skillings of Victoria and reigning Island champion Ian Brady, the head professional at Island Indoor.

Mersi Kelesi, second ranked in the province, and nationally—ranked juniors Jennifer Bland, Nina Bland and Wendy Barlow, are rated among leading contenders for honors in women's events.

Hy's Golf Test At Uplands Club

Deadline for entries to the 11th annual Hy's amateur golf tournament has been extended one week to Sept. 8.

The 18-hole medal tournament, offering a total of $1,000 in prizes, will be held Sept. 13 at Uplands Golf Club. Prizes are awarded for team as well as individual performances.

Entries can be made by contacting Bert Bevis (382-7111).

A BRIGHTER DAY ON PONY SCENE

There was more light on the subject when the Western Canada Pony League baseball championship resumed at Carnarvon Park today.

Darkness forced a halt to play Friday in the second game of the four-team, double-loss series with Taber, Alta., leading Victoria Carnarvon 9-7 after only four innings of the scheduled seven-inning game.

That game was to be completed this morning and followed by other tournament contests with tonight's evening clash slated for 5:30 p.m. The tournament concludes Sunday.

B.C. champion North Delta defeated Pilot Mound of Manitoba 14-7 in the opening game.

It wasn't a day for the pitchers, nor the fielders. Chuck Westgard of North Delta was the exception. He was the only starting pitcher to stick around, setting Manitoba down with only three hits while striking out 12. He walked four.

Each team contributed five errors as Barry McNeil sparked the North Delta attack with a home run and a single. He scored four times.

Taber started quickly against Victoria, scoring five runs on five hits in the first inning and two in the second, but the locals stayed right with them. The replied with four runs in their half of the first inning and three in the second.

Tim Karl hit a home run for Taber off Doug Richardon in the first inning while Kim Turney hit a two-run homer for Victoria in the second.

Taber took the lead in the fourth inning and it was hoped both teams would be able to plug the dike when action resumed today. Because, when darkness fell Friday, four players had been hit by pitched balls and four other hitters had reached base on passed balls on third strikes. It was that kind of a game.

North Delta	102 331 4	14 11 5

Chuck Westgard and Stu Evans; Barry Funk, Larry Falk (5) and Jack McMillan. Home run: Delta — Barry MacNeil.

Coupar Tops Tour

Bill Coupar of Cedar Hill saved his best for the last Friday in the final round of the Greater Victoria junior golf tour.

Coupar fired a one-over-par 71 at Uplands Golf Club to earn 10 points and capture the three-tournament championship with a five-point bulge over Dave Howe of Gorge Vale and Jim Rutledge of Uplands.

Rutledge was the leader going into the final round but skied to a 78, which was worth only five points.

Howe had a 73 for nine points.

Don Kerr of Royal Colwood had a 75 and finished fourth with 21 points. Lanny Sawchuk of Uplands had 18 points, Ron Forbes of Cedar Hill 16 and Stu Holroyd of Gorge Vale 14.

Bruce Barlow of Colwood captured "B" tour honors for those with handicaps of 10 or more. He had a net 71 and wound up with a total of 24 points. Rick Hanson of Gorge Vale was second with 21 and Ron Faithful of Colwood third with 19. Steve Holroyd of Gorge Vale was fourth with 17.

It is not easy to commute around the South Pacific

By STAN DELAPLANE

APIA, Western Samoa — We went over to Aggie Grey's for dinner last night. I must say it's changed, but haven't we all?

I came here last on a slow TEAL flying boat. Aggie Grey's Hotel had ten rooms. There were no doors on them. A piece of sailcloth gave you privacy and let the trade wind blow through.

I had the deluxe room, the open (but screened) bungalow in back. A half dozen chickens and some piglets kept me company. The bungalow had been used by Gary Cooper when he was making Return to Paradise.

Little lizards ran up and down the walls, eating up the insects which otherwise would have eaten me. I imagine Coop sat there evenings, offering them little bits of Cooperish advice.

"They went thataway, podner! Cut 'em off at the pass!"

Now Aggie — a regal lady who'll be 80 next year — has 108 rooms in bungalow fashion. Price $18 a day. Western Samoa, only 25,000 tourists last year, is well worth the visit.

It's a steamy two-and-a-half miles straight uphill to the grave of Robert Louis Stevenson. But you can see the world's most famous typographical error.

He was already a famous author when he settled here. Had four more years of good writing ahead. They put a gravestone on top of the hill with his "Requiem" carved on it.

"Under the wide and starry sky
"Dig the grave and let me lie.
"Glad did I live, and gladly die,
"And I laid me down with a will.
"This be the verse you grave for me:
" 'Here he lies where he longed to be;'
" 'Home is the sailor, home from sea,
" ' And the hunter home from the hill'."

This if OFTEN misquoted: "Home is the sailor, home from THE sea." And by heavens, the tombstone carver put in that extra "the". Which must have had RLS revolving in the grave.

One day a poetic tourist climbed the steamy hill. And he tried to gouge out the offensive "the". Didn't quite make it. Somebody else has filled it partially with bathtub grout. Still it shows through.

Some years ago I wrote this story. Explained it. The printer set it in type and he inserted the "the". So the story was puzzling to the point of idiocy.

Some people wrote and asked me what I meant. And others wrote and said: "What are you, some kind of nut?"

Tusitala, the teller of tales, is what the Samoans called RLS.

We are staying at the Tusitala, a fine, wind-swept hotel. The new one on the island. In the lobby, a local painter has done a portrait of Robert Louis Stevenson.

Below it, he wrote in the poem.

He did the same thing: "Home is the sailor, home from THE sea."

It's a half hour drive from Faleolo Airport to Apia town. Through villages of open Samoan houses with tropical flowers spiked into banana plant trunks before the steps.

These islands have 160,000 people. Nine of every ten are pure Samoan, the largest pure Polynesian group in the South Pacific.

They are BIG brown people. Almost all are barefoot. Officials wear sandals on official business. Men wear the wraparound lava lava.

It's not easy to commute around the South Pacific. You get into Pago Pago in American Samoa by Pan Am from Honolulu at 3 in the morning. A British-made prop jet of Polynesian Air runs you over at 8 a.m. A half hour ride.

Not much to do. Apia is a few blocks of main street. But the sun shines on thousands of towering coco palms. The flowers are brilliant. And no seas flash with such intense blue as the South Seas.

What would your choice be for a stopover? Fiji or Tahiti?

I'd choose Fiji. And I like Suva town. True, it rains more there. And the hotels are not as plush as the new resorts out of town and on some of the islands. But Suva is something out of Somerset Maugham. And watching the people go by on Victoria Parade from the porch of the old Grand Pacific Hotel — the GPH known throughout the South Seas — turns something on in me.

The Fijians are wonderfully friendly. (They used to eat people, but I imagine they did it in a friendly way.) The food in Tahiti is the best south of Honolulu. But then they've put in air-conditioning and — Auwe! — it's not the same (Don't we always say that?)

Florida's Sanibel beautiful island

By CHARLES LOCKWOOD

SANIBEL ISLAND, Florida — Sanibel is an extraordinarily beautiful island, situated in the Gulf of Mexico, a few miles from Fort Myers. It, and neighboring Captiva, have been highly regarded vacation spots since the days Theodore Roosevelt and Anne Morrow Lindbergh discovered their charms.

But the pace of the life on the two islands was tranquil and hotel or second-home developments remained at a minimum, because the only access to the Florida mainland was a ferry which took 20 minutes to make its run and stopped for the night at 5:30 p.m.

The islands' seclusion abruptly ended in 1963 when a three-mile-long causeway was completed between the mainland and Sanibel.

Despite the hefty $3 round-trip toll, thousands of people cross the causeway every day in automobiles and recreation vehicles to drive through the island's natural beauty or look for sea shells for which Sanibel beaches are so famous.

For several hours every afternoon, virtually bumper-to-bumper traffic creeps down Sanibel's Periwinkle Way, the road which runs down the spine of the long narrow island and tied into the causeway.

The opening of the causeway spurred a boom in motel and condominium construction for people who want to spend a week or two on Sanibel or live there part of the year.

Since 1963, nearly 600 motel units have been built on Sanibel, along with more than 2,000 condominiums and single-family homes. Before the causeway, there were no condominiums on Sanibel and just 21 motel units.

Although the motels charge upwards of $75 a day for double occupancy at the height of the season, the occupancy rate is more than 90 per cent at that time.

Condominium prices are high, too — $50,000 is typical for a well-situated four-room apartment.

Yet the rising tide of development was destroying the natural setting and seclusion which lured most visitors and residents to the island in the first place.

The island is a relatively unspoiled fragile environment composed of beach, wetlands, mangrove area, and pine barrens. It is home to 300 species of birds, 70 of marine fish, 24 reptiles and amphibians, and 12 mammals.

More than half of Sanibel's 11,000 acres is given over to the J. N. (Ding) Darling National Wildlife Reserve.

By the early 1970s, the impact of the building and tourist boom on the environment was so bad that citizen groups begged the Lee County Planning Commission, which guided Sanibel's growth, to slow the pace of development on the islands.

Besides the long lines of traffic on Periwinkle Road, there were water shortages and predictions of electric "brownouts," which have come to pass within the last year.

The quality of water in the wetlands was beginning to deteriorate, and the beach was eroding in the one spot where a masonry wall has been built along the shore.

The boom, which was creating these conditions, was showing no signs of slowing down. The county planning commission had issued permits for $7.2 million in motel and condominium construction in 1972. And in just the first six months of 1973, the county approved $30.2 million in construction permits.

The Lee County Planning Commission ignored the appeals from Sanibel. It had always been a pro-growth group; its zoning standards would have permitted 35,000 residential units on Sanibel (vs. 4,000 at present) and offered virtually no protection to the environment.

Sanibel's residents soon realized that the only way to guide the island's growth effectively was to incorporate as a city, with a planning board of its own, independent of the county commission.

Late in 1974, Sanibel residents voted 689 to 394 for incorporation in order, says the city charter, "to have the rights of self-determination . . . in the planning for the orderly future development of an island community known far and wide for its unique natural environment."

With this goal in mind, Porter Goss, the new mayor, and his four fellow councilmen were quick to declare a temporary halt on all construction so that a complete development plan for the island could be assembled and then taken to the voters.

One particularly irksome leftover from the Lee County Planning Commission was the flood of permits for a shopping centre and 400 residential units — some $10 million in construction — issued by the commission in the six-week interval between the vote for incorporation and the actual start of home rule on Sanibel.

Sanibel's councilmen had more to worry about than the islands' development during their first months in office; for a while they struggled for the survival of their newly incorporated city.

Even before the November vote that resulted in incorporation, Walter Condon, an off-island developer, filed suit in circuit court challenging Sanibel's legal right to become a city.

As the city government fought this case in the courts, Sanibel faced imminent bankruptcy. Sanibel was not yet eligible for federal revenue-sharing funds and could not collect property taxes until the start of the next fiscal year in October, 1975.

The city government had counted on a $250,000 loan from the local Bank of the Islands to meet its expenses, but that loan was suspended when developer Condon filed his lawsuit.

But once Sanibel's financial plight became known, local residents purchased $250,000 in revenue anticipation notes to tide the city over its crisis. The money came from all kinds of people, not just the well-to-do who have flocked to Sanibel in recent years.

That lawsuit is not the last challenge to Sanibel's efforts to guide its growth. The 239-page master development plan, which the Philadelphia firm of Wallace, McHarg, Roberts and Todd delivered to the city this past December, calls for only 6,000 residential units on Sanibel — just 2,000 more than are there today.

If these limits are adopted, people who bought land on Sanibel a few years ago will no longer be able to develop their property with the houses, motels, or condominiums that would have been permitted at that time.

A classic confrontation is brewing in Sanibel between the rights of private property, particularly its development, and environmental concerns.

Doing your own thing

BORREGO SPRINGS, Calif. — In this desert resort spa, 85 miles east of San Diego, "doing your own thing" can mean doing nothing more than soaking up the warm solar rays.

Borrego Valley, consisting of 200 square miles, is surrounded by the vast 500,000-acre Anza Borrego Desert State Park.

There are the usual resort amenities — golf, tennis and swimming — and then some that are somewhat unique. There is ample opportunity for campfire story-telling, nature walks and guided auto tours. These occur frequently.

A favorite among visitors is searching for rare animals. Everyone will spot the spindly-legged roadrunner, a member of the cuckoo family, that can outrun anyone and anything, and loves doing it.

The desert bighorn sheep normally lives in the higher elevations but frequently ventures down to the flat lands searching for water. Rangers estimate there are approximately 400 of these rangy and graceful animals remaining in the park.

Kangaroo rats, gray fox, round tail ground squirrels, mountain lion and mule deer can be spotted occasionally.

There are more than 150 species of birds including the loggerhead shrike, mocking bird, quail, dove and raven.

Indian artifacts and other signs of ancient civilizations can be observed during hikes but the word is they are to be left intact because these are protected by state law.

Walled city of Kano, Nigeria

Camel caravans still trek here from across Sahara

By JOHN DARNTON

KANO, Nigeria — Though fewer in number and smaller in size, camel caravans still trek here from across the Sahara to a final watering hole inside the walled city. The drivers unload dates and salts and potash, spread them on a blanket and barter them for richly embroidered cloth.

Beyond the walls, in the burgeoning commercial section called the Township, businessmen come in daily by jet from Rome and Cairo, dine at the Magwam Water restaurant, which has three chlorinated swimming pools and a miniature golf course, and haggle over multi-million pound deals.

Kano, the city on the desert's edge that was the commercial centre of ancient western Sudan and the stepping stone for Islam into Africa, is adjusting to the 20th century — adjusting not succumbing.

Lately, some women here have even been taking taxicabs and it has not caused a ripple. In a culture where many women are kept in seclusion, known as purdah, that is social revolution.

It was only a little more than a decade ago, at a time when there were elections in Nigeria, that southern politicians, barnstorming the north in helicopters to impress the populace, saw the tactic backfire: The northern politicians charged that the vehicles allowed forbidden glimpses of women.

"Kano is progressing," said Alhaji Ibrahim el-Yakubu, the state commissioner for information. "It's not the same city it was 2,000 years ago." He paused for an afterthought; "Or even 10 years ago."

In Kano, it is easy to skip over centuries in a single breath.

The 11-mile stretch of mud wall that surrounds the old city is crumbling and eroding. Since the early 16th century it has attracted chroniclers, beginning with Leo Africanus, the Moorish vagabond, and has repelled most invaders.

In 1903, when a British expeditionary force conquered Kano by locating a flimsy gate, the wall stood 40 to 50 feet high and was 100 feet thick at the base. It had moats filled with gateways, protected lookouts for sentries and terraces for horsemen to gallop around, protected by a continuous battlement.

Since then, the wall has been pilfered for building material and pounded down by the brief but torrential rains. In most sections the wall is now a mound of dirt no higher than 10 or 20 feet, small enough for a goat to scamper up one side and down the other.

As the enclosure recedes, year by year, it is as if the old city itself is rising up from the desert.

The city is Old Testament Jerusalem, with huts, compounds and palaces built entirely of ocher mud. Some are brightly painted, others etched in geometric designs. The palaces have pointed turrets and tiny square windows in walls two feet thick — protection against the searing heat.

From the minaret of the central mosque, from which the city spreads below like a mammoth sand sculpture, one sees scattered glints of reflected sunlight. These are from metal roofs, another concession to modernity. "It's the first thing people buy when they get money," a local businessman says of the roofs.

Kano was the home of Murtala Ramat Muhammed, the head of state who was assassinated in an attempted coup four months ago. He is buried just outside of town, in a simple grave. It is visited frequently. When his body was returned, people wept in the streets and chanted "la ila Illallahu Muhammadu rasulilahi" — "there is no god but Allah and Muhammed is his messenger."

Anger over the death of the native son is more intense here than in other parts of the country, but it is mixed with the fatalism of the Koran. In pride, Kano has named a hospital, a boulevard and a government building after the general; in rage, it has plastered everywhere, "wanted" posters for two alleged plotters of the coup.

The most powerful figure in Kano is the Emir, Alhaji Ado Bayero, the traditional leader and spiritual father of some four million people. His is the richest emirate in the state, surpassing those of Kazaru, Hadejia and Gumel.

The Emir lives in a 450-year-old palace, painted simply on the outside, furnished lavishly inside. He drives a baby-blue Rolls-Royce whose horn emits an undulating sound to imitate the kakaki, the long horns that are blown whenever he appears.

During the festival of Sallah, the emirate's district and village heads assemble in front of the palace in flowing robes and elaborate turbans. A display of horsemanship is then offered before thousands. At the climax the Emir stands alone while waves of horsemen gallop at him at full speed and stop within feet. It is a symbolic show: They could kill him, but choose not to. He rules by their consent.

Fairy-tale castle open to public near Maidstone

A fairy-tale castle described as "the loveliest in the world" has just opened to visitors this summer after four centuries in seclusion.

Leeds Castle near Maidstone (London, 40 miles), a royal palace for 300 years, is one of the oldest castles in the country. Royal owners have included Eleanor of Castile; and Catherine of Valois whose marriage to Welshman Owen Tudor led to the founding of the Tudor dynasty; and Henry VIII, who spent a fortune turning the castle from a defensive stronghold to a royal palace.

Olive Lady Baillie, the last owner, ensured the castle's future with the setting up of the Leeds Castle Foundation. The foundation, dedicated to preserving Leeds for the nation, offers conference facilities for leading medical scientists, and the castle may become a centre for visiting heads of state.

Greece looking forward to four million tourists

By H. D. S. GREENWAY

HYDRA, Greece — One after the other, all day long, the white tourist steamers enter the harbor of Hydra to disgorge their cargoes of high-season trippers in funny hats, sunburns and back packs. Almost with the frequency of city buses, the boats hoot at each other to make way at the tiny quay that is the island's only landing.

One wonders how this rocky island can absorb such a seemingly endless stream. But they are only a tiny fraction of the four million tourists the National Tourist Organization expects to overrun Greece this year.

Already the number of tourists is up 50 per cent over last year, according to tourist board statistics. In a country whose population does not exceed nine million, there are thoughtful people who wonder if tourism on this scale is not in itself a form of pollution that threatens to erode the traditional Greek values that made Greece attractive in the first place.

Already there are signs that the "filoxenia" (hospitality) for which Greece is justifiably famous is turning to xenophobia.

"Tourism could be our ruination," said publisher and parliament member Helen Vlachos, in a recent interview. "Happily we have 3,000 islands so it will take a bit of time. But Rhodes, Mykonos, Corfu, the in places for the moment, are being devastated.

"What we get are the vagrant tourists — those who sleep on the beaches without a bed, a toilet or facilities to bathe," she said. "If we get a few million of such Robinson Crusoes what will become of Greece?"

Even the ancient monuments are suffering. The 2,500-year-old Parthenon atop the Acropolis of Athens, for example, is visited by 1.5 million tourists a year — "3 million unrelenting feet," as Minister of Culture Constantine Tzypanis put it. In May, the interior of the Parthenon was closed to visitors because of the damage these masses were inflicting.

"It is not only the quantity but the quality," Mrs. Vlachos said. "Mind you, I'm not against hippies and nudists. They are a great relief from the fat, camera-toting tourists that we've seen here for years. Delightful when they come in small numbers, but when they come in droves . . . there must be a ceiling put on tourists. Two million would be appropriate for Greece."

The call of the Greek landscape, the endless summer sunshine, the translucent waters of the Aegean and Ionian Seas and the gaiety and simplicity of the Greeks themselves seem irresistible to northern Europeans. The general improvement in the world economy and the political troubles of Spain and Portugal have combined to send thousands upon thousands of additional holidaymakers converging on Greece.

Tourism is expected to surpass shipping as the leading foreign exchange earner this year, and tourists left behind $620 million last season.

With only 170,000 tourist beds in the country, some unscrupulous travel agents have sold available space two and three times over. The government has enacted emergency regulations to combat this practice.

Oddly enough, it is still possible to find a hotel room in some of the more popular places. Here in Hydra, for example, hotelier Drina Papadopoulos said hotel bedrooms were going begging, even in August. She blamed bad management and a tourist distribution that sent too many tours to Rhodes and Corfu.

Because there are only a few hotels on Hydra anyway, most tourists come only for the day and many vacationers are so intimidated by reports of vast numbers of people coming to Greece this season that they do not even bother to try to make reservations here.

If there are great differences in tourist density — some of the more remote islands are uncrowded even in high season — so are there great differences in permissible behavior. On the island of Mykonos, for example, anything goes.

But Spetsai and Hydra are more conservative and, compared to the French and Italian Rivieras, unspoiled. True, the boatyards and ships chandlers of the 1950s are now boutiques but there is none of the jerry-built vulgarity that offends so many people visiting the south of Spain.

"Tzannis Tzannetakis, secretary general of the National Tourist Organization, agrees with Mrs. Vlachos that there will eventually have to be a ceiling for tourists but he thinks it should be about 6.5 million.

"A rapid increase in tourism is bad," he said in an interview. "But if you are able to split up the number of tourists as to time and place you can achieve a smaller density in relationship of tourists to population."

He said the ratio of four million tourists to eight or nine million Greeks is misleading because tourists do not all come at once. Even in July, the peak month, tourists amount to only 5.8 per cent of the total population.

Tourism on this scale a form of pollution?

Cathedral celebrates cornerstone's 50th year

It was on Sept. 9, 1926, that Bishop A. F. Winnington-Ingram of London, England, laid the conerstone of Christ Church Cathedral, the largest Anglican cathedral in Canada west of Toronto.

At 8 p.m. next Thursday the Anglican Primate for Canada, Archbishop Edward Scott, who chaired the meeting of the central committee of the World Council of Churches in Geneva, Switzerland, will preach at a special service to mark the 50th anniversary of the occasion.

The first in a series of special events in connection with the anniversary was the flower festival in the cathedral early last month.

Others include a public lecture at 8 p.m. next Friday by Prof. James Hendrickson of the history department of the University of Victoria in the auditorium of the cathedral hall; a recital by the cathedral choir and organist Beal Thomas at 4 p.m. next Saturday in the cathedral and a sung Eucharist at 11 a.m. next Sunday with retired Supreme Court Justice R. A. Wootton as guest preacher.

A feature of next Thursday's service will be the performance of a motet commissioned from Dr. Bernard Rose, director of music at Magdalen College, Oxford.

A special missa brevis will be presented in a premiere performance at the 11 a.m. sung Eucharist on Sept. 12. It was composed by Dr. Douglas Mews of Auckland, N.Z., and is the prize-winning entry in a competition sponsored by the cathedral. There were 29 entries from five countries.

Prof. Hendrickson's topic for Sept. 10 is Parsons, Politics and Progress — A Glance at the Beginnings."

Churchman retires

TORONTO (CP) — The Danish community has paid tribute to Very Rev. Poul Overgaard-Thomsen, who is retiring as head of the Danish Lutheran Church here, largest congregation outside Denmark.

The 67-year-old minister was honored with gifts, songs, toasts and speeches at a recent banquet.

"It's been a happy, happy life here in Toronto," he said. "I'm happy to be your minister and your friend."

Catholic conference message

Labor action, prayer linked

OTTAWA (CP) — Christians must combine political action with prayer if they hope to achieve social justice, the Canadian Catholic Conference says in its Labor Day message.

"It is in our local communities that we can best exercise these social and political responsibilities," the message says.

"This calls for our personal, and collective participation in local struggles for justice with the jobless, exploited workers, poor or lonely immigrants, small producers, native people, culturally oppressed peoples and others."

The Labor Day message did not specifically refer to the labor movement or the planned Oct. 14 national day of protest against the federal anti-inflation program.

The Canadian Labor Congress, parent body for 2.3 million workers, has requested other organized groups to join the protest. The CLC says the selective controls program limits wage increases but does not adequately control prices.

The Catholic conference said:

"We are called to participate in actions to change the policies of governments, corporations and other institutions that cause human suffering."

"People must come together to act for fundamental social change," the conference said. "This is our political responsibility as Christians and citizens in a democratic society."

The Catholic Conference was among six major church organizations which presented a brief to the federal cabinet last March saying there was a danger that the government's anti-inflation program would accentuate disparities between the rich and the poor.

The church leaders said at that time they were not asking the government to withdraw its controls program, but were expressing areas of concern.

Nuns meet in assembly

NORTH BAY, Ont. (CP) — The Sisters of St. Joseph recently met for their first plenary assembly. Nuns from 27 mission houses from this city and as far away as Guatemala met to evaluate the progress made since Vatican II. Amont topics discussed was the quality of life.

Assam Baptist preacher here to thank mentor

A country preacher and farmer from the northeast corner of India is in Victoria visiting a former missionary in his district of Assam.

Rev. Peter Pandu will speak at the 11 a.m. Sunday service of Friendship Baptist Church in Gordon Head recreation centre. Wednesday night he spoke at Arrowsmith Baptist Church in Port Alberni.

He is the guest of Rev. Ernest Kratofil, former missionary to Assam and now pastor of the church meeting in Gordon Head.

Kratofil said Thursday that Pandu has had "an unrelenting burden to some day thank the people in the West for telling him and his people about Jesus Christ."

"Finally, after his retirement and only after enlisting the co-operation of his whole family in an austerity program for five years, was he able to save enough money to purchase his ticket," the Victoria pastor said.

Pandu is visiting former missionaries to his area and sharing his testimony of thanks, he added.

At the recent annual convention of the Baptist General Conference in Hartford, Conn., Pandu was given a standing ovation for his testimony of appreciation.

The Baptist conference was founded in the early 1800s by Swedish immigrants in the U.S., Kratofil explained. The language barrier has disappeared but the conference continues, he said, with headquarters in Evanston, Ill. The only two affiliated churches on Vancouver Island are in Port Alberni and Victoria. There are several in the Vancouver area.

Perspectives

By Rev. J. A. Davidson

"Losing your temper is always a sin." That statement was made by an earnest young minister who apparently had leavened his biblical theology with "input," as he would call it, from the adjustment-and-relaxation approach in pop psychology. I certainly would not denigrate an easy smoothness of disposition, but I do worry about the genial, genteel, custard-like blandness that is cultivated in certain Christian circles — with expressions of anger seen as pebbles in the custard.

I worry also about the bland image of Jesus that is presented by some Christian writers and artists. The Sunday school Jesus is often a man of such sweetness that he couldn't possibly show anger: disapproval at times, yes, but never real anger. And have you ever seen a blander personality than the one represented in that very popular modern painting, Sallman's Head of Christ?

Bernard Shaw, in his genially extravagant manner, once wrote this: "'Gentle Jesus, meek and mild,' is a snivelling modern invention, with no warrant in the Gospels." Shaw was partly right — but he seems to have forgotten that Jesus was gentle and meek and mild with children, and that those words are from a hymn that Charles Wesley wrote especially for small children.

Jesus was gentle, too, with society's outcasts and derelicts. But we Christians should never forget that Jesus could be splendidly angry. It is instructive to work through the Gospels and note the places where Jesus shows anger, the occasions on which he seems to have lost his temper.

James Denney, a Scottish New Testament scholar of a couple of generations ago, made a detailed study of the anger of Jesus. He summed up in this way: "Two things in human conduct which moved Jesus to anger were: (1) inhumanity, wrong done to peeds or rights of men; and (2) misrepresentation of God by professedly religious people, and especially by religious teachers . . . He stood in the world for the rights and interests, or may we say, for the truth of God and of human nature; and his whole being reacted immediately and vehemently against all that did wrong to either."

In biblical thought, anger is a vice when it is merely a petulant expression of personal frustration, when it springs from selfish concern. But the Bible recognizes another kind of anger as a virtue. This is the kind of anger that Jesus displayed at times. A pose of bland detachment in the face of evil can never be a virtue in biblical faith. As we are reminded by a character in Simone de Beauvoir's novel, The Mandarins, "If you can get angry, that means that you still believe in certain things."

Think of how much we owe to persons who became angry in the right way in the face of evils in society, who lost their tempers over injustice and persecution and immoral privilege. As Thomas Fuller, a 17-century English divine, put it, "Anger is one of the sinews of the soul; he that wants for it hath a maimed mind."

Pray for dissident, pope asks French

VATICAN CITY (UPI) — Pope Paul VI urged Roman Catholics this week to pray for traditionalist French Bishop Marcel Lefebvre to stop challenging papal authority and refusing to accept ecumenical council liturgical reforms.

The 78-year-old pontiff said he would not directly reply "to the very bad accusations pronounced in public by him (Lefebvre) against this apostlic see, against the ecumenical council and against ourself."

The pope suspended Lefebvre from all priestly functions July 28 for disobeying his orders not to ordain traditionalist priests and for continuing to defy the Second Vatican Council's updating and streamlining of the liturgy.

"Obviously we cannot but deeply deplore this case," the pope said, "but now we are inviting you and all faithful and true Catholics . . . to pray to the Lord that He may inspire (Lefebvre) and all who follow him with better advice and real faithfulness to the holy Catholic church."

Follows in black, baptizes candidates in Elk Lake

Cool dive warms them

Sun comes out as 12 baptized in Elk Lake

The sun broke through a cloudy sky as the last person came up out of the water of Elk Lake last Sunday morning, providing a benediction to a moving and significant service in a beautiful location.

The words are those of Rev. Ted Follows, pastor of Elk Lake Community Baptist Church, who baptized 12 persons ranging in age from 10 to over 70 years.

All had previously made a confession of faith in Christ as Saviour and Lord and of their desire to identify themselves in this way with His death and resurrection, said Follows, and all witnessed to a feeling of God's warm blessing as they rose from the water.

The pastor said the water felt slightly chilly to him although he was wearing waterproof clothing, but the candidates all said they felt warm and happy and some did not seem to want to come out of the water at all.

In his sermon in the Elk Lake church preceding the baptism Follows said he felt that God had been directing his thought to I Cronthians 10, which speaks of the Israelites escaping from Egypt and being "baptized into Moses in the cloud and in the sea."

He felt this was confirmed by the cloudiness of the morning and his expectation that the sun would shine at the end of the service.

In explaining the text, he said the cloud was the Shekinah cloud which led the Israelites all through their desert wanderings, not a raincloud but the supernatural cloud showing the special presence of God yet obscuring His full glory from human eyes.

(Shekinah is a Hebrew word meaning the presence of God in the world conceived by Jewish and later by Christian theologians as manifested in natural and supernatural phenomena.)

Both cloud and the water of the Red Sea were part of the salvation of Israel from Egypt, Follows said, thus both the presence of God and the act of trust and submission to the death and resurrection of Jesus Christ are necessary for our salvation.

"Baptism in water is a symbol of our submission which God blesses with His special presence," the pastor said.

"This is linked with the words of Jesus to Nocidemus: 'Unless a man is born of water and the Spirit he cannot enter the kingdom of God (John 3:5)'."

Eight of the 12 persons baptized are members of other churches in Victoria and have no intention of joining the Elk Lake congregations, Follows said this week. "But they wished to take this scriptural step of obedience," he added.

He pointed out that there are are three baptisms spoken of in scripture: by Christ into the Holy Spirit (Matthew 3:111); by the Holy Spirit into the church (I Cronthians 12:12) and by the church into Christ (Romans 6:3).

"The last act, baptism in water, completes the cycle, so that the Holy Spirit can continue unhindered with His work of cleansing the believer and building him into the church."

Crucifix pendant forms message

STRATFORD, Ont. (CP) — Ken Boudreau, 29, had developed and patented a crucifix pendant of nine interlocking pieces that form the word Jesus when disassembled.

The pieces are shaped like the number seven, Boudreau said.

"Seven is the symbolic number of perfection. It keeps cropping up all through the Bible. For example, it took God seven days to create the world."

A manufacturer in Brampton, Ont., has started producing the first batch of 5,000 crosses and Boudreau plans to approach a centre for retarded adults to see about having the crosses made there.

Pentecostals ban women pastors

Women's ordination was again defeated and two resolutions opposing abortion on demand were passed in the recent 30th biennial general conference of The Pentecostal Assemblies of Canada in Ottawa.

Two local pastors attended the conference from Aug. 19 to 24 — Rev. Don McMillan of Colwood and Rev. Charles Barker of Sidney.

A record 583 delegates attended the conference at the University of Ottawa. The 411 voting members re-elected all six executive officers of the denomination on nomination ballots.

Re-elected were R. W. Taitinger, general superintendent; Charles Yates, general secretary; Graydon Richards, general treasurer; C. W. Lynn, overseas missions; S. D. Feltmate, Christian education and youth; R. M. Argue, home missions and Bible colleges.

The controversial issue of ordination for women was debated and a resolution defeated. It required a two-thirds majority vote but failed to get even a simple majority as it did two years ago in Regina.

A standing commission has been called for the study of both scriptural and theological viewpoints of this subject in the light of today's social customs and the matter of women's ordination will likely be raised again in two years after the delegates study the findings of the committee.

A resolution to voice strong objection to abortion was presented by a study committee which included two medical doctors.

By unanimous vote the conference also passed a resolution disapproving support of any joint charity appeals providing funding for organizations which subscribe to abortion on demand.

A missionary rally recorded nearly $310,000 contributed for projects in Canada and in some 19 countries overseas.

The 1971 Canadian federal census reported Pentecostal adherents in Canada at 220,390. Overseas commicants with ties to Canada number more than 200,000 baptized members. There are 837 affiliated churches in Canada, 2,200 credentialled ministers (983 ordained) and 2,300 organized overseas churches with 2,800 national ministers linked with the Canadian denomination.

Jesus sex-movie angers archbishop

LONDON (Reuter) — The Archbishop of Westminster, Basil Cardinal Hume, has appealed to British actors and financiers to boycott a proposed film about the imagined sex life of Jesus.

The cardinal, head of the Roman Catholic church in England, described the proposed film by Danish director Jens Jorgen Thorsen as "sensational, pornographic and, in terms of truth, entirely speculative."

In a letter to The Times, Cardinal Hume joined the Pope and other European church leaders in condemning the film project, titled The Many Faces of Jesus Christ, which intends to show Jesus in the nude, in love scenes and at drinking sessions.

Church opposition in Denmark, Sweden and France has prevented the film from being made there and Thorsen intends to make the film in Britain with local actors.

Cardinal Hume said many people would be affronted and hurt by the film.

"I would like to think that no commercial interests would wish to advance money for a production of this kind likely to cause such distress, and . . . that the members of Equity (the British actors' association) would discourage their members from co-operating with the project."

Traditional priest's following grows

MONTREAL (CP) — Nine months after Rev. Yves Normandin was ejected from his parish for defying orders to celebrate the mass in its modern form, the 52-year-old priest finds himself with a half-dozen growing congregations to serve in a "parish" thousands of miles in area.

Father Normandin is part of a movement in the Roman Catholic Church which, in defiance of the Pope, has gained momentum in several countries—notably France, where Bishop Marcel Lefebvre was excommunicated this week for his stand.

The jovial priest still wears the traditional black, floor-length soutane at a time when most priests, even in Quebec, have switched to turtlenecks or business suits. Like others in the movement, Father Normandin considers himself a defender of the church's true traditions and uses the word "heretical" to describe recent changes adopted by church leaders.

Father Normandin travels as far away as Fort Lauderdale, Fla., and Winnipeg to meet Catholics gathered in halls and schools to celebrate the Tridentine mass, adopted about 1570, in its original language — Latin.

A YOUNG MAN TO WATCH
James Tarjan of Berkeley has just turned 20 but he has already achieved one of his life's ambitions, the title of Grandmaster. It hasn't come easily. From his early teens, Tarjan had his goal in sight and went after it with dogged determination, working his way up through the ratings until, two years ago, he achieved his International Master title.

By that time, he was already representing the U.S. in international tournaments. At the Nice Olympiad, he received a gold medal for the most points scored by a reserve player. I shall not be at all surprised if Jim is a contender for the world crown before the decade is out.

In the past few months, Tarjan has won the Phoenix Open, the Keres Memorial in Vancouver and the Great Bicentennial San Francisco Open. Here is his first round from this tournament.

FIRE VICTIM AID

Chief John Albany has appealed for donations of clothing and money to assist an Indian family of five whose home on the Songhees Reserve was badly damaged by fire.

Owner of the home on Admirals Road is Perry Dick. The family was away when the blaze broke out.

Goods should be sent or brought to the old Songhees school at 1146 Admirals Road, the chief said.

The chief said the Dicks were living in a home built several years ago with funds from the department of Indian affairs.

"They were known as welfare homes," he said. "This type of home is a fire hazard. As the owner had only limited funds, they were built with flimsy materials."

He said the owners of such homes are forced to over-heat to keep warm.

Albany said homes on the reserve are now built under CHMC specifications.

"We also have our own housing society," he said.

'Remember . . .' and They're Off

elizabeth forbes

A friendship that stretches back over half a century is bound to create a lot of reminiscing. And that is exactly what Ted Hopkins and Wilbur Dawson have been doing recently, whenever they are together.

Their friendship started when they were at Victoria High School early in the 1900s.

In that school's first year at its present Grant Street location (1914-15), they joined with four other young athletes to bring the school its third provincial high school basketball championship.

The following year Hopkins and Dawson went on to play for First Presbyterian Church (now First United) in an upcoming Sunday School League, taking with them three others, John Goldie, Gordon MacEachern and Tommy Heyland.

"Not one of us was a Presbyterian," Hopkins remembers, "but that league was new and we wanted to play in it."

Dawson adds that one of the rules made it mandatory players attend Sunday School.

"Heyland had a habit of sleeping in and I was the one that had to get him up and down to those morning classes."

That team won championships in the city, on the island and over on the mainland.

"We bought our own uniforms and paid our own travel expenses," Dawson says.

"When we crossed to the mainland we chose the cheapest state room on the C.P.R. night boat, and then crowded six bodies into that state room."

Hopkins caps that with "two in the upper berth, two in the lower and two on the floor . . . and because I was the smallest I always got the floor."

When games were played up-island on weekends, the team travelled by E and N train "up one day, stay over night, and back the next day."

After the season ended all five "joined up" for service in the First World War.

Dawson, Goldie and MacEachern went off with the 15th Artillery Brigade and Hopkins with the 13th Field Ambulance Division.

The two men are a little vague now as to "Heyland's outfit", although they know he "did get over there."

At Petawawa, Ont., where the artillery brigade was stationed for a time, the three First Presbyterian boys formed a team and entered playoffs for the Canadian championship against Ontario, Nova Scotia and New Brunswick.

"They laughed at us — didn't give us a chance," is the way Wilbur Dawson recalls it.

"Betting was 20 to 1 against us at the start, but as the series progressed those odds dropped and they were down to five to one when we grabbed off the championship."

Over in England, at Witley Camp in Surrey, the same team challenged all comers for the championship of the British Isles — and again took the cup.

There was also a reunion at Witley with Hopkins, who was stationed near-by.

In France, a try was made to start a league behind the lines.

"We did play a few games but there was no league — we were too busy."

They all saw action at Arras and Cambrai, and they were in the "big push" at Amiens in September, 1918, where there was another reunion with Hopkins.

It was at Amiens too, that Dawson lost a leg and was sent back to England for nine months, before being transferred to Toronto Army Hospital and finally back to Victoria.

Hopkins stayed with the ambulance division until the end of the war, then was stationed in military hospitals in England until 1920.

Eventually all five lads returned to Victoria and all five joined staffs of different banks here.

Dawson chose the Bank of Montreal; Hopkins and Heyland went to the Union Bank of Canada (now the Royal Bank of Canada); Goldie to the Dominion Bank and MacEachern to the Bank of North America.

"There was never more than one junior in a bank in those days," Dawson says, "which meant at the end of the month all social life had to be cancelled out."

So the five young friends concocted a plan. The first one to finish moved to another bank to help his buddy and when everything was tidy there, they both moved to a third bank and so on "until we had everything finished in all the banks and we were free to join our girl friends."

Remembering those unorthodox doings now, the two men look at each other with rather bemused expressions. Then they shake their heads and agree "it couldn't happen like that today."

Eventually, of course, the five friends went their separate ways.

Hopkins chose San Francisco where he joined the Bank of Italy (now the Bank of America), founded by the famed A. P. Giannini whom he describes as "one of the finest men I ever met."

When Ted arrived in California that bank had 26 branches in the state; when he retired in 1948, it had nearly one thousand.

Dawson remained with the bank of Montreal, worked at many of its branches in British Columbia, rose to the position of manager, opened and managed a branch on Salt Spring Island and concluded his career at White Rock, from where he retired in 1948.

The others?

Goldie left Victoria for Hamilton and from there returned to England, where he still lives.

MacEachern left the bank to join the Victoria Liquor Control Board, where he stayed until he retired in 1964. He died here in 1973.

Heyland, who returned from the war with impaired hearing, died many years ago.

During their retirement, Hopkins and Dawson and their wives have done a fair amount of travelling — the former to Alaska, Hawaii and Scandinavia and the latter twice around the world.

Over the years, the two men have kept in touch. They visited each other, from time to time, so it was easy to pick up that friendship once they were back in Victoria to "more or less" settle down.

Today, Wilbur and Ann Dawson live in a condominium on Dallas Road; Ted and Joyce Hopkins in a condominium on Esquimalt Road.

Ted plays a lot of golf; Wilbur golfs and swims and he and his wife still like to travel.

In both families there are grandchildren; the Hopkins have 10 and the Dawsons three. So far "no great-grands."

With this all said, the two men quickly turn back to talking about the friendship that has lasted now over 60 years.

It's a long time in anyone's book and it certainly gives them a lot of scope for reminiscing.

Science Tries to Inject Flavor in Store Tomatoes

WASHINGTON — A U.S. government tomato specialist said he can't "defend" the taste of supermarket tomatoes, but he'd like to do something to improve it, if it's possible.

Dr. Allan Stoner, a geneticist at the U.S. Department of Agriculture's Research Service in Beltsville, Md., said his colleagues hope to discover what it is in red, ripe juicy tomatoes from the garden that makes them taste so good. If they can find out, he said, then perhaps they can breed tomatoes that will taste better even though they are picked long before they are ripe.

At an informal briefing and taste-testing recently, Stoner explained why those supermarket tomatoes are so tasteless. Because they must travel several thousand miles to reach markets, the tomatoes are picked either "mature green" or green with a tinge of pink, what the industry euphemistically calls "vine-ripened." They also call such tomatoes "breakers." To most people, of course, vine-ripened means ripened to a bright red on the vine. Mature green and breaker tomatoes are gassed with ethylene to ripen them. Ethylene occurs naturally in tomatoes and is released as they ripen.

In an attempt to improve such tomatoes, the USDA scientists are trying to quantify and computerize taste.

The international travel industry uses a host of abbreviations with which most of the general public is not familiar.

For this reason a small, illustrated 40-page booklet, called "Travel Talk" has been published. It explains hundreds of these abbreviations and offers a glossary of aviation, tourism and transportation terms.

You will see, for instance, that W.T.O. stands for World Tourism Organization and that I.U.O.T.O. is short for International Union of Official Tourism Organizations.

You will also learn that "agio" refers to the charge for changing notes into cash or one currency into another and that backtrack refers to traffic which arrives in a country after it has previously flown over it.

This is a useful booklet to keep on your reference shelf.

In addition, you may ask for a copy of the 32-page illustrated brochure "Ireland — Personally Yours." This is an intriguing vacation planner for those contemplating a trip there.

For either publication write to: Information Office, Irish Tourist Board, 7 King Street East, Toronto, Ont. M5C 1A2.

Nostalgia in the bathroom . . .

The wave of nostalgia that is sweeping over our home decor, as well as our wardrobes these days . . . has even extended to the modern bathroom . . . and mighty attractive it is, too! . . . If you're a bit tired of chrome and glitter and ultra-modernity in this very important room . . . consider the soft, warm glow of wood . . . like the nostalgic wooden bathroom accessories we saw at the Bath Boutique this week! . . . Canadian pine, made in the spirit of our forefathers . . . an echo of the old, with all the efficiency of the new! . . . There are upright towel racks, towel rails in different sizes, medicine cabinets, towel floor shelf stands, hampers, waste baskets, boutique and regular tissue holders, towel rings, toothbrush and glass holders, soap dishes, toilet paper holders, accessory shelves . . . even wooden bathrobe hooks! . . . You can complement these wooden articles by choosing a beautiful shower curtain in earth tones from the largest selection of plastic and fabric shower curtains and matching window curtains in all of Victoria! . . . We also saw a complete selection of the new and popular wickerware bathroom accessories . . . more of that "magic touch" at . . . Bath Boutique, James Bay Square, Simcoe and Menzies St., 385-2523.

Mary Quant is promoting culotte dresses six inches above the knee for office wear.

The luck of the Irish . . .

If you're anything like us you'll probably feel you've struck "the luck of the Irish" when you see for yourself the beautiful hand-woven pure wool dresses from John Hagarty, of Dublin . . . just new in at Roy Imports! . . . Actually these dresses look a lot like the perennially favorite Donald Davies . . . but we consider they're better cut . . . easier fitting under the arm . . . Sleeves have a nice wide cuff, and everything's beautifully finished! . . . There are three different styles, one with mandarin collar, another with a frill down the front, and the third, a real shirtwaist . . . The two latter styles also appear in long dresses . . . There are solid colors, checks and stripes . . . really lovely shades . . . with subtle blendings in the case of the stripes and checks . . . There's a nubby check and stripe called "poodle" which we find very attractive . . . And incidentally, all these colors and textures are exclusive to Hagarty . . . Prices range from $60 to $120, depending on style and length . . . We'll be surprised if you don't want at least one of these versatile dresses! . . . Roy's also have some new London Fog raincoats with zip-in linings . . . classic styles in a nice assortment of colors, priced at under $100 . . . Unlined at $65 . . . Roy Imports, 817 Government St., 384-4737 and James Bay Square, 384-4932.

Creme de la creme of English walking shoes . . .

Those of you who hail from England are undoubtedly familiar with the name Barker, as applied to shoes! . . . The family firm of A. Barker & Sons Ltd. was founded nearly 100 years ago in Northamptonshire . . . and has been making high quality leather shoes ever since . . . Every pair of Barker shoes is hand-lasted . . . made from the very finest leathers obtainable! So now you know why Munday's are so proud to be selling these choice English walking shoes! . . . There are four different styles . . . all in various shades of brown . . . One is a high gored pump with stitching around the toe and braided ornamentation across the vamp . . . Medium stacked heel and leather sole . . . Another is an extremely comfortable tie with mocassin vamp, leather sole, and slightly lower stacked heel . . . For the heavier woman who has difficulty finding chic along with comfort . . . this one's the answer to prayer! . . . Both these patterns are priced at $55 . . . There's a crepe soled tie shoe with low heel . . . $53 . . . and the same style in a gore pump with elastic inset at $52 . . . Perfect for the woman who likes to walk in all sorts of weather! . . . Munday's, 1203 Douglas St., 383-2211.

There's no mystery about French cooking, says a famous chef. The big thing is to plan ahead and don't panic!

Light-as-a-feather suits and ensemble . . .

We're firmly convinced that Gibson's have the distillation of everything that's most exquisite in fashion! . . . Like the new chocolate brown coat and skirt costume, made of double-faced wool with a cashmere texture . . . It's a new fabric imported from Switzerland, by Enzo Quaglia of Zurich, and made up in Canada by Miss Style . . . No lining in this full-length coat and straight skirt . . . which is absolutely as light as a feather! A costume you'll almost want to live in! . . . From the same people come the two darling little suits . . . also in Swiss double-faced fabric . . . tweed one side, plain on the other . . . These were made with the little woman in mind, and are beautifully proportioned for such a figure . . . Semi-fitted petite jacket with French seam detailing . . . buttoning up to the neck, with little collar . . . The new straight skirt . . . No lining in these either . . . logan green, and another is biscuit camel . . . Some beautiful lavishly fur-trimmed leather coats are starting to arrive . . . Sable-dyed marten and fox collars . . . But we must tell you about the newest leather of all called "Paloma" . . . It's a soft-napped pigskin with a grained pattern through it . . . one coat style has a button-on wolf collar, another a collar of lynx . . . These are really gorgeous coats, and well worth a visit to . . . Gibson's, 708 View St., 384-5913.

Start the school year with a new look! . . .

It just occurred to us that a lot of you high school and university students may not have been doing too much about your hair this past summer . . . but now that it's almost time to hit the books again . . . you'll want to look really neat . . . and this goes for the guys as well as the gals! . . . This being the case, we recommend you make an appointment at the Charming Lady . . . and ask for one of the girl stylists, Donna or Marty . . . They're both very much "with it" and are terrific with the younger crowd . . . Donna does a fantastic job with the curly and feathered looks . . . Cuts a fantastic wedge, and is a whizz at streaking . . . which gives your hair all those wonderful highlights! . . . She's a whizz at styling men's hair too . . . and you'll like her bubbling personality . . . We might say the same about Marty . . . Excellent cutter . . . very good with permanents and tints . . . plus having a special knack with Oriental hair . . . She's a real fast worker too, so if you happen to be a business girl you can go in on your lunch hour and get back to work on time . . . To really gild the lily, you could have Michelle give you a super manicure . . . pluck your eyebrows . . . Lunch box treats . . .

In a couple of days now . . . you mothers of school-agers will be starting the five-day-a-week lunch box bit . . . packing nourishing lunches . . . and hoping to goodness the kids don't latch on to any junk foods on the side! . . . A good way to guard against this is by slipping some special treat into the lunch box along with the sandwiches, fruit, etc. . . . like, for instance, one of Purdy's yummy chocolate bars . . . made with only the finest and purest of ingredients . . . chock full of quick energy to give your child a lift during the school day! . . . Some of the bars which make the biggest hit with youngsters are Burnt Almond Cara . . . Marshmallow . . . Chocolate Nut Fudge . . . Mint Meltie . . . and a Peanut Brittle Bar in the shape of a peanut . . . other favorite goodies are chunks of peanut brittle, plain fudge . . . maybe a handful of those little colored party mints which we're told are so well liked by children that they often buy them for themselves! . . . Another source of quick energy . . . and a real treat . . . Purdy's Mountain Mix . . . a mixture of raisins, peanuts and bits of chocolate . . . With something like this to look forward to at the lunch break, there'll be no lagging feet schoolwards! . . . Purdy's Hillside Shopping Centre, 595-1241, Mayfair Shopping Centre, 385-5032 and Empress Hotel, 3853555.

KNIT AND CHAT

Measuring Up to Quilting

By MAY E. MacLEAN

Judging how much material is needed for a quilt isn't difficult if you've measured accurately. Most material comes in a standard 45-inch width; sheet muslin can be purchased in 72-inch widths.

The treatment of the surface design will determine how you will figure the yardage. If you will be creating an over-all quilting design, or appliqueing pieces to one large piece of material, then you will need to figure out how many widths will cover the surface of your piece, (bedcovers and smaller items alike), and the length needed from top to bottom.

If two or more lengths are needed, split one piece lengthwise and sew to either side of the other piece to prevent a seam from running down the centre of the top. This method can also be used for the backing of the one piece. After pieces are joined, press the seams open.

The size and number of the quilt blocks will determine how much fabric is needed. Sketch a small rectangel on a sheet of paper to represent one yard of 45-inch material. Decide how many blocks will fit across and down one yard, and how many yards will be needed for the total number of blocks to be used. Don't forget the quarter-inch seam allowance to the sides of all blocks when you are laying out.

For instance, if your blocks are 14½ by 14½ inches, you can get two out of the 36-inch length, with seven inches left over; you will also find that you can get three 14½ inch blocks from the 45-inch width with 1½ inches left over. Therefore, you are getting six blocks per yard of material. If you need 20 blocks, it will be necessary to buy 3½ yards of 45-inch fabric.

Applique and patchwork pieces can be measured in much the same way. First, group together pattern pieces that will be the same colour, estimate how large an area each pattern piece covers, and multiply this by the total number of pieces of the one color to be used.

Perhaps you have two pieces to be cut from green fabric — a leaf and a stem. The leaf measures about two inches by four inches with seam allowance added, and there are 20 leaves in all. Multiplying two inches by 20, you will need a strip 40 inches long and four inches wide. Then do the same for the stem. Add these two together and lay them out on a sketch representing one yard of 45-inch material. The suggested sketches come in very handy when you are shopping around for materials and figuring a cutting layout.

This week's pattern is a girl's crochet shoulder bag, just like mother's and just what is needed for these "back-to-school" days.

Crocheted from three balls in the most simple and basic stitches that even a beginner to crochet can do, you'll find this very pleasant pick-up work through the summer months. Why not teach a young lady to make one for herself?

Wonderful World of Animals

By DR. FRANK MILLER

DEAR DR. MILLER: On our last trip, I was eaten by mosquitoes as usual, and stung twice by hornets. I've about had it. How come neither my husband nor our dog get bit or stung, but I always do? — J. H.

DEAR J. H.: I would guess your dog has a coat which makes getting to him, the tasty part, more work than it's worth for the mosquito, particularly since he's probably not as tasty to a mosquito, anyway, as you are. Mosquitoes prefer dark clothing and overheated bodies. (Possibly your husband can keep cool along the trail easier than you can.) Hornets home in on sexy perfume and eaters of sweets, but even then they don't usually sting unless you fight them. Keeping completely still takes courage with a bee or wasp about, but it's eminently practical.

In logging thousands of miles with my dog, Benjamin, I've found his best traveling companion (besides me) is a heavy terrycloth pillowcase I made for him with a zipper. It's light, easy to carry and washable, and it's his "bed" wherever we go so he's always at home. If he has to sleep on a hard floor or something, I stuff a towel in it and he still has a soft bed. Otherwise, it's just zipped up with nothing on the inside. He loves it and never feels insecure. — W. M.

DEAR W. M.: Congratulations on Benny's practically perfect pooch pad.

DEAR DR. MILLER: I thought my cat wasn't feeling too well and I tried to take his temperature. Then I discovered he was feeling just fine, except boy, did he get mad. He kicked the thermometer on the floor, and that was the end of it. When I was taking his temperature (or trying to), I used an oral thermometer. Was that what caused all the trouble? Does it have to be the rectal kind? — R. Y.

DEAR R. Y.: Oral thermometers can be used on the other end but preferably only by an expert for they are the most difficult to insert. The compromise stubby thermometer, actually the most rugged of the three, is usually the best for feline temperature-taking. Some degree of expertise is highly desirable for this procedure, and at least some degree of pussycat permissiveness is essential. The technique is best developed under supervision, and preferably on a well animal. Then, when it becomes a really essential procedure, it can be accomplished without undue trauma for either participant.

DEAR DR. MILLER: Sunshine's not one of your canaries who's bothered by summer heat. The hotter it is, the better he likes it, the reason being he's been practically bald since he was a chick. My questions is, he eats hardly anything in hot weather. As long as he doesn't seem to lose weight — it's easy to tell without feathers, and he isn't — is there anything to worry about? — I. K.

DEAR I. K.: Sunshine should favor heat, since it allows him a little time off from fuelling his furnace. At "normal" temperatures, he'd have to keep his crop crammed, calories being constantly consumed, to provide adequate body heat. An ordinary canary suddenly finding itself featherless would probably succumb from chilling. Even though Sunshine's making it as an old nudist, he should be protected from chilling and drafts as much as possible.

dear abby

DEAR ABBY: We have two sons, both in college, for which we're very thankful because they both dropped out and decided to go back. Both are working part-time, but they prefer to live at home.

The problem is that they are on a "health" kick; and they look like they are ready to drop dead from malnutrition. They won't touch meat or fat of any kind. And no dairy products unless they are positively fat-free. The boys live on fresh fruits, fresh vegetables, nuts, rice and wheat germ.

They meditate twice a day like a pair of zombies, and I'm afraid one day they'll put themselves into a trance and won't be able to come out of it.

I suppose we should thank God they're not into drugs, (they won't even touch cigarettes), but how we would love to see them eating like normal human beings again to get a little meat on their bones.

Can you help us? — DISTRAUGHT PARENTS

DEAR ABBY: I was 11 years old when my parents decided to get a divorce. I felt terrible about it and cried and begged them not to, but they wouldn't listen.

Then my dad moved out and my mom and I stayed alone in the house. I got used to the idea, and it really wasn't so bad because Mom and I got closer. Then one night my dad came over and they talked nearly all night long and he stayed over night. My Mom even let Dad kiss her!

Now they say they are going to try to make a go of their marriage. I'm jealous. How come?

I should be glad they aren't splitting up, but I'm not. I'm upset. What is wrong with me? — JEALOUS AND UPSET

DEAR JEALOUS AND UPSET: Nothing. You enjoyed having your mom all to yourself, and now that you have to share her with your dad again, you're jealous and upset.

These reactions are normal, so don't feel guilty. Look at it this way: If they do make a go of their marriage, it could be better for everybody.

Coronary Heart Disease Decline

By LESTER COLEMAN, M.D.

There has been a dramatic decline in the mortality statistics of coronary heart disease.

Dr. Weldon J. Walker, director of the Cardiovascular Department of the White Memorial Centre in Los Angeles, has released a report in the medical magazine, "Modern Medicine."

It was noticed that during the Second World War, when there was a marked shortage of food, especially eggs and animal fat, cardiovascular mortality in Norway and Sweden declined considerably.

When these foods became available again there was an increase of atherosclerosis and mortality statistics.

The international publicity about cholesterol, dietary fats, cigarettes and early treatment of high blood pressure has paid off in remarkable dividends in the U.S. and Canada.

Dr. Walker states, "The greatest decrease in smoking has been among middle-aged and older men, who are at high risk of coronary disease and account for most coronary deaths.

"Therefore, the decrease of smoking in this group produced the major over-all decline in coronary mortality."

Even greater reduction of mortality is inevitable if children are taught lifetime dietary habits that will prevent the formation of atherosclerosis (plaques of calcium) in the blood vessels.

Intensive educational programs that will keep teenagers from embarking on smoking will add enormously to the prevention of heart disease in the following generations.

Consider some of these factors that are now known to be vital to survival, as published in a statistical survey.

"A man whose blood pressure is over 150 has more than two times the risk of heart attacks and nearly four times the risk of a stroke as compared to a man whose blood pressure is under 120."

Add to this "a man with blood cholesterol of 250 or more has about three times the risk of a heart attack and stroke of a man with a cholesterol level of below 194."

And finally a man who smokes more than a pack of cigarettes a day has nearly twice the risk of heart attack and five times the risk of stroke as a non-smoker."

Think about this. Men and women must all think about this, and consider the joy of planned survival.

indoor gardens

By LYNN and JOEL RAPP

As you know, we love to print letters from readers telling of their particular plant successes. Here's one that speaks — or writes — for itself.

DEAR LYNN AND JOEL:

Enjoy your column every day. I'm still a novice on indoor plants, but have been caring for and learning about them for almost two years. Friends gave me a lovely Piggyback with a beautiful walnut hanger, which was weird because up to then I had a reputation for killing even plastic plants. I was determined to keep this Piggyback alive, so with the help of books, plants, love and keeping my fingers crossed I now still have not only the Piggyback but also many other lovely green friends.

What I want to tell you about is my Philodendron Monstera, or Split-Leaf. It's about three feet high with a large stalk and has three huge leaves (18 inches by 10 inches) for more than a year. I've treated it in a friendly manner until last month when, basket and all, I placed it outside by the front door. Now I have not one but two beautiful new green leaves. Why? I have learned that plants, like people, have personalities and live better in the place they like best. There's always an exception to every rule, I guess. Sincerely — C. R.

DEAR C. R.:

It's a message we are constantly preaching, but coming from a reader it's even more fun and believable.

Gangs of Notorious Bandits Rise Again in Rural India

MORADABA, India Reuter — Dacoits, the notorious rural bandits of northern India, have once again become a serious law-and-order problem, with reports of incidents almost every day.

The Uttar Pradesh state government announced in June that police had killed 326 of the outlaws in the year since an internal emergency was imposed on India. Nearly 5,000 others were arrested. Sixteen police officers also died.

Dacoit territory is a T-shaped area from the near-impenetrable Chambal ravines, south of the Taj Mahal city of Agra, across almost the whole of Uttar Pradesh and into Haryana.

The Dacoit has been described as a cold-blooded killer with a price on his head and a Robin Hood-like figure.

In a typical incident in mid-May, peasants in the small village of Sikri-Ka-Purna, north of the state capital of Lucknow, beat off Dacoit raiders, killing two of them.

But the raiders shot dead four of the villagers, including a young woman.

Police recently cornered and killed a notorious Dacoit leader in the jungle near the big grain centre of Bulandshaha, only 50 miles from New Delhi.

The man, Mahender Singh, was credited with leading nearly 50 Dacoit raids including two major bank robberies and a number of murders.

The Grand Trunk Road between Moradabad and Shahjahanpur, in central Uttar Pradesh, is one of the areas plagued by Dacoits. Trucks and buses move along it after dark in convoys which police escorts and drivers of private vehicles are told that they make the journey at their own risk.

Some of the better-organized gangs operate disguised in police uniforms. Their main targets are buses, especially those carrying wedding parties, and trucks with valuable cargo.

Trains running through the major Dacoit areas carry armed escorts, but there are still frequent reports of robberies by gangs who have eluded or overpowered the guards.

Truck drivers along the Moradabad route are cynical about the value of their police protection.

A group of drivers said they faced delays of several hours while police formed up convoys and then had to bribe the police before they were allowed to proceed.

"Now we have to deal with two kinds of Dacoits," one drover commented.

The more traditional Dacoits operate from the ravines and jungles in the backward, arid border regions between Uttar Pradesh and Madhya Pradesh.

Gangs are often 20 to 30 strong and they rravel on horses or on foot.

Sociologists say that in this area, Dacoits are not common criminals, but an institution rooted in tradition and fostered by a variety of socio-economic conditions.

"The feudal setup, poverty and exploitation, inter-caste rivalries, all contribute their share to this age-old problem," the Indian Express said in an editorial.

"The Dacoit may be a criminal in the eyes of the law and his victims. To himself and the majority of people in the villages, he is simply a Baaghi, a rebel who opposes authority and injustice."

The Dacoit problem in the Chambal area of Madhyab Pradesh was virtually smashed four years ago when more than 500 bandits surrendered in an amnesty.

But after two years of comparative calm, the outlaw problem has become as serious as ever.

Up to mid-April this year, 142 killings, nearly 300 robberies and 63 kidnappings had been reported to police. Special anti-Dacoit forces have been formed.

The depth of the problem was illustrated when after weeks of negotiations, the Uttar Pradesh and Madhya Pradesh state governments succeeded in persuading only 63 Dacoits in the area to lay down their arms in June.

Officials had expected a surrender of about twice that number and police immediately announced they would step up the drive against the Dacoits.

Meanwhile, police in the New Delhi area have failed to capture a daring young outlaw who is perhaps the country's first urban Dacoit.

Dunder Singh, 35, college-educated and a former army cadet, has become something of a folk hero because of rumors of his exploits since the emergency.

Newspapers have carried front-page reports of his clashes with police including a car chase and hour-long gun battle in which two of his associates were killed.

India's most successful film of all time is a 3½-hour epic on the reign of terror and violence of a Dacoit gang.

The film, Sholay Flames, released late last year and popularly known as the first "curry western," is still playing to packed houses.

Keep Those Pigs Out of Ottawa

OTTAWA (CP) — Contributors to the CBC-TV program This is the Law, which tests the layman's knowledge of legal oddities, could have a field day in a basement vault in Ottawa's city hall where about 20,000 local bylaws are stored.

Some date back to 1850, including one prohibiting the herding of pigs, sheep and cattle along the banks of the canals in the capital.

Another, passed in 1908, attacked air pollution problems by preventing the emission of dense smoke for a period of more than six minutes in any hour.

A 1909 bylaw states that all drivers of "horseless vehicles" must sound bells or horns when approaching an intersection, while a 1904 bylaw requires that Ottawa's telephone poles be painted in two colors, although the choice of colors was not specified.

But not all the bylaws are as quaint and many of them still are in force. The problem is knowing which ones.

To find out, several researchers have been assigned to sift through steel cabinets crammed from floor to ceiling in the gloomy vault and stuffed full of the bylaws.

The researchers must read each and every bylaw, since that is the only way of telling for sure which ones are still on the books. They will then compile a list of them.

Working backwards from 1975, they have managed to reach the 1968 bylaws and have produced a catalogue of the city's laws passed during that eight-year span. But they still have a long way to go.

"It's a huge task," said researcher Florence Elskamp.

SUNDAY HOROSCOPE

Astrological Forecast for Sunday, September 5

By SYDNEY OMARR

ARIES (March 21-April 19): You may feel "cut off at the pass." That's temporary. Know it and don't rush headlong into fray. Means take it easy. A friend can aid, even though money flow is slowed. Cancer, Capricorn persons are likely to be in picture.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Obtain valid hint from Aries message. Key is flexibility. Make do with available material. Maintain integrity — and sense of humor. Accent is on rotund associate who seems jolly but could be confused. A new view of aspirations is necessary.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Be aware of details necessary to achieve long-range objective. Relative with sad story should be listened to with sympathy — but don't be disuaded from your own course. You may have to overturn tradition in order to create your own legends. You'll understand!

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Legal problem affecting funds can be resolved. Key is to obtain access to source material. Gemini, Virgo could be involved. Member of opposite sex is in picture. Something that had been obscured — or deliberately hidden — will be located.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Be diplomatic; don't force issues. Applies particularly in connection with home, family affairs. Concentrate on being thorough rather than flashy. Legal loopholes may exist. Know it and search. Refuse to be trapped by a technicality.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): See clearly, without "benefit" of wishful thinking. Romantic illusions could topple. This would be constructive. If you face reality, you ultimately gain strength. Pisces person could figure prominently. Work health matters are accented.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Involvement is featured — including romance, love, unique commitment. Key now is organization. Take charge. Bring priorities into sharper focus. Be alert to fiscal necessities. Don't promise more than can be delivered. You will feel glow of genuine affection.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Complete rather than begin — put finishing touches on manuscript, format, project. Be sure of structure — test it for solidity. Patience, maturity is put to test. You'll have opportunity to advance position —amidst stormy debate.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Surprise in store — sudden event gets you going on new course. Leo, Aquarius persons could figure prominently. Family member finds it difficult to "keep a secret." Trips, calls, messages, flurry of social activity are on agenda.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Emphasis on ability to collect and evaluate. you're able to build for future, to score quality, to understand what traditions mean and how to capitalize on them. Cancer — and another Capricorn — could be in picture. Refuse to relinquish object which you discovered or earned.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Lunar cycle is such that you make impression on one at top, you imprint style, gain in stature. Gemini, Sagittarius persons figure prominently. Key now is to expand horizons, to be sociable, versatile and willing to back beliefs with actions. You'll have allies!

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Be direct, specific, cognizant of details, traps, leases, shady shelters, hidden clauses. Closed-door meeting could be of more signifieance than imagined. Know it and have alternatives at hand. A long-distance call, message helps settle issue in your favor.

IF SETPEMBER 5th IS YOUR BIRTHDAY you are analytical, creative, attractive, fond of change, travel, variety. You started project this year — August and September represent pivotal months. July was a testing period. You're going places — you'll have a more independent stance. You have what so many long for — a second chance. Make the most of it! Gemini, Virgo persons play important roles in your life.

Tories Even Better At Provincial Level

A survey earlier this year by a UVic sociologist suggests continuing disenchantment with federal Liberals across Canada and growing support for Conservatives is even more marked in B.C.

Gallup poll results published Thurday show public support for the Liberal government has dwindled to 29 per cent across the country while the PCs are favored by 42 per cent.

But the voter sampling taken by Daniel Koenig this spring showed popularity of the Progressive Conservative party had climbed to 44 per cent while the Liberals were favored by 20 per cent.

He received 905 replies from B.C. residents who were asked: "if another federal election were held today, for which political party's candidate would you vote?"

The NDP drew 18 per cent and the Social Credit 5 per cent.

Koenig said that over the years actual Progressive Conservative electoral strength tends to be even higher than levels of support indicated by such surveys.

YOUR HOROSCOPE

Astrological Forecast for

Monday, Sept. 6

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Accent on friendship, accelerated social opportunities, food, fun, relief of tensions — long-range travel plans. Gemini, Sagittarius individuals figure prominently. Some romantic desires come close to fulfillment. You're going to be happier!

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): An associate or "boss" pays meaningful compliment. You may be given assignment that requires close attention to detail. Key is to state needs in frank, direct manner. Stick to facts—leave fantasy for another time.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Long-range plans, travel, communication — these areas spotlighted. Find out why things happen. Be analytical. Take seriously words by member of opposite sex. Your ability to understand, to perceive potential is stressed. Virgo — and another Gemini — are in picture.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Dig beneath surface — be aware of financial-emotional needs of partner, mate. You locate lost articles, gain understanding of clauses, leases, requirements, persuasions from various quarters. Involvement with member of opposite sex is distinct possibility.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Emphasis on partnership, commitment, legal agreement, public relations, marriage. You are "tested." There are temptations, apparent short cuts. Key is to insist on quality — and to be wise enough to eschew get-rich-quick schemes.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Practical matters dominate. You learn about costs, credits, debits. You also find out about organization, priorities, the handling of added responsibility. You are compensated but you work for what is received. No free lunch!

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Children, affection, love, change, speculative ventures are part of personal scenario. Your "Mark" is imprinted — you find that people are reacting to you — intensely or cooly, nothing halfway. Capricorn, Cancer figure prominently.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): This is "sunshine" time for you; areas that were dark receive benefit of greater light. Secret reports, files are opened and you benefit. Specifically, you learn about property and its value . . .how best to insure security.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Short trips, family reunions, visits and views could be featured. You may feel pulled in two directions. Key is to share knowledge, to permit intuitive intellect free rein — and to let those close to you know that you are an individual, not an appendage.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Accent on possessions, valuables, money, payments and collections. You locate what has been missing, you consolidate. You gain greater understanding of assets. Your views are published, distributed. You are part of a "celebration" and you eat too much!

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Moon in your zodiacal sign corresponds with emphasis on personality, response from public, originality, initiative. Timing improves. You also find genuine bargain in apparel. Your unorthodox qualities, methods gain greater acceptance.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Theatre, film, the media, backstage glimpses — these could be part of your personal panorama. Gemini, Virgo persons could be involved. Open dialogue with one who writes, speaks, graphically illustrates points. Member of opposite sex does figure prominently.

IF SEPTEMBER 6th IS YOUR BIRTHDAY you have "harmonious" voice, a tendency towards extravagance when it comes to luxury items . . . and a "sweet tooth." In October, emotional pressure is relieved. You'll be free of burden. You get long-distance communication that leads to vacation-travel plans. Taurus, Libra persons play important roles in your life.

Tuesday, Sept. 7

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Feeling of confinement won't last forever. Know it and begin preparing for brighter horizons. A relative could aid if you are temporarily incapacitated. You are able to obtain factual information. You'll be "stronger" as result.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Change of routine is indicated, beneficial — and necessary. Finincial status is activated. Means you shake off lethargy, get opportunity to increase earnings. This occurs in unorthodox manner — and you'll have to help yourself.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Home life, faimly relationships could be spotlighted. Taurus, Libra individuals play key roles, you gain prestige. You receive invitation from one who pulls strings of authority. Be receptive — and diplomatic.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Steer away from direct confrontation. Take ring roads. Check with Libran. Much that you need to understand may be obscured or temporarily out-of-view. Long-distance communication can be established. Know it and act accordingly.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Love and money may mix — you are involved and that could be constructive. Capricorn, Cancer individuals could be in picture. Cash in screw, leases, tax arrangements could be part of scenario. Practical approach to business questions is necessary.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Avoid rushing into situations, decisions, judgments. Finish rather than initiate projects. Stress sincerity, be willing to put forth beliefs in direct manner. Aries, Libra could be in picture. Accent on permissions, rights, legal procedures. Marital status also is spotlighted.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): You get job done in dynamic manner. You receive plaudits from those who, in past, tended to take you for granted. You could have cause for celebration. Get to heart of matters — be original, independent and creative. Leo could be very much in picture.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23 Nov. 21): Follow through on hunch. Give full play to intuition. Aquarian is involved. Be ready for reading, writing, travel, special and exciting relationship. Children, love, drama all are part of personal scenario. Personal magnetism soars — and so does popularity.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Many factors fall into place. What was a puzzle becomes discernible. You perceive patterns, trends and cycles. Gemini—and another Sagittarian — could figure prominently. Specifically, you legally tie down a claim, be it physical property or written material.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Red tape is part of picture; you're more than able to cope with it. You are, in fact, capable of tearing down for purpose of reconstruction. That becomes evident. Accent, specifically, is on ideas, concepts, close neighbors, relatives, the way you utilize talents to untangle web of mediocrity.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Speculative venture could strike pay dirt. You seem able now to curry favor with "Lady Luck." Actually, it is a combination of timing and experience. The blend works. Know it and be confident enough to assert views.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Lunar cycle high — any opposition is merely a healthy challenge. You get support from various quarters, including parent or other authority symbols. Domestic change, adjustment occurs. You receive gift of art object or luxury item.

IF SEPTEMBER 7th IS YOUR BIRTHDAY you are analytical, creative, introspective, a "practical dreamer." You are psychic, temperamental, a perfectionist. Forces have been scattered this year . . . May was "heavy" and October will see you facing issues and imprinting your style. Pisces, Virgo persons play important roles in your life.

Flash Flooding Could Happen In B.C.—Expert

VANCOUVER (CP), — The destruction in last month's Big Thompson canyon flood in Colorado could be repeated in British Columbia, Raymnond Rodgers, an Abbotsford planning consultant, warns.

Rodgers said that conditions in much of B.C.'s interior are similar to those in the area that was wiped out in the Colorado flood.

That flood was caused by a freak rainstorm which washed down the twisting canyon, killing at least 129 persons.

Such a storm in B.C. would flood many homes and farms built in the beds of long-dry rivers, Rodgers said on his return from a recent inspection of the Big Thompson canyon.

"The problem in the Colorado situation is that the terrain is normally dry and all hell breaks loose in a storm," said Rodgers, an upland housing specialist.

Rodgers said many examples of such terrain are found in the area around Princeton.

"I could take somebody from the area and transport them to parts of Colorado and they wouldn't even know they weren't in Princeton," he said.

"This sort of territory begins at Manning Pass and runs to a point this side of the Kootenays — then it starts again in Alberta.

"The Interior has exactly the same terrain (as Colorado), you can see all the old water courses," Rodgers said.

A major storm would fill those water courses again with enough water to demolish anything built on them, he said.

The Colorado storm has been described as a once-in-a-century phenomenon, but Rodgers said it is impossible to say that such a storm will never happen in B.C.

Weather records for the Interior do not date back far enough to predict large storms, he said.

"We really know very little about the history of storms in B.C.," he said.

An atmospheric environment service spokesman confirmed this, saying "When you're in the interior of any large land mass, you can get warm air masses coming in and storms like this are always possible.

"It's a possibility — slight, I'd say, but anything can happen."

The provincial deputy environment minister, Ben Marr, said his department is worried about the problem, but is doing everything it can to solve it.

"There are many areas of B.C. where building takes place in the floodplain," he said.

"We're very much aware of the possibility (of massive flooding) and we're doing everything we can about floodplain building."

Weddings

Jessiman — Pimlott

Two Sooke families were united August 7, 1976, when Deanna Margaret, third daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Raymond Pimlott, became the bride of William Francis, eldest son of Mr. and Mrs. Francis Jessiman. The lovely double-ring ceremony, conducted by the Reverend Robert F. Cunningham, took place in Knox Presbyterian Church at Sooke.

The bride was radiant in the dress she borrowed from her sister, Karen DieBold, that Karen had worn at her own wedding in Germany in 1973. Given in marriage by her father, the bride was attended by her two sisters, Katherine Govenlock and Karen DieBold, who wore identical dresses of pale blue with matching hats. Their old fashioned bouquets were of blue bachelor buttons and white carnations with baby's breath and blue ribbon streamers. The bride's bouquet was in all-white stephanotis, baby roses and baby's breath with white ribbon streamers. Best man was Randy Michelson while Reginald Clark was usher, assisted by Jim DieBold, Alden Govenlock and Steven Herrling. Flowers were arranged by the groom's mother, Velma Jessiman, and the music was provided by Florence Acreman.

The reception was held at Broome Hill Golf Club, which was decorated for the occasion by Jean Henderson. The cake, prepared by the bride's mother was beautifully decorated by Mrs. Dot Roberrson. Ralph Pontious, an old friend of the family, proposed the traditional toast to the bride. Master of Ceremonies for the evening was the bride's brother-in-law Alden Govenlock, while music for dancing was provided by the "Sapphires".

Out of town guests were from Nanaimo, Tofino, Port Alberni, Campbell River, Cowichan Lake, Vancouver, Seattle and Alberta.

Nadiger — Cambrey

A double-ring ceremony was held August 7, 1976, at Gordon United Church, when Tracie Elaine Cambrey, became the wife of Kevin Ernest Nadiger. Tracie was given in marriage by her father Don Cambrey.

The bride looked radiant in a beautiful floor-length gown of white nylon trimmed with white appliques. She carried a white Prayer Book decorated with red roses and a white moth orchid. Tracie was attended by Mrs. Pat Moir who looked lovely in her red floor-length gown and carried a cascade of white carnations and stephanotis. Kevin was handsome in a white tuxedo accented with a boutonniere of red roses. His best man, Mr. Norman Wilkinson looked charming in his black tuxedo.

A reception was held at Playland Curling Club where Mr. Leo Shields attended as Master of Ceremonies and Mr. Dennis King offered a toast to the bride.

The couple travelled the Western States and Canada for their honeymoon and will make their home in Victoria.

Mace — Pimlott

A lovely wedding took place on July 17, 1976, at Oak Bay United Church when Susan Kathleen, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Norman Pimlott, 1356 St. Patrick St. was united in marriage with Gregory Charles, son of Mr. and Mrs. Jim Mace, 3225 Ripon Rd. Matron of honour was Mrs. Colleen Richards, the bride's sister, and Mrs. Lee Pimlott, sister-in-law of the bride. Colleen Hayes and Colleen McClintick, bridesmaids. Best man was John Murphy and the groom's brothers, Bob and Doug Mace, and Dave Carere, ushers. The bride's niece, Donna Pimlott, and the groom's nephew, Scott Mace, were flower girl and ring bearer respectively. Rev. W. van Druten officiated.

The reception was held at the Commons Block, University of Victoria. Mr. Dan Richards, the bride's brother-in-law, acted as Master of Ceremonies. Mr. Ken Ravenhill proposed the toast to the bride. Dancing followed, to the music of the "Chinooks."

Greg and Sue are now making their home in Edmonton.

Wallace — Le Bel

St. John's Church, Victoria, B.C. was the scene of a double ring ceremony at 7 p.m. on Saturday, July 24, 1976, when Yvonne Lillian, second daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Art LeBel of Victoria, B.C. became the bride of Gregory Paul Wallace, second son of Mr. and Mrs. Robert Wallace of Victoria, B.C. The saying of the marriage vows was solemnized by Rev. Lonsdale.

The bride, given in marriage by her father, had chosen an exquisite gown of delicate white chiffon over taffeta. Lovely re-embroidered lace over English net formed a pretty neckline and adorned the bodice, front and back. Matching lace designed the lilypoint cuffs of the sheer Bishop styled sleeves. A lovely watteau train of chiffon draped gracefully from the shoulders and extended to a slight train. Her lace veil was shoulder length. She carried a cascade bouquet of yellow baby roses and stephanotis. Her jewellery was a matching opal set. The bride was attended by her girl friend Miss Gerry Howie as maid of honor, and Miss Jacqueline Le Bel and Miss Darlene Wallace as bridesmaids. They were attired in identical floor-length gowns of yellow and green, and carried bouquets of yellow daisies, white mums and pink carnations. The groom was attended by Steve Preston as best man and ushers were Steve Wilson and Gordon Le Bel, brother of the bride.

A reception was held in the St. Joseph's Hall. Mr. Holland, a friend of the bride, gave a toast to the bride. The young couple will be making their new home in Victoria, B.C.

Burnett — Andersen

Metropolitan United Church was the scene of a double ring ceremony at 6 p.m. on Saturday, June 5, 1976, when Judy Margaret, only daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Villy Andersen, became the bride of Allan Russel Burnett, youngest son of Lieutenant Commander and Mrs. Edward Burnett of Duncan, B.C. Reverend Laura Butler officiated.

The bride was given in marriage by her father. Maid of Honour Patty McLean, and bridesmaids, Miranda Andersen and Brenda Thomas, wore identical gowns. The flower girl Tricia Thomas, carried a basket of flowers. Flemming Andersen attended as best man, and the ushers were Bob Burnett and Dale Marchessault. Ring-bearer was Billy McClung, the groom's nephew.

Mr. Niels Andersen, the uncle of the bride proposed a toast to the happy couple at the reception in Cedar Hill Community Centre. Dancing was enjoyed to Denny's Canned Music.

Out of town guests were from Denmark, Saskatoon, and Vancouver. Mr. and Mrs. Burnett went on a honeymoon to San Francisco. The couple has taken up residence in Surrey, B.C.

Parsons — Fincham

A unique double ring ceremony was officiated by Father Leo Robert on the lovely afternoon of July 31, 1976, in James Bay United Church. Jill Denise, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Gerald Fincham, West Vancouver, B.C., exchanged vows with Eric Thomas Parsons, son of Mr. and Mrs. William Parsons of Victoria.

The bride chose a Victorian style gown of cream coloured cotton, featuring lace sleeves and lace over the tie-up bodice, with a full tiered skirt. A cream coloured picture hat with a single peach rose upon the brim, completed the bride's outfit. She carried a beautiful cascading bouquet of peach roses and baby's breath. The bride's jewellery included a diamond necklace, a gift of the groom, and her grandmother's engagement ring. The maid of honour Lee Morris and bridesmaid Francine Fincham, sister of the bride, wore long green floral dresses and carried bouquets of daisies. The flower girl Heather Vokes, wore a green floral pinafore and carried a basket of daisies. The groom chose a white Charleston suit and was attended by Peter Brown as best man, and ushers Steven Parsons and Dave Parsons, brothers of the groom.

From the Church, Eric and Jill went to Beacon Hill Park for pictures, in a lovely horse and carriage owned and driven by Mrs. Doris Ganton. Chris Vokes proposed the toast to the bride at the reception held at The Sherwood Park Inn. The beautiful three-tiered wedding cake was made by the groom's mother.

Following the reception, Eric and Jill left on a two-week honeymoon to California. They will reside in Victoria.

Logie — Dann

A double-ring ceremony solemnized by Rev. L. Butler in The Chapel of Metropolitan Church, Sat., Aug. 21, 1976, at 3 p.m., united in marriage Ann-Louise Dann, youngest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. A. Dann, Sechelt, B.C., and Bob D. Logie, only son of Mr. and Mrs. Doug Logie, Victoria.

Following the wedding, a reception was held at the home of the groom's parents. For their honeymoon, the happy couple left for a 3-week trip to Spain and North Africa.

They will reside in Victoria.

Bertulis — Kellehar

Mr. and Mrs. P. Kellehar announce the marriage on Sunday, August 22, 1976 of their daughter Karen, to Stuart, son of Mr. and Mrs. J. Bertulis, Nottingham, England.

After a short honeymoon, the couple will reside in Victoria.

Davidson — Owens

On July 3, 1976, a beautiful double-ring ceremony took place in the Hope Lutheran Church with Pastor Carlson officiating. Lori Gay, only daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Albert J. Owens of Victoria, was united in marriage with Geoffrey Scott Davidson, son of Mr. and Mrs. M. W. Davidson, also of Victoria.

The bride, given in marriage by her father, was radiant in a princess-styled gown of white polyester crepe overlaid with gold and silver embroidered organza. The sweetheart neckline accentuated the strand of pearls borrowed from her mother. The three-tiered tulle veil was held in place by a small caplet that matched the gown. Both the gown and veil were designed by the bride. Her bouquet was of red roses, baby's breath and stephanotis and cascaded almost to the floor. The Maid of Honour, Ms. Judy Brennan, was elegant in a blue floral patterned halter gown with hooded peplum jacket of matching blue chiffon. Pam Morry, the attending bridesmaid, was charming in her blue shantung halter dress and jacket of patterned chiffon. Both bouquets were of pink roses with blue tinted star mums. The groom wore a white tuxedo, while his attendants, best man Al Horstings and usher Kevin O'Brien wore matching tuxedos of powder blue.

A reception followed at the Sherwood Park Inn where the bride was toasted by her uncle Andrew Owens, and the toast to the groom was given by Barclay Mayo. Out of town guests came from Regina, Saskatoon and Edmonton.

Following a honeymoon across Canada, the deliriously happy couple are now residing in Squamish, B.C.

Spear — Saunders

The marriage is announced of Brenda Gwyneth, only daughter of Mrs. Gwyneth Saunders of Victoria, and the late Lieutenant Commander L. D. M. Saunders, and Stuart George Spear, son of Mrs. Connie Johnson, of Vancouver, and the late Mr. Arthur Spear.

The wedding took place on August 14, 1976, in St. John's Anglican Church, Shaughnessy, Vancouver. A reception followed at the Arbutus Club. On returning from their honeymoon, the happy couple will reside in Vancouver.

Yardley — Kidd

Kenneth Kidd and Jean Kidd take pleasure in announcing the marriage of their daughter Kathryn Jean, to David Wayne Yardley, son of Mr. and Mrs. H. C. Yardley, on July 31, 1976. The ceremony took place on the grounds of the Royal Victoria Yacht Club with Mr. Joe Percival, Unitarian Chaplain, officiating.

The bride was given in marriage by her father. Pattie Merriman was maid of honor and the bridesmaids were Julie Carson, Barbara Kidd and Melanie Kidd. Mike Bamford was best man and Tom Horbatuk, Rick Bowers and Ron Yardley were ushers.

The reception was held in the Royal Victoria Yacht Club where the toast to the bride was given by her uncle Ronald Foxall. Mr. Douglas Kidd was master of Ceremonies.

The newlyweds left on a honeymoon trip to California and will reside in Victoria.

Turnbull — Rempel

Mr. and Mrs. William Rempel of 3200 Midland Road, Victoria, B.C. are pleased to announce the marriage of their oldest daughter Miss Deborah Ann Rempel to Mr. Grant Kenneth Turnbull, son of Mr. and Mrs. Ken Turnbull of Treherne, Manitoba.

The ceremony took place at St. Patrick's Church, Victoria, B.C. on August 21, 1976. Father Jackson officiated at the ceremony. The bride's attendants were Miss Dawn Rempel and Miss Joan Turnbull. The best man was Mr. Bill Scharff and the usher was Mr. Doug Tudor.

The couple will reside in Kingston, Ontario.

Anniversaries

Bell 50th

Mr. and Mrs. Alex Bell will be celebrating their Golden Wedding Anniversary on September 11th. They were married at the home of Mrs. E. Gillingham, 2318 Douglas St., Victoria, in 1926, by the late Rev. J. D. Campbell.

Mr. Bell was born in Falkland, B.C. of a pioneer family. He came to Victoria as a young man and worked Up-Island logging. In the late thirties, he joined the Empress Hotel as porter and was there until he retired. Mrs. Bell arrived from England as an infant in arms and was raised in Victoria.

A family dinner will be held at 6 p.m. for the family including their daughters Mrs. S. Cawsey (Beverley), Mr. and Mrs. R. Storie (Lois) and their son Mr. Russell Bell, and their grandchildren. Open House will be held at their residence 3066 Scott Street, from 2-4 p.m. and from 7:30 on. Edna and Alex will be happy to greet their friends, neighbours and relatives at their open house to help celebrate the happy occasion. No gifts, please.

Hall 50th

The Golden Wedding Anniversary of Mr. and Mrs. Frank Hall, Arnot Ave., was celebrated on Friday, September 3, 1976. They were united in marriage at Centennial United Church, Gorge Road, Victoria, by the late Rev. J. P. Westman.

Mr. Hall was born in Cornwall, England, came to Canada in 1911, and served in World War 1. He later met his wife, the former Mary Holt, a native Victorian. Since their marriage in 1926, Mary and Frank have been residents of Victoria, and raised their family here. Mr. Hall served with Canadian Customs. They have three children — the Rev. Richard F. Hall, Mrs. William Murray Gooding (Ruth) and Mrs. Robert E. Sorenson (Beverly) and eight grandchildren.

"CONGRATULATIONS ON THIS MEMORABLE DAY!"

THEREFORE, THERE IS NOW no condemnation for those who are in Christ Jesus, because through Christ Jesus the law of the Spirit of life set me free from the law of sin and death. For what the law was powerless to do in that it was weakened by our sinful nature, God did by sending his own Son in the likeness of sinful man to be a sin offering.
Romans 8, verses 1, 2, 3.

Man Shot, Three Face Charges

CAMPBELL RIVER — Two men from the Lower Mainland will appear in court here Tuesday charged with attempted murder after a beating and shooting incident last week.

An RCMP spokesman said today Allen Wasyluk, 25, of Surrey and Carl Galway, 26, of Burnaby were arrested in Burnaby Thursday.

A third man will appear in court later to answer a charge of dangerous use of a firearm.

The incident took place at a house on the South Island Highway and involved firing of a .22-calibre rifle.

Donald Breckon of Campbell River suffered internal injuries in the beating and is reported in satisfactory condition in hospital here.

Wheat Acreage Is Up Sharply

OTTAWA (CP) — The land seeded to wheat this year rose sharply from 1975 and was well above the average of the previous 10 years, Statistics Canada said Friday.

The federal agency's July crop report said that 27.5 million acres were seeded to wheat across Canada this year, up from 23.4 million in 1975. The average over the previous 10 years was 24.1 million acres.

reported in satisfactory condition in hospital here.

The area seeded to the 16 spring-planted crops covered in the July survey was estimated at 53.3 million acres, an increase of one million acres from 1975.

Statistics Canada said last week that Prairie farmers are threshing their way through what may be a bumper crop. A good growing season and fine fall weather would likely produce high yields.

But the federal agency has reported that Canada had only 295.2 million bushels of wheat stored away when the accounting year for crops ended July 31, roughly equal to last year's stockpile but well under average stocks of 587.4 million.

World shortages during the last three years have reduced grain held in storage. One result has been higher prices.

Otto Lang, minister responsible for the Canadian wheat board, called last winter for increased wheat production in Canada.

Fisherman Escapes Boat Fire

A Vancouver commercial fisherman was rescued without injury Friday noon when his 42-foot troller caught fire about eight miles west of Bamfield on Vancouver Island's west coast.

R. W. Kobylt took to his liferaft after a flash fire followed an explosion when he started the engine of his vessel. He was the only one aboard the Salmon King.

A Mayday call was relayed by the U.S. Coast Guard to the Rescue Co-Ordination Centre in Victoria and a Labrador helicopter was dispatched from the city while a Buffalo aircraft was sent from Canadian Forces Base, Comox.

Dave Hegstrom, cox'n of the lifeboat stationed at Bamfield, said today the troller suffered heavy damage from the fire but was towed into Bamfield.

The fire might have been caused by leaking propane gas which was touched off by a spark, he said.

"To all persons having any interest in lands now or formally within Plan 957 in the City of Victoria:

and
DISTRICT OF NORTH SAANICH
NOTICE RE: REFERENDUM

On September 11th, 1976, the residents of Sidney and North Saanich will be required to vote on the Referendum to construct a Recreation Centre to serve both municipalities. The Sidney and North Saanich Councils urge all citizens to exercise their vote on this important question and to clarify some points, the following facts are given for the voter's benefit:

1. The Recreation Centre will be located on East Saanich Road and will consist of a skating rink and swimming pool with associated areas. This is the only facility provided for by the Referendum.
2. Application has been made for a Provincial Government Grant but, under conditions imposed by the Department of Municipal Affairs, if this grant is not approved, the Recreation Centre will not be built, even if the vote on September 11th is favourable. The figures published by the Recreation Commission are based on the net cost after deducting the Provincial Grant.
3. The vote will be taken on a designated area basis with one total result although persons will vote in their own municipality wherein they are registered.
4. Persons who qualified to vote as of July 16th, 1976, but did not register and are not on the list of Electors may register and vote on September 11th.

VOTE ON SEPTEMBER 11th, 1976, BETWEEN 8:00 A.M. AND 8:00 P.M. AT EITHER

Gall Bladder Can Often Stay Put

TORONTO (CP) — A middle-aged man was referred to a surgeon because he occasionally suffered abdominal discomfort. The surgeon found gallstones and recommended surgery.

The man got a second opinion from Dr. Eugene Vayda, a specialist in internal medicine, who said: "You've only suffered discomfort a few times. Why risk surgery when it isn't absolutely necessary."

That was several years ago. The man never had surgery and is well and free of symptoms today.

Dr. Douglas Wallace, secretary-general of the Canadian Medical Association, Ottawa, says: "If you're trained as a surgeon, you tend to think of surgical answers to medical problems."

In 1973-74, 662,811 operations were performed in Ontario, costing the province about $620 million — about 25 per cent of the health budget.

A large proportion of these operations were tonsillectomies, prostatectomies, varicose vein surgery, appendectomies, and hemorrhoid removal. Most common of all was gall-bladder surgery.

"Gall-bladder surgery is six times as frequent in Ontario as in Great Britain," said Dr. Richard Redinger, University of Western Ontario researcher. "It's the most common operation in Ontario today. The percentage of people who have had their gall bladders removed has doubled in 19 years."

"You can't entirely blame the surgeons," said Dr. Kenneth Walker, a Niagara Falls gynecologist and medical author. "They've been wrongly taught that silent stones are dangerous, so they take them out."

"About 70 per cent of the people with gallstones will never be aware of them," said Dr. M. M. Fisher, a researcher with Sunnybrook Medical Centre. "Of the remainder, only a minority will have recurrent attacks."

Dr. Redinger said another problem is that internal disorders are not always properly diagnosed so the gall bladder is removed but the symptoms persist.

With regard to tonsillectomies, Dr. William Feldman, professor of pediatrics at McMaster University, says 90 per cent of them are needless.

He says the medical studies on the value of tonsillectomies are poorly done and neither prove nor disprove the case for many of them.

Dr. C. P. Shaw of the University of Toronto's department of preventive medicine did a county-by-county comparison of tonsillectomy rates in Ontario and concluded, "Too often physicians schedule tonsillectomies out of habit or in response to parental pressure."

Tonsillectomies are twice as frequent here as in British Columbia, three times higher than Massachusetts and 12 times higher than Uppsala, Sweden.

"The truth is we don't know the ideal rate for performing tonsillectomies," said Dr. David Mitchell, chief otolaryngolist at the Hospital for Sick Children. "And we won't know until we conduct a thorough ongoing study."

To cure varicose veins, most Ontario physicians use a surgical technique known as vein stripping, in which the vein is surgically removed. The patient is usually incapacitated for four weeks at a total cost of more than $1,000.

There is another seldom-used technique, injecting a hardening agent into the varicose vein. The leg is bandaged and within four or five weeks the vein hardens, collapses and fades away. No surgery is required. The fee is $54 per leg.

Dr. Geoffrey Evans, a McMaster University cardiovascular surgeon, said: "I can't understand why doctors here shun the treatment. My conclusion after five years of study is that injection is as effective as surgery."

"The number of unnecessary appendectomies can be reduced by keeping patients under observation for a little while before operating," said internist Dr. Vayda.

In 1971 at the John Hopkins Hospital in Baltimore, all juvenile patients brought in with suspected appendicitis were put to bed and examined every few hours. Within eight to 12 hours, doctors knew whether the child could go home or needed an operation.

The policy produced a 20-percent decline in appendictomies while the incidence of ruptured appendices and deaths remained the same. The number of opened-by-mistake operations where the appendix removed was healthy, was reduced from 15 per cent to two per cent.

MOONSHINERS PUT OUT TO 'GRASS'

WILKESBORO, N.C. (AP) — The good ol' boys who gave Wilkes County in the mountains its reputation as the moonshine capital of North Carolina have gone to pot.

Law enforcement officers have destroyed more than 35,000 marijuana plans in the country this summer — and only two liquor stills.

Sheriff Bill G. Anderson and Greg Radcliff, State Bureau of Investigation special agent for narcotics, think some of the former moonshiners are now in the marijuana business.

"Marijuana is easier and brings in more money," Radcliff said.

Another reason, he said, is that courts have generally given lighter sentences to drug law violaters than to liquor law violators.

Boy Finds Body

POWELL RIVER (CP) — The body of Gary Gwilliams, 22, has been recovered from Malaspina Strait by RCMP. Police said Gwilliams had been missing since Aug. 13 and the body, found by a boy who was fishing, was sent to Vancouver for pathological examination.

EXTRA $30M FOR FRASER

The provincial government has agreed to allocate an additional $30 million to extend and expand the Fraser River flood control program with the federal government.

The program will continue until 1984 and originated in 1968 as a joint provincial-federal project now costing a total of $120 million, on completion.

Environment Minister Jim Nielson said Friday he will continue to request the federal government to release funds for internal drainage and diking.

'Free' Chequing Charge Explained

OTTAWA (CP) — The Toronto Dominion Bank in a second series of ads to promote its "no-charge chequing" program makes plain that there is a charge involved.

The news ads explain that if a customer keeps a minimum of $200 on deposit in a Toronto Dominion personal chequing account, there will be no charge.

The ads explain that the program will be of benefit to those who write nine or more cheques a month.

Personal chequing accounts do not pay any interest and if that same $200 were placed in a Toronto Dominion premium savings account, paying eight-per-cent annual interest, the money would earn $16 a year.

Based on the bank's normal charge of 16 cents per cheque, a customer would have to write more than eight a month to benefit from the "no-charge chequing" program.

The first promotional ads, which appeared in newspapers across the country last week, did not explain in detail that there is actually a charge involved.

A Toronto Dominion spokesman said this week that $500,000 is being spent on the promotion.

An official in the federal department of consumer and corporate affairs, responsible for enforcing laws governing misleading advertising, said Friday the ads are not illegal.

The official said although the first ad does not explain clearly that there is a charge involved, it invites those interested to come in to the bank for more details.

Asphalt Inquiries Still Going On

An investigation into the bidding practices of Vancouver Island asphalt-paving companies is expected to be completed later this year, a federal trades practices branch spokesman said on Friday.

The investigation — carried out by the Ottawa-based restrictive trades practices commission — began 15 months ago at the request of former Victoria Mayor Peter Pollen and five members of city council.

In July, 1975, investigators seized files from paving companies in Victoria, Duncan and Nanaimo.

A spokesman for Victoria Paving Co. Ltd., one of two major contractors in this area, some files belonging to his company were returned about six weeks later.

The spokesman said he attended a quasi examination for discovery with federal investigators sometime last November and since then hasn't heard a word.

He presumed the matter had been dropped.

"No way," said the federal official. "It's still alive.

Bail Plea Rejected

SPOKANE, Wash. (AP) — A decision to grant bail for a Canadian man wanted by Vancouver authorities in connection with an alleged counterfeit money scheme has been overruled by a federal judge here.

U.S. District Court Judge Marshall Neill Friday ordered Mario Franco Magisano, 25, held in the Spokane County-City Jail without bail for 45 days, as specified in a new U.S. Canada treaty.

The judge's decision was the first time a bail ruling was made under the treaty, which was ratified in March.

Canadian authorities have sought to extradite Magisano, to face charges of possession of counterfeit U.S. currency.

Magisano was arrested Aug. 10 in a Spokane hotel while having breakfast with an undercover police agent.

U.S. Atty. Dean Smith and Assistant U.S. Atty. Seaton M. Day Jr. told the court that Magisano allegedly had agreed to sell the undercover policeman $1.2 million of counterfeit U.S. bills and some heroin and Marijuana.

Murder Sentence Appeal Launched

An appeal is being launched into the conviction of Larry Lovell, found guilty last November of the Sept. 6, 1974 killings of two women in Esquimalt.

Lovell's lawyer, Harry Rankin of Vancouver said on Friday the case is scheduled to be brought before the B.C. Court of Appeal in Vancouver sometime in November.

The basic issue at stake, he said, will be the admissability of certain confessions allegedly made by Lovell and which formed a crucial part of the Crown's evidence in his nine-day trial last November.

A 12-man jury found Lovell guilty of murdering Isabel Jane Plume, 51, and Isabel Florence Bevan, 62, in Ray's Food Market, 1325 Esquimalt Road. Both women, employees of the store, had been stabbed dozens of times. The murder weapon, believed to have been a large knife, was never found.

Mr. Justice Lloyd McKenzie sentenced the 21-year-old former serviceman on Nov. 21 to life imprisonment and said he could not be eligible for parole for at least 12 years. He has been in the B.C. Penitentiary in New Westminster since.

IT WAS JUST AS ADVERTIZED

CRANSTON, R.I. (UPI) — Ruby Plushner placed an ad in a local newspaper selling "home grown grass" for $1 a bag.

"First time ever sold publicly," the ad said. Plushner Friday swore it was the truth.

"I've never sold my grass publicly," he said. "I've given it away or had it taken away."

So, when the responses rolled in, Plushner went out to his garage and dug into a barrel of Kentucky Blue, newly mowed from his back yard.

He threw in a free slip of paper reading: "The grass is always greener in the other guy's yard."

Plushner said he cleared the plan with narcotics police but got a call from the attorney general's office.

"I sent them a big generous-sized free sample," he said.

They didn't call back.

Now he's thinking of selling "genuine pot." Genuine clay pot, he said, the kind you grow a cactus in.

'Little Mistake' Destroyed Home

ELVIS
. . . just a shrug

WEST COVINA, Calif. — Ferenc Szecsy took little comfort when sheriff's deputies told him his house hadn't been stolen after all.

It was only a little mistake, they said, just one wrong digit in the address.

Szecsy, of Banning, had reported the $75,000 home and virtually all of its furnishings missing last weekend.

The sheriff's department investigation revealed that the owner of a home at 445 N. Azusa Ave. in this Los Angeles suburb had contracted to have it demolished.

The demolition contractor subcontracted the job to another firm, and Szecsy's house at 435 N. Azusa Ave. was demolished.

A sheriff's spokesman said the matter of Szecsy's missing house will have to be resolved in civil court.

Presley Generous To Fan

MOBILE, Ala. (AP) — Tommy Milham waited in line 20 hours for tickets to the Elvis Presley show, and his persistence was rewarded with a startling gift. Elvis handed him a diamond ring.

"He gave it to me as a reward for my patience," Milham, 33, said Friday as he recalled the episode Sunday.

He said a jeweler appraised the ring at $2,000, and added, "I don't care if the value is $2,000 or $200,000 — it is not for sale."

Milham was first in line to buy tickets to the concert. Toward the end of the concert Milham asked Presley to autograph a copy of the newspaper article recounting his 20-hour feat.

He said the entertainer handed the article to an aide and started to give Milham one of the scarves he distributes during shows.

"I don't want a scarf," Milham shouted above the noise in the auditorium. "I want that ring."

He said Elvis shrugged and gave the ring to Milham.

LOS ANGELES — Television news cameraman James Watt, is suing Evil Knievel for $1.1 million, accusing the motorcycle daredevil of beating him with a cane.

The incident allegedly occurred in September, 1974, when Knievel was preparing to make his much ballyhooed flight over the Snake River Canyon in a rocket, which failed.

In his suit Friday Watt said Knievel "shoved a heavy television camera" into his face and "Struck (him) about the upper body with a cane," causing "shock and injury."

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Claude Vealey, confessed triggerman in the slaying of Joseph Yablonski, is thinking about getting married.

His prospective bride is Mrs. Shirley McCombs, a divorced mother of three, and a former inmate of the Washington County Prison where Vealey met her when he became a trusty at the prison.

Vealey and Paul Gilly were sentenced to life imprisonment Friday for the fatal shooting of United Mine Workers reformer Yablonski, his wife and daughter on Dec. 31, 1969.

NEWLYWED AT AGE 90

EDMONTON (CP) — They fell in love over the Bible.

Sitting in the lounge at the Emmanual Senior Citizens' Home, Matilda Underschultz, 84, started reading the Bible to John Goutbeck,87, because his eyes tired easily with reading.

Thursday, three years later, Mrs. Underschultz tugged nervously at the back of her peacock-blue wedding dress when Pastor Fritz Rehn pronounced the couple man and wife.

"I'm really very happy today," said the bride.

"I never expected this to happen but it did and just like they say it should in the Bible, didn't it?"

The couple was attended by the groom's son, Peter Goutbeck, and the bride's sister and after a 20-minute wedding ceremony in Trinity Lutheran Church were followed down the aisle by one of Goutbeck's 11 grandchildren.

Building Industry Shut

VANCOUVER — An eleventh-hour attempt to settle a 10-minute lunch break issue failed Friday, and today 40,000 are out of work in the construction industry.

Construction Labor Relations Association took lockout action against 15 trade unions after a meeting between CLRA President Chuck McVeigh and Les Andrews of the plumbers union failed to settle the issues of extra time for hot lunches and on-site parking.

The lockout was instituted at 4 p.m. Friday in response to the strike by a plumbers union local against 15 Vancouver-area contractors.

The CLRA lockout is the second this year. The industry was idled for 37 days and the action ended Aug. 4 following a report by industrial inquiry commissioner Jim Kinnaird.

Earlier Friday in Victoria, a statement from the department of labor said that no long-term government action in the construction industry dispute was expected until Labor Minister Allan Williams returns from a four-week trip to England at the end of the month.

KISSINGER TALKS UPSTAGED

Black War Chiefs Gather at Summit

By MURREY MARDER
Washington Post

LONDON — Africa's black leaders and guerrilla warfare chiefs have decided unexpectedly to hold their own summit conference this weekend in Tanzania while U.S. Secretary of State Henry Kissinger is meeting in Switzerland with South African Prime Minister John Vorster.

This sudden move by African nationalists to consolidate their strategy may either mesh with or frustrate Kissinger's strategy, American sources said. Because of the uncertainty of what the outcome will be, Kissinger now may abort his tentative plan to go on to Africa after his talks with Vorster, and return to Washington on Tuesday to await the consequences of the African summit.

The black African action already has altered the extremely complex Kissinger strategy by injecting into it at a premature stage some of the most militant forces in black Africa which are supported by the Soviet Union and Cuba.

The African summit, which now tends to overshadow the Kissinger-Vorster talks in Zurich, was called by Tanzanian President Julius Nyerere to be held in Dar-es-Salaam on Sunday and Monday. Nyerere and Zambian President Kenneth Kaunda are the two key block moderate leaders on whom Kissinger is counting to support his own diplomatic efforts to head off major escalation of the guerrilla wars in Rhodesia and Namibia. But Nyerere and Kaunda also seek to avoid being outflanked in Africa by the militants.

Invited to the Dar-es-Salaam summit, as American diplomats understand it, in addition to Nyerere and Kaunda, are the presidents of Mozambique, Botswana and Angola, plus the leaders of all the major Rhodesian and Namibian liberation and guerrilla movements.

The expected presence of Angola in the meeting is the sharpest surprise for the United States. Angolan President Agustinho Neto is backed by the Soviet Union and Cuba; and Angola is now being char-

Milk Hike Tuesday

VANCOUVER (CP) — The price of milk in British Columbia will rise one cent a quart on Tuesday.

Elmer Daum, chairman of the British Columbia Milk Board, said Friday the price of hay has increased $12 a ton since May, mainly because of the wet summer, and the total milk formula price index, which determines what farmers are paid for Class 1 milk.

Tighter Laws On Loan Rates

OTTAWA (CP) — The federal government will introduce legislation soon to regulate and standardize the calculation, presentation and advertising of interest rates, Consumer Affairs Minister Bryce Mackasey announced Friday.

Departmental spokesmen said the legislation, expected for some time, will likely be outlined in the speech from the throne this fall after Parliament resumes.

Mackasey said in a statement the proposed legislation would also provide tough penalties for loansharking and "unscrupulous lending and debt collection practices."

Objective of the new legislation would be to force lending institutions to be more specific and accurate in their statements of interest on deposits and loans.

Through computers it is now possible to calculate interest on savings deposits on short periods of time, such as a few days or even a daily basis, rather than on the minimum monthly balance in accounts as at present.

Interest is now paid out on a monthly, quarterly and six-month basis.

Government officials have said in the past that the legislation would force banks and similar insitutions to work out interest on a daily basis.

"There is much confusion and unfairness in the present system which results in many canadians paying unnecessary amounts in interest on their debts and receiving insufficient on their savings," Mackasey said.

"The proposed legislation will enable consumers to shop wisely for credit bargains and for maximum returns on their deposits in banks and other institutions, because all will know precisely what the return on their deposits is and how it is calculated," he added.

Bank spokesmen have complained that a change in interest claculation methods would add to bank costs and might have to be countered by higher charges on loans.

Bennett To Air Finances

Premier Bill Bennett will give a state-of-the-province message next month covering the first half of the current fiscal year.

Bennett made a similar statement on province-wide television Feb. 20 after the national accounting firm of Clarkson Gordon had conducted a financial review of the province's finances.

Bennett said Friday next month's statement will probably be more understandable to the average British Columbian and will include this year's second quarterly financial report.

He also promised not to raise taxes in B.C. next year.

"Although other provinces are all talking about raising taxes, we won't be building large deficits. We won't be operating beyond our ability to pay," he said. The premier also said B.C.'s businesses and workers must be prepared to produce more if they want to solve the province's unemployment crisis.

Workers, organized and unorganized, must expect to earn their wages, while businesses must drop any hopes of making exorbitant profits.

Big Fish Kill In Esquimalt?

Federal fisheries department officials are investigating a "massive" herring fish-kill which surfaced at the mouth of Esquimalt Harbor Friday afternoon.

Witnesses said thousands of bloated herring surfaced after an American nuclear sub, the USS Pintado, plied into the harbor.

PARIS — The financial director of the giant French aircraft firm Dassault has disappeared — along with nearly $1.8 million in company funds, according to a police file released Friday night.

Investigators think the disappearance of Dassault director Herve de Vathaire two months ago may be linked to that of a young French adventurer, Jean Kay, which could give the case political overtones. Kay was reported to have been active in a number of guerrilla causes.

On July 8 De Vathaire called at the group's Paris bank near the Arc de Triomphe asking to withdraw some $1.8 million in francs. The bank staff asked for an hour to prepare the cash. De Vathaire, left, came back an hour later and took the cash.

LIFETIME FOR MONTY NETS MEASLY $180

BENTLEY, England (UPI) — Five months after his death, the memory of Field Marshal Bernard Montgomery, Viscount of Alamein, has soured in his home village.

According to details of his will disclosed Friday, the 88-year-old hero of the pivotal Second World War battle of El Alamein left $270,000, of which $180 went to each of the five members of the Cox family who have spent their entire working lives in his service. The rest went to his son David.

Michael Cox, 31, Monty's chauffeur, on hearing the family was sharing $900, said, "Monty never gave more than he had to. He was a mean man with his money.

"The 100 pounds ($180) is a paltry sum for almost a lifetime's work," he said. "It will pay for a few rounds of beer."

NEWS BRIEFS

CRASH KILLS 68

PONTA DELGADA, Azores (AP) — A Venezuelan air force transport plane carrying a Caracas University choir crashed in the hurricane-lashed Azores islands and all 68 persons aboard were killed, rescue officials said today.

Safeway Standstill

VANCOUVER (CP) — Canada Safeway Ltd. officials reported no progress Friday in talks aimed at ending a shutdown affecting about 5,300 employees at wholesale outlets and 93 stores in British Columbia. The company representatives of the Retail, Wholesale and Department Store Union met with independent labour consultant Clive McKee. Talks were to continue Tuesday.

Rollback Accord

VANCOUVER (CP) — Two British Columbia Railway unions have agreed to accept a federal Anti-Inflation Board wage rollback and cash payback pending an appeal to the board, the company announced Friday.

Mill Burns Down

KAMLOOPS (CP) — A fire early Friday destroyed the Capistinsky mill operation at Blue River about 120 miles northeast of here. Damage was estmated at $1 million.

Blaze Averted

RICHMOND (CP) — Fire Chief B. M. Byrne said Friday that damage to a high school here was limited to about $500 because two girls on their way home from a community centre alerted his departmen after noticing flames outside a doorway.

WATERSKIERS HITCH MARGUERITE RIDE

Imagine yourself peering over the stern of the Princess Marguerite as it sails from Seattle to Victoria and seeing three waterskiers happily traversing the 369-foot ship's large wakes.

It happened late last month, according to the Seattle Times probably to the chagrin of crew members aboard, who couldn't have done much about the skiers even if they had wanted to.

The adventure, which lasted only 15 minutes, took weeks of planning by 13 persons plus the three skiers. It occurred Aug. 21 after an attempt five weeks earlier had failed.

As the Princess left Seattle, three of the "co-conspirators" were aboard. Two jet boats idled among the small fishing boats near Port Townsend.

As the ship headed north at a 19-knot clip, a 700-foot line was tossed overboard. A plate was inserted into a porthole with the rope attached on the outside. A locking device on the plate was activated to prevent the line from being cut by crewmen, as it had on a prior attempt.

The jet boats sped from the fishing area and picked up the trailing line. While passengers on the ship cheered and waved, the three skiers skied.

Then an airplane flew to Victoria to pick up the three young men who threw the line off the ship.

Members of the "conspiracy" want to remain anonymous, they say, not because they think they broke any laws, but because they want to avoid any official harrassment.

Last summer, one of the young men water-skied for two miles behind the Hyak, one of Washington state's jumbo ferries. A state ferry official called it an "extremely dangerous stunt."

This year, the skiers, who say they "ski every day at Lake Sammamish" north of Seattle, decided to try the Marguerite. The first attempt failed when a tow rope tangled and a crew member on the ship cut the line.

Davis Mistaken—Dalfen

A second member of a three-man steering committee that Transport Minister Jack Davis has said told him to reject a lengthy study on British Columbia Ferries denied Friday he recommended rejection.

C. M. Dalfen, former deputy minister of transport and communications, said from Ottawa Friday he may have criticized certain areas of the study, but he did not recommend its rejection.

Dalfen, who now works for the Canadian Radio-television Commission, said he "might well have said something to Davis that he might have mistaken as a rejection, but I certainly didn't tell him to repudiate it."

Dalfen, along with A. D. Crerar, former director of the environment and land use committee and Charles Gallagher, general manager of B.C. Ferries, made up the steering committee to which research staff reported.

Davis, blasted by opposition leader Dave Barrett on Wednesday for ignoring the report, said he'd basically disregarded the study because the steering committee had told him it was superficial and had advised its rejection.

Crerar, now in Ottawa on a two-year loan to the federal government, Thursday denied rejecting the study that was commissioned last year by the New Democratic Party.

The report was completed in January and released by Barrett on Wednesday.

Dalfen said because the study was done by Crerar's

TORNADO FLIPS MOBILE HOMES

PRINCE GEORGE (CP) — Strong, tornado-like winds overturned two mobile homes and a car among other things as it struck an area about eight miles north of here Friday night.

The freak wind, which lasted about three minutes, also uprooted trees and overturned a boat.

Prince George airport said a pilot reported at the time of the freak wind that visibility was nil and he was experiencing strong turbulence.

The strong wind cut a swath about 400 feet. No one was hurt.

Viking Tilted

Times News Services

PASADENA, Calif. — The first pictures of the Martian Plains of Utopia were transmitted back to Earth early today from a tilted Viking 2 lander showing a very rocky surface stretching to the horizon. The photos were delayed for more than nine hours by communications problems.

They indicated the lander was sitting on a 10-degree slope or had put down with a footpad on a large rock, mission control said.

The black and white television images scanned across the dust in front of the lander to prove the Viking robot's cameras were in good working order. An hour earlier, the lander had started beaming back engineering data.

The craft had landed amid a partial radio blackout that delayed the sending of its initial photographs.

Catholic Wedding Denied Pair

MONTREAL (CP) — A 24-year-old Montreal hairdresser has been told by her parish priest she is "unfit" to be married in the Roman Catholic church because she has been living with her boyfriend.

Lise Dumaine, who has known her boyfriend for seven years and lived with him for two said recently that during an interview to finalize her wedding arrangements, Rev. Procul Leveille discovered that Miss Dumaine and her fiance, Jacques Boily, 28, had the same address.

Miss Dumaine said the priest was horrified.

"He told me I was impure and deflowered and announced he would not marry us unless I agreed to move out of the apartment and live alone and celibate for six months," she said.

"He said I was breaking church law and because of that I was no longer a Catholic. If I insisted on marrying before the six months of purification, I should go to the Palais de Justice for a civil ceremony."

Both Miss Dumaine and Boily consider themselves practising Catholics and refuse to accept that they are unfit for a Catholic marriage ceremony.

"I was brought up a Catholic," she said. "I believe in God and I go to church, though not every Sunday.

"I want to marry, have children, and bring them up as Catholics."

Miss Dumaine said the situation is ridiculous.

"This is 1976, not the Middle Ages. Where, tell me, can you find a girl who is not living with her boyfriend?"

Father Leveille, away at a Sulpician retreat, said in a telephone interview that living together outside of marriage is a practice that cannot be condoned.

"The Pope made that quite clear six months ago when he condemned homosexuality, masturbation and trial marriage," he said.

"Priests should not marry couples who cohabit."

Detective Tailed Sommers—WAC

VANCOUVER (CP) — Former premier W.A.C. Bennett supported one of his cabinet ministers accused of being a crook in 1955 because of a report of a private detective, the Sun says in a copyright story.

The evening newspaper says Bennett, premier of B.C. from 1952 to 1972, said in a recent interview at his Kelowna home that the provincial Social Credit League hired a private detective — "the best in Vancouver" — to check out former lands and forest minister Robert Sommers when the charges were raised by opposition parties in the legislature.

The Sun says Sommers was cleared by the detective and Bennett supported his minister until he was convicted in November, 1958, and sentenced to five years in prison for bribery and conspiracy in the handling of forest management licences.

Sommers, described by Mr. Justice J. O. Wilson in B.C. Supreme Court as a "scoundrel who befouled the political and moral atmosphere for years," served two years and four months of his sentence before being paroled in July, 1961.

He attempted to win the Social Credit nomination in his old constituency of Trail in 1969, but was defeated by then Education minister Donald Brothers.

Bennett said that he believes Sommers was more stupid than dishonest and "he's an honorable man."

The former premier, who will be 76 Monday, said the lowest point of his career was when "our government got into difficulty on the lumber industry. And my minister, Sommers."

He said he wouldn't have handled the situation any differently despite strong criticism.

Bennett, whose son Bill, now is premier of B.C., said the detective who investigated Sommers reported "there was nothing to it."

"And that's the reason I didn't think there was anything to it," he said. "And I don't think there was much to it . . . I think he was stupid.

"His daughter was getting married and he needed some carpets or something. And some of his friends made some available to him.

"I think he intended to pay for them in the end and I'm sure he did. He was an honorable man. He was my best debater."

Bennett said government officials investigated Sommers' department and didn't find a thing.

17 CHEQUES BOUNCE

In two days this week, Victoria provincial court learned Friday, a 19-year-old Port Angeles woman wrote 17 worthless cheques to defraud five Victoria businesses of a total of more than $1,000.

Dianna Frances Wolf gave an explanation to Judge Blake Allan for her conduct Tuesday and Wednesday but the judge didn't believe it, saying he felt "she really came up here to defraud gullible Canadian merchants."

He sentenced Wolf, who had pleaded guilty to a 17-count Victoria charge of false pretences, to a total of six months in jail.

Prosecutor Robert Mulligan said Wolf came from Port Angeles by ferry Tuesday, cashing three worthless cheques that day and 14 Wednesday. Of the 17 cheques, 13 were cashed at the T. Eaton Co. Sixteen were to obtain goods and cash while the 17th was written at a bank for cash.

All cheques were written on a closed account in a Port Angeles bank, said Mulligan. Total value of goods and cash obtained was $1,022.

The prosecutor said "police became aware" of Wolf's activities Wednesday and intercepted her before she could board the ferry back home. All of the goods were recovered from two of her friends who were already on the ship.

Legal Aid duty counsel Jane Morley said Wolf had told her that the cheques were written in the expectation it would take two weeks for them to get to Port Angeles. By then, Wolf hoped to cover them with $1,500 from a trust account of her husband, who is in jail.

But Allan said he did not believe that story.

Victoria Loses Out On Recreation Cash

By AL FORREST
Times Staff

Tourist industry officials are quietly working on a program to change the image of Victoria in line with the new realities.

These realities include the fact prices are pretty high here in the summer.

The problem is a short tourist season, compounded by the fact the season is even shorter if it rains.

The solution, devised by a new Victoria think tank on tourism, is to promote the city as a resort rather than simply as a vacation centre.

"Fishing is excellent here and we are fortunate because we can play golf 360 days a year. There are only about five days when it is uncomfortable on the golf course," said Al Frame, president of the Victoria Visitors Information Centre.

"Winter-time golfing, fishing and boating have a terrific allure for Canadians, especially those who live on the Prairies. This is what we have to offer and we should begin to promote it," he said.

"We can offer lower prices in the off-season and can put together a lot of interesting packages for a pleasant visit. The accommodation is here; all we need is a little promotion."

The idea for a new tourist image came from the monthly think tank conducted by Don Nixon, manager of the Visitors Information Centre. The session brings together all those interested in the tourist question and spawns new ideas for action.

Victoria merchants at this week's think tank noted that the nature of the tourist industry has changed radically in the past 20 years. The city used to be a fairly quiet centre for those interested in outdoor activities 10 months a year but tecently has become the haven of the summer day-tripper.

This latter type of tourist is welcome but there are also problems. In addition to the street congestion and, sometimes, ferry line-ups, there is the problem of having to make almost all the year's income in the summer months.

Victoria should return to its former image as a resort centre and push hard for more "off-season" visitors.

Frame said he was confident a concerted promotion campaign would result in a large number of visitors here, especially in the spring and fall.

Nixon also expressed confidence this type of promotion could be very successful. He said the Visitors Information Centre has successfully completed phase one of its program, providing services to tourists once they arrive in the city, and now was ready for phase two, spending money to attract more visitors.

Nixon said this money would be spent most profitably in nearby centres such as the Interior of B.C and the Prairies, rather than trying to attract tourists from Arizona or California.

A few might come from the southern U.S. but these would be mainly those trying to escape the heat in July and August rather than the off-season tourists the city must concentrate on.

Visitors coming from the Prairies in the spring or fall would tend to stay about seven days at least rather than the seven-hour visitors the city gets in the summer.

"The summer visitor is always welcome but we must have much more than that if our tourist industry is going to grow," Nixon said.

A secondary promotion drive would be to encourage weekend visits throughout the year from those who live on the Lower Mainland. Again the resort city image would be stressed.

Next think tank session is set for Sept. 28 and Victoria MLA Sam Bawlf is expected to be among those attending. It is open to anyone who wants to talk about the tourist industry and offer ideas, Nixon said.

All Elderly Asked: Stay Clean, Quiet

HAMILTON (CP) — All that is expected of the elderly is that they keep clean, quiet, not be a public danger and not smell too badly, says a British psychiatrist.

Given this low expectation of them, it is not surprising that 90 per cent of their psychiatric problems are ignored or undiagnosed, Dr. Klaus Bergmann said in speech Friday at McMaster University Medical Centre.

Too often, illness in the elderly automatically is attributed to some aging process and, therefore, early intervention that might prevent a crisis and admission to an institution is ignored, said Dr. Bergmann, lecturer in psychogeriatric medicine at the University of Newcastle.

He said the elderly are more likely to be given sedatives and tranquilizers for their psychiatric illnesses, and less likely than younger patients to get advice, reassurance, referrals to psychiatrists or psychotherapy from their family doctors.

Lake Polluted

PRINCE GEORGE (CP) — A section of Stuart Lake at the Necosli Indian Reserve near Fort St. James is polluted and unsuitable for swimming, the federal health services department said Thursday. The department said tests show there is contamination of the water.

UNION MESSAGE MAY STOP MAIL

VANCOUVER (CP) — The post office is threatening to refuse to handle a union's mail because of the way the union advertises a boycott of a distillery company's products, says the Retail, Wholesale and Department Store Union.

The post office decision has blown into a union charge of corruption against postmaster-general Bryce Mackasey, whose Ottawa office has not replied because the minister is out of the country on vacation.

The accusation came in a written statement Thursday by the Retail, Wholesale and Department Store Union that has closed Seagram's distillery in nearby New Westminster for a year and a half.

The post offfice Wednesday advised the union that it "may not" deliver the union's mail because a "don't drink Seagram's" stamp is carried on the front of each union envelope.

City post office spokesman Betty Amos said department inspectors told the union that advertising messages should normally be carried on the back of the envelopes.

She said the automatic mail-handling scanner-machines cannot work properly if the advertisement is carried in the wrong position.

Union spokesman Keith Sheedy said in a written statement that the advertisement cannot be carried anywhere.

The statement said "a long and immoral relationship that has existed between some Liberal cabinet ministers and top Seagram company officers is again showing its influence."

Sheedy related the charge to a letter from Mackasey to an unidentified Seagram vice-president "stating that the post office may refuse to handle any mail that has on the envelope written material other than the forwarding and return addresses."

Murder Charged

CALGARY (CP) — Two Vancouver area residents charged in the death of a Calgary police detective last March were arraigned in Alberta supreme court Thursday on eight charges, including first-degree murder. William John Nichols, 27, of White Rock and Janice Marie Gamble, 21, of Vancouver, reserved pleas on all charges. They are scheduled to appear in court again Oct. 4.

Labor Day Warning

Labor Minister Allan Williams Friday issued a stern labor day message that the rights of individuals will be eroded if management and labor continue to rely on the government to solve industrial problems.

If both sides resist attainment of order and harmony by the established processes, demands for government intervention will increase and freedom may be lost to achieve short-term solutions.

The minister said he finds it surprising that in industrial relations, labor and management seem willing to let a desire "to win" take a front seat to the desire to make a responsible contribution.

Carol remembers Grade E: "It was fun"

Going Back To School

"There's no need to worry about the first day of school, it's really going to be fun," says Carol Ann Campbell, 7, who will be going into Grade 2 on Tuesday.

She was interviewed by the Times Friday to give her reminiscences of life in Grade 1 at Tolmie Elementary.

"It was fun," she said. "Much better than kindergarten.

"In kindergarten all you do is play. But in Grade 1 there are more things to do like arithmetic and gym. Gym is the most fun, especially if they let you on the trampoline.

"Arithmetic is fun, too. Unless it gets hard and then it's not so much fun. I like arithmetic.

"I like to dress up on the first day of school.

"They let you wear slacks but I like to wear a dress for the first day. After a few days I'll wear slacks. The boys should be neat on the first day, too. The teachers like that.

"You don't have to take an apple to the teacher, unless you want to. Most the kids take flowers. You should take them from your own garden.

"It is nice to bring a flower especially if it is the teacher's birthday or something. Teachers like it when you remember their birthday.

"But they don't like it if you talk. You should never talk and bug people because then the teacher will shout and that's not very nice.

"It is okay to talk sometimes but not all the time. The teacher likes to do most of the talking.

"You should take all your supplies with you on the first day of school. Be sure to take your crayons because you might get to do some coloring.

"It is best to take all your books and pencils on the first day so you have it and you don't have to worry.

"I don't worry about school. I like it all, but gym is the most fun. What I liked about kindergarten was we could sing and play.

"But I don't like to play all the time. That's why I liked Grade 1 better. And I'm going to like Grade 2.

"At least I hope so. I hope everybody likes school."

27,136 Return

First thing Tuesday morning, 27,136 elementary and secondary students in Greater Victoria will be trundling back to the books after a summer's respite from school.

Tuesday will see the opening of three new schools in District 61; the $4 million Spectrum community school; Lambrick Park elementary and Torquay elementary. Lambrick and Torquay are not fully completed after construction work stoppages through the summer, but enough classrooms have been readied and reading, writing and 'rithmetic will be taught just the same.

OLD CON JOB SUCCESSFUL

He was in his seventies and so was she, two Americans who met by chance at a tourist attraction in downtown Victoria.

He suggested they meet for lunch Friday and they did. But before lunching he suggested she come with him while he picked up some engravings and she did.

The city police report says she waited in a coffee shop while he went to collect the engravings in a store next door. He came back in a moment to say the store couldn't change an American $100 bill. Did she have any Canadian money?

She gave him the $60 in Canadian bills she had. He disappeared and city police said today there is still no sign of him.

Students Urge Campus Purchase

Students at Camosun College have asked the provincial government to speed up negotiations so the college can purchase its own Landsdowne campus from University of Victoria.

Camosun leases the site from UVic for $250,000 a year and Jan Gottfried, student society president wants to know why the provincial government lets one educational institution profit from another.

College bursar Dean Winram says the land was originally bought by UVic for $1.

Meanwhile, he says, the $250,000 rent could be used to promote student services. Financial difficulties prompted the college to reject at least 400 eligible applications this year, he added.

Negotiations for the land transfer have been in progress for more than a year.

Under the leasing arrangements, handled through the provincial public works department, Camosun is also responsible for insurance, repairs and maintenance. The lease expires in June 1977.

UVic president Dr. Howard Petch maintained Friday that under the arrangements: "It's a real bargain."

Lucky Tourist

Douglas Hooft thought he had been robbed. Instead he was lucky.

The young Dutch traveller told Victoria police he had just stepped outside a Victoria youth hostel for a minute to repair his bike. When he went back inside someone had stolen his travel pouch containing close to $1,000 in travellers cheques and cash.

Not so.

Kenneth Woo, owner of the Arcade Grocery at 1279 Pandora, told police later Friday he found the pouch with funds intact lying on a counter of his store.

Hooft, who had moved on to Vancouver, is returning to Victoria today to recover his misplaced funds.

CUFA ANNOYED

Council Hit Over Zoning

Communities United for Action, the body representing Victoria's neighborhood associations, has rejected Victoria city council's explanations as to why the city cannot undertake blanket down-zoning of their areas.

The city's views were passed on to CUFA last week in letters from Mayor Mike Young and Ald. Alf Hood, chairman of the land-use planning and zoning committee.

But replies from two CUFA representatives this week indicate that council's explanations and policies are unacceptable to community groups.

Says Helen Oldershaw in her letter to the major: "We are most pleased to learn that you share our concerns which have urged CUFA to take positive action.

"We regret, however, you do not see the urgency in this matter and are willing to permit further destruction of our neighborhoods."

Young had earlier contended that the down-zoning sought by CUFA would create "bureaucratic chaos," but Oldershaw dismisses this as "not our problem."

"Indeed, we are aware that other Canadian cities have successfully introduced down-zoning bylaws without bureaucratic chaos," she adds.

A companion letter from CUFA member Russell Shillington to Hood says the alderman claimed that council shares CUFA concerns about the destruction of neighborhoods, yet the down-zoning proposal was rejected.

"Not only that, you failed to offer any real alternatives in stopping what has become an emergency situation."

Shillington sees another discrepancy between the alderman's earlier assurances and council actions.

Hood's letter had said that a common priority of the city and the associations was the development of neighborhood plans and the city's Official Community Plan.

But Shillington says the statement is "totally incompatible" with council's decision this week to delete frm the community plan a supplement dealing specifically with neighborhoods.

State Ferries At Standstill

Washington State ferries were at a standstill today but special contract talks resumed in Seattle in an effort to get the service back in operation.

Only limited service to two isolated areas was restord Friday to Vashon Island and the San Juans, after union officials verbally agreed to provide emergency service.

The State Public Employees Relations Commission Friday assigned mediator Williard Olsen to the shutdown and he is presiding over talks today.

Meanwhile the traditional long-weekend traffic rush at B.C. Ferries — expected to be heavier because of the Sidney-Anacortes shutdown — failed to materialize.

A B.C. Ferries spokesman said today that traffic was light Friday in comparison to other years and although vessels were sailing with full loads in the afternoon, there was no traffic backup at the Swartz Bay terminal.

The Tsawwassen terminal reported the longest wait Friday was one hour. The lack of congestion at both terminals continued today.

At Swartz Bay, for example, vessels handled all but a few campers and trailers on the early morning runs.

In Washington State, officials had counted on record passenger and vehicle traffic for the Labor Day weekend.

They predicted losses of $300,000 in revenue if deck officers, represented by the Masters, Mates and Pilots Union, remained off the job throughout the four-day holiday.

Friday, King County superior court Judge James W. Mifflin, granted a temporary restraining order sending union members back to their jobs Friday afternoon, but messengers had been unable to deliver the Mifflin order to union officials.

A company spokesman said wage issues have already been settled and the dispute relates to interpretation of the contract language.

Slam Jam George

He May Be Short . . . But He's Fast on His Feet

Met a little man with a big nerve this week.

He is George Michael May, who has just set himself up in Victoria as a one-man private security force, complete with uniform and handcuffs.

A former employee of three different Victoria security firms, George was laid off in January and hasn't worked since. And so he decided to go it alone — a little man trying to make it against the big companies in the wide world of business.

George is bonded and licensed and is all set to go. All he needs is something to guard.

Resplendent in his smart green uniform with yellow trim and the words Michael Security on each shoulder, George has high hopes for his one-man force. He has his eyes on a contract to guard an office building and would like to be signed on by a government department.

But George Michael May isn't your usual security guard.

For one thing, the 31-year-old May, who is single and lives with his parents, is only five feet, three inches tall and weighs a mere 145 pounds. And he admits that most security firms won't look at a guy of only 5' 3".

Despite his size, though, George has done a total of two years as a security guard and has even worked as a bouncer in a nightclub.

"I'm not scared when it comes down to trouble," he says with a grin. "In the nightclub when they saw my size and my uniform, people would often call me 'Pig' or 'Shortie' but it didn't bother me. I've had no judo training or anything, but I can move pretty good on my feet."

George admits a little wryly, though, that it's sometimes pretty tricky "moving" when you're attached to someone a lot heftier than you are.

"Oh, I've had my problems, all right," he says. "Once I had to put the handcuffs on a big guy and get him out of the nightclub and he just stood there and wouldn't budge. But I finally got him out of there okay.

"Often, too, I've had a jug of beer thrown over me when I've tried to lift the glasses off the table at closing time. But I survived. I've never had a black eye, either . . . I guess I've been lucky.

Funny enough, George has never had too much trouble handling people but he got hammered by a window once.

George grins again as he tells of the time a couple of years ago when he was working as a janitor at the Mediaeval Inn and he stuck his head out of the window only to have it come thundering down on his neck. He was pinned there yelling his head off for two hours until someone in the street below spotted him at 6 a.m. and came to his rescue.

That earned him a big splash in the local papers and the instant nickname of Slam Jam George. But still he wasn't too bothered about it.

Security guard work is the last of a long line of jobs for George. He started as a gardener and later worked as a gas station assistant, a parking lot attendant and as a janitor.

But, if his size obviously makes it an uphill struggle, why does he choose to try to make it as a security guard?

"Well, to be honest with you, I've run out of jobs and I've run out of managements, too!" he says. "I've had it hard over the years and I've had a hard time finding jobs. But I believe I can make a go of this. I can be a guard and work for myself. And I can do it well."

And he believes he can do it cheaply.

"I'm advertising myself at $4 an hour and the big security companies pay their men $4.75 and charge you around $8 an hour for the service. Usually you work five days on either a 4 p.m. till midnight or a midnight to 8 a.m. shift. But I'm prepared to work six or even seven days a week if necessary and will even hire a backup man if I have to."

Naturally, George is anxious to get to work to recoup some of the expenses he has incurred — he has spent over $200 recently on advertising and on his uniform, which cost him $75.

"I had to buy handcuffs, too, and I always carry two sets on me, one clipped to my belt in the front and one in my rear pocket.

"The only things I don't have are dogs. One company asked me if I had a dog and I said: 'No, I'm a one-man, one-uniform outift.' "

Then George adds with a parting grin:

". . . though I'll probably have to get another uniform some time."

Island Trustees in Doubt

Appointments of the three general trustees to the Islands' Trust expire at midnight without their replacements being announced.

Municipal Affairs Minister Hugh Curtis said Friday new appointments to the trust are "under consideration."

The trust was created in June, 1974, by the former NDP government and Hornby Island resident Hilary Brown, Salt Spring Island resident Marc Holmes and Dave Brousson, former Liberal MLA, were appointed in September.

Holmes said Friday terms of office for the 26 locally elected trustees from 13 islands included in the trust expires Jan. 1 and Curtis has assured them the trust will continue.

Curtis has also gone on record that some restructuring of the trust is necessary, but under the legislation new appointments must be made until the act is amended, said Holmes.

"There's some question," Holmes said, "about what the government proposes to do."

When the trust was created Curtis, then in opposition, took issue with its makeup. He said the board's voting power was weighted in favor of the appointed three trustees, compared to the two local elected trustees.

"The two elected members on each of the larger islands amounts almost to tokenism," he said then, also criticizing one section of the enabling act which permits no appeal to the courts on any of the board's decisions. The section, however, was never proclaimed.

Holmes said by the time trustees set up the mechanics and got around to asking to have the section enacted, the election was called.

Holmes said the three general trustees have been clearing up work and community plans for two islands, Gambier and Bowen, were completed last week.

Undercover Detective Bares All

VANCOUVER (CP) — A city vice squad detective posed as a policeman on the take for months while seeking evidence of suspected prostitution at the Penthouse Cabaret, county court Judge William Trainor was told Friday.

Crown counsel Roy Jaques described the role played by detective Norman Elliott at the trial of the owner-operators of the nightclub on charges of conspiring to live off the avails of prostitution and corrupting public morals.

Jaques told the judge that Elliott "was regarded in the penthouse as an officer taking bribes and taking advantage of the club's hospitality by becoming a habituee there night after night."

Det. Elliott testified that on July 15, 1975, Juan Santana, a club barman he had known for some years, told him the girls were not making any money and pointed out several prostitutes who were in the club.

Russ Chamberlain, lawyer for Celebrity Enterprises Ltd., Joseph Philliponi, Ross Filippone, Domenick Filippone, Jan Stedlac, Minerva Kelly and Rose Filippone objected that the conversation did not further the alleged conspiracy for the crown.

Jaques argued that the barman was "pointing out the wares of the establishment."

Judge Trainor asked how this could be when the barman knew Det. Elliott was a police officer and ostensibly not interested in sampling the club's wares.

The prosecutor explained that the detective was accepted around the club as a policeman gone bad and on the make for payoffs.

Det. Elliott testified he was an almost nightly visitor to the Penthouse from mid-May to December when it closed, on instructions from his superior officer.

He said he was known to almost everyone in the Penthouse as a member of the vice squad — "and that included the principals."

Victoria Eyes Image As Year-Round Resort

Applications from the city of Victoria for a total of $59,250 in provincial recreation grants have been rejected by Recreation Minister Grace McCarthy.

The applications for financing under the Community Recreational Facilities Fund Act were for three tennis courts in Topaz Park ($12,000); the first stage of the Victoria section of the proposed regional bikeway ($10,000); and a new activity New Horizons Group centre for the James Bay ($37,250).

The minister said in a letter to city manager Jim Bramley that all available funds for the 1976-77 fiscal year have been allocated and the city's request cannot be met.

She said a new program will be introduced in 1977, following a year-long study of recreational needs in the province.

It will be "in line with government's desire to exercise financial restraint and fiscal control while responding to the recreational needs of the people of British Columbia."

After considering McCarthy's letter Thursday the city finance committee recommended that the Topaz tennis project be shelved; that the city absorb the bikeway costs (for which Victoria has already approved $14,000 in first-phase capital costs); and that the New Horizons building be financed entirely from the James Bay Neighborhood Improvement Program.

Jailed for Life

NEW DELHI (Reuter) — A court in southern India's Andhra State has sentenced 15 members of the Maoist Naxalite Movement to life imprisonment, the Indian news agency Samachar reported.

Volunteer Firemen Return

HUDSON HOPE (CP) — The 30-man volunteer fire department in this northeastern British Columbia village went back to work late Friday after refusing to answer emergency calls for two days.

The men resigned Thursday to protest the village's decision not to make up wages for firemen laid off from work for injuries suffered while fighting a fire.

The council had refused to pay the difference between a firemen's regular wages and amounts paid by the Workers' Compensation Board if the fireman was unable to work because of an injury received firefighting.

The firemen went back to work after a meeting Friday with Mayor John Crookewit, who promised to take the issue back to the municipal council on Tuesday.

YOUNG GIRL FOUND

KAMLOOPS (CP) — A seven-year-old Vancouver girl was found in good condition Friday morning after being lost overnight in the bush near here dressed only in a bathing suit.

Temperatures dipped to 13 degrees Celsius during the night as more than 100 civilians, 45 armed forces personnel and 10 RCMP members aided by tracking dogs and a helicopter searched for Veronica Woods.

She had been missing since Thursday afternoon when Norman Milne, a B.C. Tel maintenance man, spotted her from a microwave station at about 11 a.m. Friday and called police.

Police said the girl had wandered about five miles from home but was "in pretty good spirits" and did not appear to be frightened.

Bennett Pushes Fitness

VANCOUVER (CP) — Premier Bill Bennett has called on British Columbians to become more physically fit for a happier and healthier life.

In an off-the-cuff speech at a dinner Thursday night honoring British Columbia's Olympic athletes, Bennett said the athletes represented the cream of the provincial crop in physical fitness.

However, he said physical fitness is important to all British Columbians and constitutes "the best means of preventive health care."

Bennett said the provincial department of recreation now is conducting a study on how to improve recreation and athletic programs in the province, with a report to be ready some time in the fall.

He said one of the things he hopes the report will recommend is that recreational programs should be more closely co-ordinated with school with the hope of turning British Columbians to "lifetime sport."

$50M Prison for Surrey

SURREY (CP) — Mayor Ed McKitka said Friday that an institution combining training colleges for RCMP and penitentiary guards with a 120-prisoner correctional facility is in the works for this Fraser Valley municipality.

McKitka said the institution would cost between $50 million and $75 million and its prisoners would be in pre-release programs.

McKitka said the project would pay full property taxes and could get the municipality more housing.

The federal government has promised to phase out the B.C. Penitentiary in New Westminster and relocate prisoners in smaller institutions around B.C.

Fire Risk Low

The forest fire situation in British Columbia remains abnormally low, the B.C. Forest Service said Friday. There have been 772 fires this year, compared with 2,400 for the same period in 1975. The service estimated fire-fighting costs at $2.3 million, compared with $7 million for the same period a year ago.

Hydro to Return

VANCOUVER (CP) — Striking and locked out British Columbia Hydro employees will return to work Tuesday following a final agreement to end the dispute worked out Friday by Ron Bone, B.C. Labor Relations Board vice-chairman.

The 3,500-member Office and Technical Employees Union had earlier voted to accept contract terms proposed by industrial inquiry commissioner Hugh Ladner, but union officers wanted an assurance that the union would be able to renegotiate terms of any rollback ordered by the federal Anti-Inflation Board. The settlement calls for an increase of 15.9 per cent over 22 months.

Beating Death

KELOWNA (CP) — Shirley Ann Baker, 29, died early Thursday from head injuries received from a severe beating, an autopsy report concluded Friday. The woman also had been sexually assaulted, the report said.

Mrs. Baker, formerly of Kitchener, Ont., was found dead Thursday by her 3½-year-old son, in her home in Winfield, near this Okanagan city.

PNE Tops Million

VANCOUVER (CP) — Attendance at the Pacific National Exhibition passed one million Friday, despite a decrease in the day's total from last year. Friday's attendance was 83,204, down more than 16,000 from the same day in 1975, but the 14-day total of more than 1,022,000 is an increase of almost 42,000 over last year.

Booming Increase

VANCOUVER (CP) — Pacific lumber inspection bureau figures showing total waterborne lumber shipment from British Columbia ports to all major lumber markets was 174.6 million board feet for July, 1976, compared with 121.8 million board feet the previous year. Shipments for the first seven months of the year were 1,145.7 million board feet, compared with 893.7 million a year ago.

NOTICE TO BUILDING OWNERS and DEVELOPERS
CONSTRUCTION INSURANCE for the OWNER and CONTRACTOR
Sponsored by the Joint Technical Planning Committee (Government and the Construction Industry)
An all-day discourse on construction insurance by E. L. (GENE) WISEMAN, of Leslie Wright & Rolfe Ltd., and Western Member of the Insurance Sub-Committee of the Canadian Construction Document Committee, on TUESDAY, SEPTEMBER 28, 1976, AT 9 A.M.
at the Newcombe Theatre, B.C. Museum, Exhibit Building, south end.
The seminar is open to all interested Architects, Building Owners, Contractors, Engineers, Developers, Subtrade Contractors, Bankers, Quantity Surveyors, Insurance Agents and Brokers, Mortgage and Finance Companies.
Lunch will be provided at the Empress Hotel.
Tickets for lunch and working papers, etc., $20 per person in advance by contacting the Construction Association of Victoria offices at 388-6471 before September 17, 1976.
The seminar will deal with the current state and the problems of construction insurance, including Property Insurance (All Risk, Builders Risk, Course of Construction or Sub-contractor Installation Floater), Comprehensive General Liability (Third Party), and Liability for Automobile (owned and non-owned), Contractor's Equipment, Marine and Air Conveyance, Errors and Omissions, Bollet and Machinery.
(Bring your own insurance policy and (or) requirements and see the pitfalls and omissions. Working paper examples will be provided.)
The lectures, totalling some 240 minutes, will also discuss definitions, principles of contract, work in existing buildings, responsibilities of agents and owners representatives, and the recent trend of wrap-up coverage to include subcontractors, designers, and construction managers.
All will be similar to seminars given in VANCOUVER, KAMLOOPS, AND PRINCE GEORGE, but with special emphasis given to the subsequently unveiled proposed revisions by the Insurance Sub-committee of the Canadian Construction Document Committee for use in standard contract forms, but yet awaiting final printing and issue.
Ample time will be given for general discussion.
Further inquiries may be made to E. J. Phillips at 388-6471 or S. E. Edgcombe at 387-5790.
